In extraordinary cases, where the taxing master increases or diminishes the "ordinary" charge, he must have special reasons for so doing, but he is not bound to state his special reasons till he formally answers the objections to his taxation.—Re MAHON, [1893] 1 Ch. 507; 62 L. Annotation:—Reid. Re Morgan, [1915] 1 Ch. 182.

2368. Right to carry in objection—After signing of allocatur.—The certificate or allocatur referred to in the earlier part of R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 27 (39), before the signing of which a party may & after the signing of which he may not carry in an objection to the allowance or disallowance by the taxing officer of any items in the bill of costs, is either a final certificate, or else an interim certificate specifically certifying the allowance or disallowance of these particular items.

Consequently, the signing of an interim certificate which merely gives a round sum on account of the items in the bill of costs which are not at that time the subject of objection does not prevent a party from carrying in, or the taxing master from considering, a subsequent objection in respect of items that had been allowed or disallowed without objection before the signing of that certificate.—*HARPER v. The ct. refused to review the taxation of these costs by one of its masters, on the ground that the costs were in no sense given by an award of the ct., & that the master did not tax the costs in his capacity of officer of the ct., but merely as one of a class of persons named in the Act of Parliament.—Re SHEFFIELD WATERWORKS ACT, 1864, COLLIS' CLAIM, WRAITHBY'S CLAIM (1865), L. 2375. ———.]—Pltf., who lived at Florence, recovered judgment in an action. Upon taxation of pltf.'s costs as between party & party the taxing master fixed a certain sum as proper to be allowed in respect of pltf.'s travelling & hotel expenses, etc., but made it a condition of its inclusion in his allocatur that pltf.'s solrs. should produce to him either a voucher acknowledging the receipt by pltf. from his solrs. of the sum or a letter from pltf. intimating that he had knowledge of the amount as allowed. (2) The master, on evidence before him, allowed a few items on the taxation of a solr.'s bill for business, as to which there was a conflict whether the solr. had authority to perform it:—Held: this was not a sufficient reason for permitting a review of the taxation.

(3) On petition for liberty to file exceptions to the master's certificate of taxation, the ct. will sometimes decide the point in dispute without putting the parties to file their exceptions.

2387. Master acting on mistaken principle.—FENTON v. CRICKETT, No. 2415, post.

2388. —.]—The ct. refused to grant a rule to show cause why the master should not review his taxation of an attorney's bill of costs against his client, where he had allowed charges for signing interlocutory judgments, which were afterwards set aside with costs, & for opposing the motions made for that purpose, objecting that the party applying had not shown that the proceedings complained of had been resorted to malâ fide & from motives inconsistent with a fair intention & a due regard to the interests of the client.—LLOYD v. CRUTCHLEY, LLOYD v. POWELL (1824), 13 Price, 211; 147 E. R. 968.

2389. —.]—An agreement entered into by a client with his attorney, to pay him at a certain specified rate for business to be done, is not binding; but the charges made according to such agreement may be allowed on taxation, if the master, on inquiring into them, considers them proper. Where such charges had been allowed on taxation & paid, the ct., on application about four months after, refused to order a review of the taxation, it not being shown that the master had forborne to exercise his judgment on the charges, in consequence of the agreement between attorney & client.—*DRAX v. p. Taxation by local master.—

When an order is obtained by a client referring the taxation of a solr.'s bill to the master in the county where the work was done, any review of the master's conclusions must be obtained by way of appeal to a judge.—Re BLEEKER & HENDERSON (1882), 9 P. R. 182.—CAN.

2390. —.]—The master's decision on questions of taxation is final as to matters of fact & amount of charges, & is only reviewed by the ct. when the master acts upon a mistaken principle; & if the solr. negligently or ignorantly takes some unnecessary proceeding, it is the duty of the master to disallow the charge made in respect of such proceeding.—*ALSOP v. 2391. —.]—A solr. presented a petition, complaining that the master, in taxing his bill, had taken into consideration matters not referred to him, & praying for leave to except to the certificate. It was objected that the solr. ought to have filed exceptions to the certificate, but the ct. overruled the objection.

Under the common order for taxing a solr.'s bill, the master is bound to take a general account of receipts & payments by the solr., as agent to the client.

This was not a case in which particular items were objected to, but the conduct of the master in taxing the bills was quarrelled with (per CUR.).—RUSSEL v. BUCHANAN (1838), 9 Sim. 167; 59 E. R. 322.

After some time, an order was made, by consent of both, for the taxation of the costs down to the date. Some of the costs had, unknown to B., been already taxed & received by A.:—Held: under the circumstances the order comprised all such costs, & the previous costs having been omitted in the master's certificate, the ct., upon a petition, to review the taxation, referred the matter back to the master.—*Re BAKER, GREENWOOD v. 2409. After transcript of record to Court of Appeal.]—(1) This ct. will not entertain an application to review the taxation of costs, after a transcript of the record has gone to the ct. of error.

(2) The ct. will not order a taxation to be reviewed, where the amount alleged to have been improperly allowed is less than 40s.—NEWTON v. BOODLE (1847), 4 C. B. 359; 9 L. T. O. S. 127; 136 E. R. 545.

RICH* (1857), 27 L. J. Ex. 10.

2411. Where retainer revoked.]—Where the taxing master had disallowed certain charges in the bill of the solr. appointed by the assignees, incurred in connection with the bkpcy., & it appeared that before these costs were incurred he had been discharged by the assignees by notice under their hand, the comr. refused to make an order for the master to review his taxation.—*Re HARDING, Ex p. The master having taxed a solr.'s bill, the client presented a petition, stating a rule, that in the taxation of bills there was a distinction in the amount allowed for attendances by solrs., & those by their clerks; that, for a number of attendances which had been made by the solr.'s clerk, the master had allowed the same amount as if they had been made by the solr. himself, & prayed liberty to except to the master's report, & for a retaxation. B. was liable to one-fifth part only of several charges, struck off four-fifths thereof, & certified he had taxed the bill at £4 10s. 6d. The client then obtained an order of course for payment by the solr. of the costs of the taxation; a motion being made, on behalf of the solr., to discharge the latter order for irregularity, on the ground that more than one-sixth had not been struck off within the rule, but no application being made to be relieved from the certificate, which warranted the second order, the motion was, on that ground, refused with costs.—MUSKETT v. HILL (1810), 3 Beav. 301; 49 E. R. 118.

2448. Power of judge to make second order for costs—Original order for taxation not mentioning costs of taxation.—Where an application has been made to a judge by a client, for an order to refer an attorney's bill to be taxed, & the judge omits to engraft thereon any clause respecting the payment of the costs of such taxation—it is not competent to him, or to any other learned judge, to make a second order to that effect. All applications under Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 37, must be entitled in the matter of the attorney; & though the application for the second order be made in the cause; yet the application to set aside that order must be entitled as the sect. directs.—JONES v. JONES (1844), 2 L. T. O. S. 331; 8 J. P. 412.

SUB-SECT. 2.—ASCERTAINMENT OF AMOUNT.

A. In General.

2449. Circumstances considered by court—Particulars of items.—Upon an application that the solr. may be directed to pay the costs of taxation, more than a sixth part having been taken off his bill, the ct. will not enter into the particulars of the items of the bill.—Re HUDSON, Ex p. MILLINGTON (1835), 1 Deac. 114.

2450. ——— Circumstances under which allocatur made.—(1) On a rule nisi why an attorney should not pay the costs of taxation, more than one-sixth part having been taxed off his bill, the ct. will not re-open the master's allocatur unless there is a cross-motion to set it aside.

(2) However small the sum is beyond one-sixth, which is taken off in taxation, the attorney is equally liable.—SWINBURN v. HEWITT (1838), 7 Dowl. 314; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 413; 3 Jur. 10.

2451. ——— Admission of affidavits.—LAURIE v. BARTLETT, No. 2525, post.

2452. Allowance for additions.—A client of an attorney having applied to have the attorney's bill taxed, the master taxed off a certain amount, but deducted from this amount certain additions which he allowed to the bill. After this deduction, the sum taxed off was reduced to less than a sixth of the bill delivered. But, if the sum at first taxed off had been compared with the amount in the bill delivered, even augmented by the additions allowed, the deduction would have been more than one-sixth:—Held: the sum taxed off ought not to have been reduced by the addition allowed; & the costs of the taxation were to be paid by the attorney, under Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 37.

The proper course was to estimate the deductions by themselves, as constituting the sum taxed off, & not to reduce them by the addition made to the bill (per CUR.).—R. v. EASTWOOD (1856), 6 E. & B. 285; 119 E. R. 870; sub nom. Re HARTLEY, 2 Jur. N. S. 448.

2468. ——— Client not liable for part disallowed.]—If, on a taxation of an attorney's bill, as between attorney & client, the master strike off a part of the charges, on the ground that the client is not the person liable for such part, the sum upon which the sixth is to be calculated, under 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 23, is the original bill reduced by the part so disallowed; & the disallowance of such part is not a reduction upon taxation, within that clause.

Costs in a suit were taxed as between party & party, & the residue, after taxation, paid to the attorney of the successful party. The attorney afterwards delivered his bills to his client, under an order of ct. for such delivery, & for a general reference of the bills for taxation. They included, among other matters, the above costs as reduced, for which the attorney gave credit:—Held: he was entitled to insert the reduced, & not the original amount of costs, & on taxation of the bills, the client could not add the sum formerly deducted from these costs to the sum taxed off from the general amount of the bills, in order to make the whole reduction exceed one-sixth of such amount.—MILLS v. REVERT (1834), 1 Ad. & El. 856; 3 Nev. & M. K. B. 767; 110 E. R. 1435.

behalf of a client for review of taxation, & that the costs of taxation might be allowed to the client & disallowed to the solrs. The solrs. had paid themselves £20 out of money of their client in their hands in full discharge of their bill of costs. After this the client changed his solrs. & required a bill of costs, & obtained a common order to tax the costs of his former solrs. The bill was delivered to him, & soon after the solrs. moved the ct. to cancel the order, but the judge refused the motion. The bill delivered amounted to £26 8s. 3d. & was reduced on taxation to £20 16s. 7d., more than one-sixth being taxed off. The taxing master certified that the solrs. were entitled to all the costs of the taxation, on the ground that the sum allowed on taxation was greater than the sum accepted by the solrs. in full discharge:—Held: (1) one-sixth having been taxed off the bill, the solrs. were not entitled to the costs of the taxation; (2) no benefit having resulted from the taxation, no costs of the taxation would be allowed on either side, & no costs of the summons.—Re ELWES & TURNER (1888), 58 L. 2486. — No direction to master as to costs of reference—Reservation of questions as to disputed items.]—A judge's order to tax an attorney's bill, contained a clause reserving to the client the right to dispute his liability, on the ground of want of retainer & of negligence, & directed the master to tax the items disputed on the latter ground separately. It contained no direction to the master to tax the costs of the reference as required by Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 37. The master having taxed off less than a sixth of the whole bill, & having taxed the attorney the costs of the reference:—Held: the client was liable for the costs of the taxation, whatever might be the event of the questions so reserved.—Re SHAW (1851), 2 L. M. & P. 214; 20 L. J. Q. B. 280.

2487. — Right of party to apply subsequently for order for costs.]—Solrs. who had acted for trustees in the administration of a trust estate, & had delivered their bills of costs to the trustees, who desired to have the bills taxed under an order for taxation providing for the payment by the solrs. of the costs of the reference if more than one-sixth of the amount of the bills was taxed off, presented a petition in the names of the trustees for the taxation of the bills indorsed with their, the solrs., consent, & obtained an order of course by consent in the form given in Seton's Judgments & Orders, 6th edit., vol. I., p. 269, which provides that the taxing master is to tax the costs of the reference & certify the amount thereof, & whether more than one-sixth of the amount of the bills has been taxed off, but contains no order for payment by either party of the costs of the reference. The trustees were represented at the taxation by a separate solr., who attended on two occasions, upon which more than one-sixth of the amount of the bills was provisionally disallowed.

The question as to the payment of the costs of the taxation was then raised, & the trustees moved for an order for taxation under Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 37, providing that if the bills when taxed should be less by a sixth part than the bills as delivered, the solrs. should pay the costs of the taxation:—Held: the order for taxation obtained by the solrs. left it open, when the taxing master had taxed & certified, for either party to apply for & obtain an order, that the other party should pay the costs of the taxa-

The ct., by analogy to the rule which 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, lays down, throws upon the solr. the costs of the taxation, where his bill is reduced by more than one-sixth of the amount (WIGRAM, V.-C.). —BARTON v. PYNE (1842), 1 Hare, 493; 66 E. R. 1126.

In his bill of costs as delivered a solr. entered in the disbursements column certain counsel's fees. These fees had been paid by cheques of the client, but the cheques had been returned by counsel to the solr., who had sent them back to the client. In one instance there was a note in the bill that the cheque had been returned by counsel, but in no case was the client credited with the amount in the bill, although in a cash account delivered with the bill the amounts were all credited to the client. The result of the taxation was that a little more than one-sixth of the total amount of the bill was taxed off, & the taxing officer taxed the costs of the reference payable to the client, but specially certified the circumstances & stated that if he had been at liberty to strike out the counsel's fees the effect would have been that less than one-sixth would have been taxed off. The insertion of the fees was by a blunder of the solr. or his clerk. The solr. applied, on the special circumstances certified that the taxing master should be directed to tax the costs of the taxation payable to the solr. instead of to the client, & that the certificate should be varied accordingly:—Held: the costs of the taxation must be borne by the client, but the solr. must pay the costs of the client of the application to the ct. as between solr. & client.—Re RICHARDS, [1912] 1 Ch. 49; 81 L. J. F. acted as the solr. of pltf. as well as of defts., & conducted the proceedings in the suit subsequently to the decree, until the conduct of it was taken from him by pltf., & a new solr. appointed by them. J. F. having delivered up the documents relating to the suit to the new solr., a paper writing was discovered amongst them, purporting to be a copy of a charge which had been carried in by J. F. under the decree, in the joint names of certain persons, of whom J. F. was one, as creditors of testator: the charge thereby made by J. F., for himself amounted to the sum of £57, alleged to be the balance due from testator's estate for business done by J. F. for testator & his son, as partners in business, on testator's retainer, after deducting from the aggregate amount of his several bills of costs the sums received by him from testator on account of such business. On the copy of the charge found amongst the documents so delivered up by J. F. was indorsed a memorandum, in the handwriting of J. F.'s town agent, to the effect that the charge had been allowed, subject to the approval thereof by defts.' solr.: the copy also bore a subsequent indorsement, in the same handwriting, to the effect that the charge had been afterwards absolutely allowed, but no entry to any such effect was to be found in the master's books. The master having referred the bills of costs to be taxed, J. F. withdrew his charge. On application to the ct. by pltf. by petition, the bills of costs of J. F. were ordered to be taxed, & an account was directed to be taken of the moneys received by J. F. on account thereof, & more than one-sixth part of the amount of the bills having been taken off on taxation, J. F. was ordered to pay the costs of petitioners' occasioned by his charge, & also the costs of petitioners' application to the ct. relative to the charge & bills of costs, & consequential thereon.—*ACEY v. 2556. Whether granted—Where objection should have been taken before master.]—Deft. in an action paid within four days the amount of debt & costs indorsed upon the writ under the C. L. P.

Act, 1852 (c. 76), s. 8, but afterwards had the costs taxed. Upon taxation two items, amounting to less than one-sixth of the whole amount, were taxed off. An order was afterwards made by a master of the ct. sitting at chambers for payment of the costs of taxation by deft. Upon the hearing of the summons no objection on the part of deft. was made to the payment of the costs of taxation, on the ground of the nature of the items so charged & taxed off. Deft. having moved to rescind the order:—Held: though there was a discretion in the ct. to allow or disallow the costs of taxation to pltf., the ct. would not now rescind the order on the ground that the items taxed off were such as pltf.'s attorney must have known to be not allowable, no objection having been made before the master on that ground.—CARPENTER v. CALVERT (1868), 17 L. T. 578.

SECT. 7.—MODERATION OF COSTS.

See R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 27 (26).

2557. Moderation distinguished from taxation.]—In 1882 trustees were appointed by a private Act of Parliament, with powers to raise sums not exceeding £350,000 by mtge. of the Aylesford settled estates in fee, for the purpose, among other things, of paying the seventh earl's debts. The seventh earl had created charges upon his life estate to the amount of £192,000 all of which had become vested in the Eagle Insurance co. The trustees borrowed £232,000 from the same co. on mtge. of the fee of the settled estates, of which £192,000 was retained by the co. in discharge of their charges on the life estate, & the remaining £40,000 paid to the trustees. After the seventh earl's death an order was made in an action brought by the eighth earl against the trustees for an account. The account taken in by the trustees included a great number of bills of costs, which they had paid to their own solrs. & to the solrs. of mtgees. in respect of their dealings with the settled estates. Seventeen of these bills were referred by the chief clerk to the taxing master for taxation under R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 27 (26). From three bills, amounting to (a) £413 2s. 6d., (b) £385 3s. 6d., & (c) £343, the taxing master taxed off only (a) £7 2s. 6d., (b) £3 1s., & (c) £6 11s. In the bill (d) relating to the mtge. to the E. Insurance co. for £232,000 the mtgees.' solrs. had charged, & the trustees paid, the scale fee upon the whole sum (£1,255). The taxing master disallowed this, & allowed by way of compromise, instead of the proper charges under Sched. II., the scale fee on £40,000 only, regarding the transaction as a further advance. The trustees took out a summons to review the taxation:—Held: a reference to the taxing master under R. S. C., Ord. 61, r. 27 (26), is for moderation, not taxation, & the fact that the reductions obtained in such a reference were less than the costs of taxation would have been did not show that the trustees were justified in paying the bills (a), (b), & (c) without taxation.—AYLESFORD (EARL) v. POULETT (EARL), [1891] 1 Ch. 248; 63 L. T. 519; 39 W. R. 106; revsd. on other grounds, [1891] 1 Ch. 254, C. A.

The principle of moderating the bill by a deduction from charges, which, upon the face of them, are irregular or excessive, instead of submitting the bill to taxation, is great liberality towards an exor. (per CUR.).—JOHNSON v. TELFORD (1827), 3 Russ. 477; 38 E. R. 654.

Twenty-six years after the death of testator, & ten years after the death of the solr., a decree was made directing the usual accounts of testator's personal estate. The exor. of the solr., in bringing in his accounts under the decree, inserted the bill of costs as one of his items of discharge:—Held: although as between solr. & client the bill was no longer subject to taxation, yet, as against the exor., the persons beneficially interested were entitled to question its amount as an item of discharge, but that an order referring it for taxation was not proper, the right course being to direct the taxing master to state whether any items objected to were fair & proper to be allowed, & to what amount.—ALLEN v. 2561. —.]—The amount of costs allowed by a taxing master as between the client & his solr. is not conclusive of the amount which the ct. will allow out of the estate.

An administration action, which was commenced in May, 1875, came on in Nov. 1887, upon second further consideration. The judge finding that the costs would probably amount to nearly the whole value of the estate, & believing that there had been unreasonable delay in the conduct of the proceedings, directed the taxing master under R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 11, to inquire & report as to the delay & the costs occasioned thereby. The taxing master reported that there had been great delay in the suit caused by the conduct of the solr. for pltf., & disallowed considerable sums from the costs as between the various solrs. & their clients. The judge ordered that only a portion of the costs allowed by the taxing master to the several parties, including the costs of pltf., who was a trustee, should be paid out of the estate; & the Ct. of Appeal affirmed this decision.

It was suggested that pltf.'s costs as taxed ought to be allowed against the estate, & that the taxation should be taken as conclusive on that point. But on being pressed with the consequences of such a rule counsel very fairly admitted that it could not be maintained in all cases. Costs which a trustee may be bound to pay to his own solr.

might be very improper costs as against the trust estate. Suppose a trustee, having little or no interest in the estate, were to allow a solr. to use his name as pltf. in an administration action, & were to encourage or permit him to carry it on in an unusually costly manner, although he might be liable for all such costs to the solr. so employed, it would be impossible to maintain that the ct. would be bound to permit such costs to be paid even out of a trust estate from which the trustee was entitled to the usual indemnity. The rule is thus stated in Lewin on Trusts, 8th ed., p. 636: "A trustee will have no claim to reimbursement out of the trust fund where the legal proceedings were occasioned by his own negligence in the first instance; or were improperly instituted by himself; & a trustee will not be allowed, without question, whatever sums by way of costs he may have paid his solr., for the bill, as between trustee & cestui que trust, though not submitted to a regular taxation, which is between solr. & client, will be moderated by the ct. by a deduction of such charges as may appear irregular & excessive." I think this is an accurate statement of the practice, & that the rule applies to costs occasioned by the improper conduct of a suit (KAY, J.).—BROWN v. BURDETT (1888), 40 Ch. D. 244; 60 L. T. 520; 37 W. R. 533; 5 T. L. R. 88, C. A.

In order that the costs of proposed proceedings should be allowed, it is not necessary that they must be proceedings proposed to be taken at the date when the order is made. The bill of costs in the present case must be referred to a taxing master for moderation, & I will make the order in respect of the amount to be so ascertained (SARGANT, J.).—Re WILKIE'S SETTLEMENT, WADE v. 2574. Demand for interest.]—Re BENTWICH, WATKIN, WILLIAMS & CO. (1899), 44 Sol. Jo. 60, C. A.

2575. — Sufficiency—Letter inclosing account.]—Notwithstanding the definition of the word "client" in Attorneys & Solicitors Act, 1870 (c. 28), s. 3, that Act does not apply to accounts between country solrs. & their town agents. The Act is not retrospective, & therefore interest cannot be allowed under sect. 17 on disbursements made prior to the passing of the Act.

In May, 1872, a country solr. commenced a suit against his London agent, claiming an account & taxation of the bills of costs between them. Deft. filed his answer in Oct. 1872, & thereby alleged a large balance due to him & claimed interest thereon. He had also, in 1869, furnished pltf. with an account which contained items for interest. In 1875 a copy of the account was inclosed in a letter which referred to the account, but made no formal demand of payment, & which was signed by a firm of solrs. as his agents:—Held: neither the answer nor the letter inclosing the account was a sufficient demand in writing or notice within Civil Procedure Act, 1833 (c. 42), s. 28.

Attorneys & Solicitors Act, 1870 (c. 28), which says that interest may be allowed on disbursements . . . seems to me to deal entirely with cases arising between solrs. & their clients, & not those between country solrs. & their London agents. I think the relation between these parties was not the common relation of a solr. to an ordinary client, but the relation of a London agent & a country solr. (JAMES, L.J.).—WARD v. 2576. — Delivery of bill.]—By General Order VII. under Solicitors Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), s. 5 . . . the interest which a solr. is entitled to recover under the Order on the amount due on business transacted by him is not to commence till the amount due is ascertained, either by agreement or taxation—& it is provided that a solr. may charge interest at 4 per cent. per annum on his disbursements & costs, whether by scale or otherwise, from the expiration of one month from demand from the client.

A solr. delivered his bill to a client without claiming interest. The bill was taxed, & the client paid the amount allowed on taxation. On such amount being paid the solr. claimed interest thereon at 4 per cent. from one month from the date of the delivery of the bill:—Held: the solr. was entitled to such interest.

2602. Interest on amount taxed off bill—Amount deducted to be refunded.]—If, after payment, a solr.'s bill be referred for taxation, & more than one-sixth is taxed off, interest will not be allowed on the sum so taxed off, & to be refunded by the solr.—Re WATTS (1845), 5 L. T. O. S. 474.

SECT. 9.—SECURITY FOR COSTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See Attorneys & Solicitors Act, 1870 (c. 28), s. 16; Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), s. 5; Remuneration Order, 1882, clause 7.

2604. Security for costs already due—General rule.]—C. for many years employed D. as his attorney, & in the course of those years became largely indebted to D. for business done & money lent. From time to time D. delivered accounts to C., but received no payments of any considerable amount from his client. C. afterwards employed other attorneys. Ultimately, C. being threatened with an execution by a judgment creditor, applied to D. for his assistance, who procured the money for him by way of mtge., but stipulated that the mtge. should stand as a security for his own debt, as well as the judgment debt. C. having assented to this arrangement, executed the mtge. deed, & also a deed of trust of even date, which was prepared jointly by D. & the attorneys of C., by which it was agreed that the mtge. should stand as a security for the amount of D.'s debt, to be settled by arbn., & that in such settlement no prejudice should arise to D. by reason of the lapse of time:—Held: this transaction did not amount to the receiving of a gratuity by an attorney from his client, & consequently, in the absence of any fraud, was sustainable in a ct. of equity.

PART VI. SECT. 9, SUB-SECT. 1.

2604 i. Security for costs already due—General rule.]—A solicitor may take security from a client for costs incurred though the relationship between them has not been terminated & the costs not taxed but the amount charged against the client must be made up of nothing but a reasonable remuneration for services & necessary disbursements.

A security which has been given to an attorney by his client for a debt really due, or as a reward for services already rendered, will not be set aside in equity.—CHESLYN v. DALBY (1836), 2 Y. & C. Ex. 170; 160 E. R. 357; subsequent proceedings (1840), 4 Y. & C. Ex. 238.

2605. ———.]—S. having paid off a debt secured by mtge. upon real estates, in the equity of redemption of which his wife was, at the date of their marriage, entitled to a life interest to her separate use, afterwards, without her privity, assigned the mtge. to the solr. of himself & wife as security for a debt due to such a solr. for costs principally incurred in a suit in which he acted, first for the wife before her marriage & afterwards for both the husband & wife.

The solr., having subsequently purchased from the original mtgee. for £40 a debt, for costs, of £175, which the latter would have been entitled to have added to his mtge. debt, was held entitled, as against the wife to the benefit of such purchase, but to the extent only of securing himself in respect of the debt due to him from the husband.—NELSON v. BOOTH (1857), 27 L. J. Ch. 110; 3 Jur. N. S. 951; 5 W. R. 722; subsequent proceedings (1858), 3 De G. & J. 119, L. JJ.

2606. — Assignment of land.]—After verdict, but before judgment, W., a pltf. in ejectment, on July 11, assigned a field of potatoes, with the crop growing on it, which he held under a lease, the subject-matter of the action, to his attorney in the action, as a security for money advanced by the attorney, & for the amount due for costs already incurred in the action. One of defts., a sheriff's officer, on July 17, seized the crop of potatoes, under a fi. fa. against W. On the same day, but afterwards, possession was delivered by another sheriff's officer of the field in question, under a habere facias possessionem, to W., who immediately transferred the possession to an agent attending for the attorney. On July 30 the first sheriff's officer sold the potatoes, by auction, as a separate lot, after notice given him of pltf.'s title, to J., who, after taking an assignment of the lease from the sheriff entered & took the potatoes:—Held: the assignment to the attorney was not void by reason of the statutes against maintenance & champerty, or as being against public policy, since it was not an absolute sale of the subject-matter of the ejectment, but only a security for past advances: & an action quare clausum fregit lay for the attorney against the sheriff & his officers as his title related back to the time when it accrued.—*RADCLIFFE v. 2607. — Deposit of policy—Subsequent assignment of policy to secure advances—Whether policy secures costs & advances.]—A solr. took a deposit of a policy from his client, under a parol agreement that it was to secure his then existing costs. Afterwards he made advances & took an assignment of the policy to secure them; the deed saying nothing about the costs:—Held: the deed expressing no

2624. Mortgage to secure present & future advances—Costs incurred after notice of subsequent incumbrance.—(1) An attorney held an assignment of two terms to attend the inheritance of an estate recovered by him for his client. On a rule being made to tax his costs, it was part of the rule that the master should decide whether, & if so, upon what terms, the attorney should execute to his client assignments of these terms. The master having made his allocatur, directed that the attorney should, on payment of what was due, or on security for the same being given to his, the master's, satisfaction, execute assignments of these terms at the cost of the client:—Held: this did not constitute a charge on the estate so as to give the attorney a priority from the date of the allocatur; for the master had no power to direct that these terms should stand as a security for the amount of the costs.

(2) An indenture was executed by N. to R., at that time N.'s attorney, to secure what was then due to R., & also future advances. This indenture was made a first charge on N.'s property. S., who had previously been N.'s attorney obtained against N. a rule absolute for payment of costs found due on the master's allocatur; he registered this rule, & thus became a second incumbrancer. R. then became largely N.'s creditor for costs subsequently incurred:—Held: on an order allowing S. to redeem R., these subsequent costs could not be taken into the account.—*SHAW v. Bankruptcy of client—Application by assignee to set aside mortgage—& for taxation—Waiver of objection to taxation.]—Property was mortgaged by a client to his solr. as security for costs incurred & to be incurred. The client became bkpt., & his assignee applied by summons to set aside the mtge. & to have all the bills taxed. The judge refused the application, on the ground that a solr. might arrange with his client to accept a stated sum for costs, & so avoid the expense of taxation: but a letter being produced, which was read as a waiver of any objection to a taxation:—Held: that order must be discharged, & general taxation directed. Seem: but for the waiver, there would have been no right in the client to procure taxation, except upon a bill filed.—Re THOMPSON (1866), 14 L. 2627. Mortgage by husband to secure costs in divorce suit—Whether determined by order for variation of marriage settlement.]—Although the ct., in directing a variation of settlements after a decree dissolving a marriage, has power under Matrimonial Causes Act, 1859 (c. 61), s. 5, to make an order affecting the interests of third parties created before the date of the petition for variation of the settlements, the interests of mtgees. created before that date will, as a general rule, be respected.

An ante nuptial settlement of a sum of £40,000, gave the husband a first life interest in £15,000, & a second life interest in the remainder of the fund. All the settled property was derived from the wife, the husband having no property of his own, except a military pension of £120 per annum. There was no issue of the marriage. The wife obtained a decree nisi for a dissolution of her marriage on the ground of her husband's adultery & cruelty. Shortly before the decree nisi was pronounced, resp., who had previously borrowed £4,200 upon the security of his life interest under the settlement & of certain policies of insurance upon his own life, executed a further mtge. of his life interest in favour of his solrs., to secure their costs in the divorce suit. After the decree nisi had been made absolute, petitioner presented a petition for variation of the settlement. The ct., although it had ordered that resp.'s interest in the settled property should be extinguished, refused to make an order, declaring that the interest of resp.'s solrs. under the second mtge. was thereby determined.—*WIGNEY v. 2628. Foreclosure of mortgage—Cross-action alleging negligence.]—A solr. files his bill for foreclosure of an estate pledged as a security for costs. 2629. — Order for taxation obtained against solicitor—No bill of costs delivered—Effect of Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73).]—(1) Where a solr. has taken a mtge. from his client to secure the payment of costs, he is entitled to maintain a bill for foreclosure, though an order for taxation has been obtained against him at the Rolls, & no bill of costs delivered. Above Act is no bar to such a suit.

(2) An offer to pay made by deft. six months before the filing of the bill, which is not repeated in the answer, does not disentitle plff. to his costs of the suit.

(3) Independently of the want of legal service of the order, above Act, s. 37, which applies to the ordinary contract between solr. & client, has no application to the prohibition of a suit brought to enforce a special contract deliberately entered into between the parties.—*THOMAS v. without the delivery of full & particular bills of costs. But in either of these cases, unless the solr. takes the precaution to preserve evidence to show that the settlement was a just one, the ct. will not allow the transaction to stand.

A client executed & gave a mortgage to his solr. to secure the payment of the sum of £2,500. The deed recited that the former was indebted to the latter in a large sum, both for professional services & for money advanced on account, the amount of which was not at that time precisely ascertained, or immediately ascertainable, but which was computed, & was agreed to be taken, at the above sum, as the parties thereto thereby admitted. In consideration of the sums mentioned in the deed, & also of the sum of £2,500 expressed to be justly due & owing from the client to the solr., certain estates of the former were conveyed to the latter, but subject to a proviso for redemption. In the transactions the sole professional adviser of the client, who was a sufferer from disease, & lived in very close retirement, was the solr., & it was not shown that any third person was called in upon the occasion. The exors., after the client's death, filed a bill, praying for a declaration that the deed ought to stand as a security for such amount as could be shown & proved to be justly due, & that the solr. might be ordered to make out & deliver proper bills of costs. By his answer the solr. set forth accounts of receipts & payments made by him, but showed no balance due to him on the cash account; & he submitted that from lapse of time he could not set forth full & accurate bills of costs, & that, by the terms of the deed, he was not lawfully bound to set forth any:—Held: (1) as the relation of solr. & client was subsisting between the parties, that relation constituted an imperfection in the ability of the client to consent to the transaction; (2) as there were no circumstances occurring in the case to remove the pressure arising from the existence of that relation, plffs. were entitled to the relief prayed.—MORGAN v. HIGGINS (1859), 1 Giff. 270; 32 L. T. O. S. 290; 5 Jur. N. S. 236; 7 W. R. 273; 65 E. R. 915.

2634. —.]—A mtge. of freehold hereditaments was made by pltf. to deft., his solr., to secure two sums of money & interest. Of these, the larger sum was made up of several items, an account of which was stated & shown to deft. at the execution of the deed. One of the items was for professional charges, as to which no bill of costs was tendered to pltf. As to another item, an erroneous statement as to the payment of the sum therein expressed was made by deft. on the pleadings, & afterwards corrected by him. It was admitted that, as to these two items, the deed could stand as a security for such an amount only as should be found to be justly due to deft. Two other items were in respect of sums, secured by two promissory notes in favour of deft., signed by pltf., on two former occasions, with interest. It was proved that on the occasion when the first of these two notes was signed, a memorandum was also signed by pltf., to the effect "that an account had been that day settled of all the notes of hand held by deft. of pltf., & a balance was found to be due." It was not, however, recited or proved in evidence that any statement of accounts had been drawn up between pltf. & deft. At the time of signing the second note, it was alleged by deft. that pltf. having again become indebted, a fresh settlement of accounts was come to, but it was not shown that any statement of accounts was made:—Held: the notes could not be held to be prima facie evidence that the sums mentioned in them were due: & as to these two items as well as the former there must be an inquiry of what was justly due, & a declaration that the deed could stand as a security for such amount only; with costs up to the hearing to be paid by deft.—DAVIES v. PARRY (1859), 1 Giff. 174; 33 L. T. O. S. 197; 5 Jur. N. S. 758; 65 E. R. 874.

2635. Effect of laches & acquiescence.—A client executed a mtge. to his solr. for a specified sum, being the amount at which past costs in a suit had been estimated, without the bills having been delivered, the solr. undertaking to deliver the bills by a certain time, which he did. Four years afterwards the client changed his solr. & obtained an order for taxation of subsequent costs, but declined the offer of the solr. to have the costs secured by the mtge. included in the taxation, & obtained the order without prejudice to any question as to those costs. Two years afterwards the client filed a bill against the solr., to have the latter costs investigated & the account between the parties re-opened, but did not allege any specific overcharge or error:—Held: the suit was precluded by length of time & acquiescence.—BLAGRAVE v. ROUTH (1856), 8 De G. M. & G. 620; 26 L. J. Ch. 86; 28 L. T. O. S. 111; 3 Jur. N. S. 399; 5 W. R. 95; 44 E. R. 529, L. JJ.

There was a power of sale, which was not to be exercised until the expiration of the twenty years, or until two months' default should have been made in the payment of interest.

Upon a bill to redeem being filed, within four years after the date of the deed, redemption was decreed; it being held, as between solr. & client, that where the former takes a security from the latter, the ct. will not allow the solr. to enforce a stipulation of an unusual kind, & disadvantageous to the client.—COWDRY v. (2) The proper construction of the language of Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), s. 2, is that it refers to conveyancing matters which take place in an action as well as to those out of ct., & that the exception is only from "other business" not being conveyancing business; & accordingly where the taxing master had disallowed certain charges made for conveyancing business in an action, & under the scales of charges contained in the schedules to the General Order of August, 1882, he was directed to review his taxation.—STANFORD v. ROBERTS (1884), 26 Ch. D. 155; 53 L. J. Ch. 338; 50 L. T. 147; 48 J. P. 692; 32 W. R. 404.

SUB-SECT. 2.—REMUNERATION ORDERS AND SCHEDULES.

A. Scope of Schedules.

See Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), s. 7; Remuneration Orders, 1882, 1919, 1925, Schedules I. & II.

2663. What covered by Schedule I.—Grant of easement.]—The General Order under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), is, by virtue of sect. 7 of the Act, applicable to business completed before the Order came into operation. The expression "undertaking any business" in rule 6 of the Order, means not merely accepting the retainer, but rather entering upon the work, that is, doing something for which the solr. is entitled to make a charge, whether such charge is or is not covered by the scale fee under the Order. Solrs. were employed by a corp. in purchases of property for a waterworks scheme effected under statutory powers. The employment commenced before, & continued after, the date when the General Order under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), came into operation. After that date the solrs. gave the corp. notice, under rule 6 of the Order, that they elected to charge for the business done after the commencement of the Act according to the old system as altered by Sched. II. to the Order. The solrs. delivered bills of costs relating (a) to business completed before the Order came into operation; (b) to business pending when the Order came into operation in which work was done after the Order came into operation & before the notice of election was given, & (c) to business so pending in which no work was done after the Order came into operation until after the notice of election was given:—Held: (1) as to the completed business the Order applied, & the taxation must be according to the scale in Sched. I.; (2) as to the pending business in which work was done before notice of election, whether or not of a kind covered by the scale fee, the notice was ineffectual, & the taxation must therefore be according to the scale; (3) as to any separate matters of conveyancing in which no work was done until after the notice of election, the notice, according to the decision in Re Love, Hill v. Spurgeon, No. 2698, post, was effectual, & the taxation must therefore be according to the old system as altered by Sched. II.; (4) Qu.: whether where work is done by solrs. under one & the same retainer it is competent for them, by delivering separate bills of costs for various branches of the work, to exclude the operation of the Order as to some of such bills; (5) the exception contained in rule 11 of Sched. I., Part I. of the General Order, whereby in the case of sales under Lands Clauses Act, 1845 (c. 18), the scale is rendered inapplicable, extends only to vendors' costs & not to the costs of the purchasers.

(6) Grants by way of sale of rights & easements of laying & maintaining pipes in land are not "conveyances of property" within Sched. I. Part I., & consequently the scale is not applicable to solrs.' charges in respect of such grants.—Re STEWART (1889), 41 Ch. D. 494; 60 L. T. 737; 37 W. R. 484; 5 T. L. R. 368.

2668. — Abortive negotiations.]—The remuneration of a lessor's solr. prescribed in the General Order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), Sched. I., Part 2, does not cover negotiations carried on by the solr. as to the letting of the property with persons other than the person to whom the lease is ultimately granted. The solr. is entitled to remuneration for such negotiations as business "which is not in fact completed" under Rule 2 (c) of the same General Order.—Re MARTIN (1889), 41 Ch. D. 381; 58 L. J. I. to the General Order under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), claimed to be entitled to a scale charge in respect of the price & to a further scale charge in respect of the rent:—Held: the transaction though carried out by an underlease was in fact a sale, & the solrs. were not entitled to a charge in respect of the rent; but qu. whether this was not business not provided for by Sched. an order to tax the costs awarded to the owner of lands compulsorily taken by a co., his solr. is not entitled to 1s. per folio for penning deeds referred to in the abstract of title furnished. The General Order made in pursuance of Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, Sched. II., does not apply to such taxation.—Re BANN NAVIGATION ACT,

The solr. usually charges for drawing the conditions of sale, though they are really drawn by counsel, & he is thereby remunerated for the trouble of answering counsel's queries.

2677. What are "other documents"—Conditions of sale.—In an administration action, to which mtgees. of leaseholds were not parties, plffs. obtained an order to sell the leaseholds, & that the money should be paid into ct. The order was made without the knowledge of the mtgees. Plffs. wrote to the mtgees. sending draft particulars & conditions of sale as settled by the conveyancing counsel to the ct. "for your perusal." The mtgees. undertook to concur in the sale on condition that their mtge. debt & costs & expenses were provided for out of the proceeds of sale in ct., & they returned the conditions approved. The taxing master disallowed the fees charged at the rate of 1s. a folio for perusing the conditions of sale, but allowed a fee of one guinea for reading them. One of the grounds of disallowance was that conditions of sale were not such documents as were intended by the word "documents" in Sched. II. of the General Order made in pursuance of Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44). On summons to vary the taxing master's certificate:—Held: while not deciding that conditions of sale did not come within the word "documents," this was an extraordinary case where the taxing master had a discretion.—*Re REES, REES v. C. Election as to Remuneration.

(a) In General.

See Solicitors' Remuneration Act (c. 44), ss. 1-7; Remuneration Orders, 1882, 1920.

2684. When right to election exists—Reinvestment of proceeds of compulsory purchase.—Where money is paid into ct. under statutes incorporating Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 19), s. 80, the solr. for the vendor may entitle himself to detailed charges, provided that he signifies his election "before undertaking the business."

A sum of money was paid into ct. by the Metropolitan Board of Works for lands belonging to the governors of a certain hospital. The hospital proposed to purchase certain ground rents out of the fund in ct., & instructed their solr. accordingly. The solr. wrote saying that he elected that his remuneration for all business connected with the purchase should be in accordance with the system in force previously to the coming into operation of Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), as altered by Schedule II. of the General Order made under that Act, & he requested the clerk of the hospital to inform the solr. of the board of his intention. The solr. of the board replied by saying that they required that the remuneration should be according to Schedule I. to the General Order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44). The ct. approved of the proposed investment, & made an order that the board should pay to the governors of the hospital their costs, including all reasonable charges & expenses incident thereto of the reinvestment of the amount payable under the agreement for purchase & of obtaining the order, & all proceedings relating thereto, such costs, charges, & expenses to be taxed in case the parties differed. On delivering the bill the solr. had charged in detail for the conveyancing business. The taxing master upon taxation decided that the election made by the solr. was binding on the board, & allowed the detailed charges. The board carried in objections, which the taxing master overruled. The board then took out a summons to review the taxation, & raised the question, Whether upon a reinvestment in land of purchase-money paid into ct. by promoters under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 19), the solr. for the landowners obtaining the reinvestment could, as against the promoters, elect to be paid otherwise than according to the scale in Schedule I., Part I., of the General Order made pursuant to Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44):—Held: there was no ground for introducing any exception into rule 6 of the kind 2685. — Client being public body.—The right of a solr. under r. 6 of the General Order under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), to elect to charge according to the old system as altered by Sched. II. to the order, instead of by scale, is not taken away by the fact that his clients are a public body or persons in a fiduciary capacity; nor is it the duty of public bodies or persons in a fiduciary capacity to prevent their solrs. from so electing.

A school board instructed a solr. to act for them in the matter of a purchase of a school site for £350. The solr. duly signified to the board his election under r. 6 of the General Order to charge on the old system as altered by Schedule II. The board consented. The matter was completed, & the solr. sent in a bill for £50 2s. On taxation the taxing master reduced the bill to £13, the amount of the scale charge & disbursements, & stated in answer to objections that the school board, being a public body charged with the administration of public funds, were in a fiduciary position, & it was their duty not to employ a solr. who insisted on the more expensive mode of payment:—Held: no such duty was cast on a public body or persons in a fiduciary position, & the bill must be referred back to be taxed according to the solr.'s election.—Re EVANS, [1905] 1 Ch. 290; 74 L. Whether notice effectual after rules come into operation—In respect of pending business.—Negotiations for a lease were carried on through the lessor's solr. for two years before the rules under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), came into operation. After they came into operation terms were come to, & a lease executed. The solr. in his bill charged for the negotiations, & also charged the amount fixed by Sched. I., Part II., to the rules, as remuneration "for preparing, settling, & completing lease & counterpart." The taxing master disallowed all the items for negotiations, & the judge affirmed his decision. The solr. appealed:—Held: (1) though the business had been commenced before the rules came into operation, the taxation must be conducted according to the rules, the solr. not having declared his election to the contrary. Qu.: whether he might on the rules coming into operation have effectually declared such election; (2) having regard to rule 2, the amount fixed by Sched. 2696. "Before undertaking any business."—Re BRIDEWELL HOSPITAL & METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS, No. 2684, ante.

2697. —.]—The notice of election under rule 6 of the General Order to Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), must be given by the solr. before he undertakes any business at all in the particular matter for his client. After having done any work in the matter for which he could charge his client if the scale under the Order did not apply, it is too late for him to elect. A solr. who acted for a mtgee. in relation to the mtged. property received from the solrs. of the persons entitled to the equity of redemption a request that the mtgee. would sell under his power of sale, & in pursuance of this he, without any express authority from his client, did work in relation to the contract for sale for which if authorised he would, apart from the rules, under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), have been entitled to be paid, & which would be covered by the scale fee. The sale was completed:—Held: (1) a notice of election to be remunerated according to the old system, which was given by the solr. after work of the above description had been done, was too late, although given before the contract was signed, for as the client had ratified his proceedings he stood in the same position as if he had received previous authority, & must be treated as having undertaken the business as soon as he did any work of the above description.

(2) The taxing master having taxed according to the scale, an objection was taken, solely grounded on the notice to elect:—Held: the ct. could not enter upon the question whether there had been an agreement between the mtgee. & his solr. that the latter should be remunerated according to the old system. Qu.: whether, if the right to elect was gone, any such agreement would bind the parties entitled to the equity of redemption.—*HESTER v. The evidence required was furnished. Some delay took place in consequence of the necessity of P. being admitted, & obtaining a licence to demise. On Oct. 16 P.'s solrs. were informed by the steward of the manor that P. could be admitted, & that licence to demise would be given. On Oct. 19 P.'s solrs. gave him written notice of their election to be remunerated according to the old system as modified by Schedule II. to the rules under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44). In the books of the solrs. was an entry under that date, "instructions for drawing new leases," but there was no evidence as to the circumstances under which it was made. On Oct. 21 P.'s solrs. sent to appct. draft leases. The leases were granted, & the lessees, who were bound to pay the costs of the lessors' solrs., insisted that the remuneration must be according to the scale in Schedule I.:—Held: (1) the election on Oct. 19 where, under a lease containing a power of renewal, the assigns are liable to pay the costs of a new lease, the only person to whom any notice of election under rule 6 need be given by the lessor's solr. is the lessor himself: the assigns not being "clients" of the solicitor within sect. 1 (3) of Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), so as to make any notice to them necessary.—Re ALLEN (1886), 34 Ch. SUB-SECT. 3.—PURCHASES AND SALES.

A. Vendor's Solicitor.

2707. Scale fee only chargeable if whole work done by solicitor—Commission paid to surveyor.]—An agreement for sale of certain leasehold property was entered into, whereby the purchasers, who were a public body, agreed to pay the vendor's solrs. preliminary costs, & also the costs of title & conveyance, & the fees of the vendor's surveyor.

A surveyor was employed, who, according to the vendor's solrs.' statement, merely valued the property, though it was alleged by the purchasers that he also negotiated the price. The purchasers who had become owners of the reversion, did not require any abstract or copy of the vendor's lease to be furnished to them on being informed by the vendor's solrs. that the title consisted of the lease only. The purchase was completed, & the purchasers paid the fee of the vendor's surveyor. The vendor's solrs. sent in a bill of costs to the purchasers consisting of two items only, the first being the charge allowed by the scale in Sched. I, Part I, of the General Order to Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), for negotiating a sale by private contract, & the second being the charge allowed by the same Sched. for deducing title to leasehold property & perusing & completing conveyance. Upon taxation the taxing master held that the vendor's solrs. were not entitled to costs calculated upon the scale in Sched. I, Part I, but to costs calculated under Sched. 2 only:—Held: upon summons to review taxation, the solrs. were not entitled to the scale charge for negotiating a sale by private contract, as the surveyor's fee was a commission to "an auctioneer or estate or other agent" within Sched. I, Part I, rule 11, of the General Order, & they were not entitled to the scale charge for deducing title & perusing & completing conveyance, as no title was deduced.—Re HARRIS, POWELL & GOODALE (1887), 56 L. T. 477.

2708. ———.]—S. employed H. as general agent with a view to developing an estate as a building property, on the terms of his having a commission of 2½ per cent. on the purchase-money of all lands sold during his agency, & on the capitalised value of the rents of all leases granted during the same period. An offer was made for purchase at a time when H. was too ill to attend at his office, & the negotiation was conducted by W., the solr. of S., but H. was consulted repeatedly & gave advice as to the sale which was ultimately completed. On completion H. was paid 2½ per cent. on the purchase-money. W., in his bill of costs, claimed the scale fee for negotiating the sale, which claim was resisted on the ground that the vendor had paid a commission to an estate agent. The taxing master allowed the scale fee, being of opinion that as the commission paid to H. was not a payment in respect of this particular transaction but for general services, & would have been paid all the same if he had not intervened at all in the sale, it was not a commission within the meaning of Solicitor's Remuneration Order, Sched. I, Part I, r. 11:—Held: if H. had not been called in at all in this transaction, the payment of the commission, which would in that case have been a payment entirely in respect of other work, would not have been a payment of commission within the rule, but as H. had assisted in the negotiation, he was paid for his assistance by the commission, although the commission also covered other work; a commission, therefore, had been paid within the meaning of the rule, & the scale fee for negotiation ought not to be allowed.—Re WITTHALL, [1891] 3 Ch. 8; 61 L. The property was conveyed direct from the original vendor to X., L. joining in the conveyance. The abstract was sent to R., who copied it & forwarded it to the solrs. of X.; on receiving the requisitions he copied them & sent them to the original vendor's solrs., & a similar operation took place with reference to observations & further requisitions on title:—Held: (1) even if R. was employed to negotiate at all, he had not in substance entirely negotiated either the purchase or the resale, & moreover, that commissions on both the purchase & resale had been paid to agents within rule 11 of Sched. I, Part I, to the Order under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), & therefore the scale fee for negotiating a purchase or sale was not chargeable; (2) the scale fees (a) for investigating the title & preparing & completing the conveyance on the purchase, & (b) deducing the title & perusing the

The sale was confirmed by an order made in the liquidation, & the parties to the conveyance were the co., the official liquidator, the original owners, & certain intermediate purchasers who had claims for unpaid purchase-money. The solrs. on taxation included in their bill of costs scale charges as upon a sale for £24,900 as follows: Negotiating, £102 5s.; deducing title & completing, including contract, £107 5s. The taxing master disallowed the negotiating fee, & only allowed the scale charge upon the £1,750. On summons to review taxation:—Held: the ct. could look not only at the contract but at the substance of the transaction, & having regard to the whole of the matters with reference to the provisional contract coupled with the order, the liquidator's name was only used for the purpose of convenience, & the taxing master's decision was right.—Re GREY'S BREWERY Co. (1887), 56 L. 2714. ——— Sale & sub-sale.—(1) Purchasers of land for £2,550 employed a solr. to act for them. The solr. perused the contract on their behalf, received from the purchasers an abstract of title, & duly investigated the same. After the title had been investigated the purchasers sold part of the land to a sub-purchaser for £1,800, & the solr., at their request, prepared the contract with the sub-purchaser, & delivered to his solr. an abstract of title, consisting of the abstract furnished by the vendors, together with a statement of the equitable title of the purchasers. The transaction was carried out by two conveyances—one by the vendors by the direction of the purchasers of part of the land to the sub-purchaser in consideration of £1,800, & the other by the vendors direct to the purchasers of the rest of the land in consideration of £750. The solr. delivered two bills of costs, charging in one a scale fee under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), on a purchase by his clients for £2,550, & in the other a scale fee on a sale by his clients for £1,800. On taxation a scale fee was allowed only in respect of a contract for £750. On summons to review the taxation:—Held: the conveyance to the sub-purchaser was substantially a conveyance by the vendors to the purchasers, that the solr. had done all that was necessary for the completion of a conveyance under the original contract for £2,550, & that he was entitled to two scale fees—one on a purchase by his clients for £2,550, & the other on a sale by his clients for £1,800.

(2) One of the bills of costs included, amongst “disbursements,” an item of 10s. for law stationer’s charges for the preparation of a plan indorsed on one of the deeds. The plan was a copy of one already in existence, & the preparation of it did not require the skilled labour of a surveyor:—Held: this charge was covered by the scale fee, & was rightly disallowed on taxation.—Re READ, [1894] 3 Ch. 238; 63 L. Div. negotiated a sale thereof, & prepared, & procured the due signature of, a contract of sale & purchase conditional upon the sanction of the ct. being given to it. In the course of the negotiation & for the purpose of obtaining evidence to induce the ct. to sanction the sale, he procured the opinions of two valuers, to whom fees were paid for reporting as to the value of the property, but who took no further part in the negotiation. The contract was sanctioned by the ct. without alteration:—Held: the solr. had negotiated the sale within the meaning of rule 11 in Sched. 2720. ———.—Number of folios to be contained in abstract.]—In taxation, abstracts are ordinarily passed if they contain eight folios on an average; but the strict rule is that they should contain ten folios.

Taxation of a paid bill, sought on the ground of overcharge in abstracts containing less than ten folios refused, the practice being in uncertainty, & there being no pressure or surprise.—Re WALSH (1850), 12 Beav. 490; 50 E. R. 1148.

2721. Scale fee not chargeable unless whole work done by solicitor—Abstract not required.]—A tenant having an option of purchase of the fee at a given price on the terms of his paying all the vendor’s costs gave notice in Dec. 1882 of his exercise of the option, & stated that he should not require an abstract of title. The time for completion was Mar. 25, 1883, but it was arranged for the tenant’s convenience that the completion should be six weeks earlier & that the property should be conveyed in two lots. He sent his draft conveyances for perusal before the end of Dec. On Feb. 2, 1883, the vendor’s solrs. sent in their bill of costs in which they charged 30s. per cent. on the purchase-money of each lot considering that this was the proper charge under Schedule I. to the general rules under the Solicitors’ Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), which provides that amount of remuneration to a vendor’s solr. “for deducing title to freehold copyhold or leasehold property & perusing & completing conveyance, including preparation of contract or conditions of sale, if any.” The purchaser’s solrs. objected to these charges but the vendor’s solrs. refused to allow completion unless they were paid, & on Feb. 14 the purchaser paid them under protest & completed the purchase. After this he applied for taxation of the bill:—Held: (1) the case was governed by the new Rules, but the bill was framed on an erroneous footing, for the ad valorem remuneration authorised by Schedule I. was chargeable only where the whole of the business in respect of which it was imposed, viz.: the deducing title & perusing & completing conveyance was done; here as there was no deducing of title, but only perusal & completion of the conveyances, Sched. I. did not apply, but under the General Order, rule 2 (c), the solr.’s remuneration was to be regulated by the old system as modified by Sched. II.; (2) having regard to the dates there was no pressure, & there was no overcharge amounting to fraud, & there were therefore no special circumstances to authorise taxation after payment.—Re LACEY & SON (1883), 25 Ch. election by the solrs. to charge according to Sched. II. of the Order, but they were entitled to charge for preparation of the contract in addition to the scale charge, because the scale assumes the contract to be prepared by the vendor's solr., & they were entitled to 1 per cent. for negotiating the purchase as well as to the 1½ per cent. for completion.

Costs of investigating title, etc.—Purchase under direction of court.—Money arising from the sale of land belonging to a corpn., & taken by a railway co. under their statutory powers, was reinvested in land under the direction of the ct. The solr. of the corpn. charged the ad valorem scale fee prescribed by the rules under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), Sched. I., Part I. "for investigating title & preparing the completing conveyance":—Held: (1) the exception in Sched. I., Part I., rule 11, which provides that the scale shall not apply in case of sales under the Lands Clauses Act, or any other private or public Act under which the vendor's charges are paid by the purchaser, was not applicable to the case; (2) the words of rule 2 "not being business in any action or transacted in any ct. or in the chambers of any judge or master," apply only to the "other business" mentioned immediately before, i.e. to business not being conveyancing business, & do not exclude from the scale conveyancing business done under the direction of the ct.; (3) as the purchaser's solr. had had to do all the things which he would have had to do in a purchase not under the direction of the ct., the case was not taken out of the scale by the fact that, in a purchase under the direction of the ct., he did not incur as much responsibility as in a private purchase, therefore, the scale fee was properly chargeable.—Re MERCHANT TAYLORS' Co. 2733. — Entire work must be done by solicitor.—On a purchase of property, to which the sanction of the ct. was requisite, the vendors, who were a public body, did not furnish any evidence of title, but referred the purchaser to a sect. in a public Act of Parliament, by which the property was vested in them "to be appropriated to such purposes as the Lord Chancellor should direct." The purchasers' solr., considering it doubtful whether the sect. enabled the vendors to sell, asked for the Lord Chancellor's direction, which was afterwards procured, & a copy sent to him. On receiving it he caused a summons which he had taken out for the ct.'s sanction to be amended by omitting a request for an inquiry into the title, as he expected to be able to satisfy the chief clerk that it was a good title. The chief clerk, on production of the Lord

Chancellor's direction, sanctioned the purchase without referring the title to the conveyancing counsel, & the purchase was completed.

The bill of costs of the purchase, which was payable by a railway co., included the ad valorem charge on the purchase-money prescribed in Schedule I., Part I., to the General Order under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), for "investigating title" to property. This was objected to on the ground that no title had been furnished or investigated:—Held: there had been an "investigation of title" by the solicitor, & he was entitled to be paid the scale fee.—Ex p. LONDON CORPN. 2743. ——— Meaning of "uncompleted business."—By General Orders 2 (a) & (c) to Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), fees for completed business are to be scale fees regulated by Sched. I., Part I. of the General Order; fees for uncompleted business are to be item fees regulated by Sched. II. The passage in rule 2 of Sched. I., Part I. providing for scale fees "where the property is not sold"—i.e. for uncompleted business, refers to an abortive attempt to sell when the property is ultimately sold.

A solr. trustee of a will, with power to charge for work done, incurred certain costs in an ineffectual auction sale of the trust property. He delivered his bill of costs charging (inter alia) the following sums: No. 1240, to charges for conducting attempted sale by auction, £12 5s.; Nos. 1241–1244, perusing abstract of title & preparing special conditions of sale, lots 1–4, £14 14s. The taxing master allowed No. 1240, but disallowed Nos. 1241–1244. The solr. sent in objections that No. 1240 ought not to have been allowed, & that Nos. 1241–1244 ought to have been allowed. His reasons were that all charges were in respect of an uncompleted sale by auction, the costs of which are regulated by the General Order to Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), which provides in General Order, sect. 2 (a), that costs of completed sales shall be scale charges regulated by Sched. I., & in sub-sect. (c) that costs of uncompleted sales shall be item charges regulated by Sched. II.; that in his bill No. 1240 was a scale charge & therefore wrong, & that Nos. 1241–1244 were also wrong charges. With his objections he delivered a new bill of costs charging item charges for the same transactions. The master overruled the objections & the solr. then issued this summons to have the master's certificate reviewed. It was contended by resp. that rule 2 of Sched. I. provided for scale charges "where the property is not sold":—Held: the solr.'s objections were good & that the taxing master's certificate must be varied by allowing item charges in the substituted bill not exceeding the amount of the charges in the original bill.—*Re STEAD, SMITH v. The taxing master disallowed the fee for conducting the sale because of the auctioneer's charge being paid by the client, & did not allow any fee for items mentioned in the bill of solrs.' work not included in the scale fee for deducing the title, on the ground that the bill was made up on a wrong footing & could not be altered by adding charges:—Held: the taxing master was right in disallowing the scale fee for conducting the sale, but he ought to have allowed the solrs. a quantum meruit for solrs.' work done by them & mentioned in their bill, & which was not covered by the scale fee for deducing the title.—Re PEACE & ELLIS (1887), 57 L. Where the auctioneer's commission is paid by the client:—Held: rule 11 does not deprive the solr. of all remuneration for work done in respect of the conduct of the sale, but under the General Order, sect. 2 (c), he was entitled to a quantum meruit for such work, the remuneration to be regulated according to the old system as altered by Sched. The solrs. claimed both the sum paid to the auctioneer & the scale fee for conducting the sale:—Held: the payment to the auctioneer was a commission under r. 11 of Sched. After the Order came into operation the property was sold by private contract. The same solrs. acted throughout & they made out their bill of costs, as to the attempted sale by auction, under the old system, & as to the sale by private contract, under the old system, as altered by Sched. II. to the General Order. The taxing master, in taxing this bill, disallowed all the charges other than disbursements contained therein with regard to the attempted sale by auction, & with regard to the sale by private contract; & he substituted for the latter the scale charges for negotiating the sale & for deducing the title & perusing & completing the conveyance:—Held: the taxing master had taxed the bill upon a wrong principle, & the bill must be referred back to him to be dealt with upon the principles laid down by the House of Lords in Parker v. Blenkhorn, Newbould v. Bailward, No. 2748, ante. The word "commission" in rule 11 of Sched. After considerable negotiations both by correspondence & interviews the action was ultimately compromised upon terms which were in effect that half the purchase-money should be left secured upon mtge. of the property for a term of two years, & that the purchaser should pay the balance in cash, together with pl'tfs.' taxed costs of the action, upon the footing of affording them a complete indemnity. Upon the taxation of the costs the purchaser objected to an item of £75 charged as a fee for negotiating the loan of the amount to be left upon mtge.:—Held: the charge must be disallowed, as all the negotiations for the settlement of the action were properly charged by items in the bill of costs, & it was impossible to sever the terms of negotiation for the settlement of the action & to make a separate charge for the mtge.—*HALL v. I. to the General Order under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), & therefore the solr. to the trustees was not entitled to charge a scale fee for "preparing & completing mtge." under that rule.

2768. — Agreement for advance of definite sum—At future date.]—Rule (2) (a) & Part I. of Sched. I. to the General Order under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), apply not only to legal mtges., but also to equitable mtges. and memoranda of charge, though in some of those cases questions may arise, under particular circumstances, whether they fall within the scale, on the ground that the whole of the business in respect of which the scale imposes fees has not been done.

Although the scale only applies where the transaction has been "completed," the question in every case is whether there has been completion in substance; & although the scale does not apply where a mtge. is given to secure money which may or may not be advanced, at the option of the lender, yet where mtgees. have agreed to advance a certain fixed sum, & everything contemplated by the scale has been done except actually paying over the money, postponement of the payment of the money at the request of the mtgor. will not take the transaction out of the scale, although the mtge. itself, as in the ordinary case of a mtge. to a bank by a customer, does not state the amount secured.

The ct. is not tied down by the form which the security takes, but is entitled to look at the substance of the transaction.—Re BAKER, [1912] 2 Ch. 405; 81 L. J. Ch. 805; 106 L. T. 1012.

2769. — On what sum fee computed—Gross amount raised.]—The tenant for life of settled estates had created charges on his life estate for sums amounting in the whole to £192,000, & the charges had all become vested in an insurance co. A private Act was passed which empowered the trustees of the settlement to raise, by mortgaging the settled estates in fee, any sum not exceeding £350,000, for the purpose of paying the debts of the tenant for life. The trustees executed a mtge. of the estates in fee to the co. to secure £232,000. Of this sum £192,000 was retained by the co. in satisfaction of the charges on the life estate (which were released by a separate deed), & £40,000 was paid to the trustees:—Held: the transaction was a new mtge., & not a further charge, & therefore did not fall within rule 10 in Part I. of Sched. I. to Solicitors' Remuneration Order, 1882, & the mtgees.' solr. was entitled to the scale fee on a mtge. for £232,000.

In Jan. 1927, her trustees applied for & were granted a further advance on the same securities by the Commercial Union, whose solrs. had attended to the previous transactions. The deed secured an immediate advance, & it also secured all the previous existing securities, although the old securities had been kept on foot for the purpose of preserving priorities, & there was a new proviso for redemption. The solrs. to the Commercial Union carried in a bill for taxation, the charges being according to the scale in Sched. 2772. Work must be substantially done—Form of lease scheduled to another document—Verbatim copy.—In July, 1881, W. instructed his solrs. to prepare a building agreement with form of lease to be granted on completion set out in the schedule. In June, 1883, the premises having been completed, W. gave further instructions for a lease, which, as prepared, was, except as to parties, a verbatim copy of that contained in the schedule. In Nov. 1883, the solrs. delivered their bill of costs, in which under date July, 1881, were various items amounting to £17 in relation to preparing the agreement; & under date June, 1883, "to costs of preparing, engrossing, executing, & completing lease & counterpart, as per Sched. I. of Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), £59 10s." On taxation this item was objected to, on the ground that the Act did not apply, as the substantial part of the work done was previous to Jan. 1, 1883, & had been already charged for in the costs of preparing the agreement. The taxing master disallowed the objection, but deducted £20 from the £59 10s., & directed a detailed bill of costs in relation to the preparation of the lease to be brought in. This bill was delivered, but was not taxed. On summons to review taxation:—Held: the taxing master ought to have taxed the detailed bill for the actual preparation of the lease, & not have allowed the ad valorem scale even to the extent he did; the ad valorem scale applied only where the solr. had substantially done the work specified in Sched. I.; as the scale charges did not apply, the taxing master ought to have taxed their charges in accordance with rule 2 (c), & Sched. II.—Re HICKLEY & STEWARD (1885), 54 L. J. Ch. 608; 52 L. I. to the General Order of August, 1882, under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), to be paid to a lessor's solr. "for preparing, settling, & completing lease & counterpart," includes the solr.'s remuneration for the preparation of a prior agreement for the lease, & the solr. cannot charge for the preparation of the agreement in addition to the scale fee. An agreement for a lease provided that the lessor should at his own expense do certain repairs to the property & deliver possession to the lessee as soon as they were done, which was to be not later than a certain day, time to be of the essence of the contract, & that, on the lessor complying with these conditions, the lessor should grant & the lessee accept a lease in the form thereto annexed:—Held: these stipulations did not relate to collateral matters, so as to make the agreement something more than a step towards the granting of the lease, but related only to the terms on which the lease was to be granted, & the preparation of the agreement was "business connected with" the lease within the meaning of rule 2 of the General Order, & could not be separately charged for. The lessors incurred certain costs of investigating the title of appcts. for a renewal, & these were disallowed on a taxation:—Held: (1) the words of the covenant meant that the lessors were to be at no cost & therefore the lessors were entitled to the costs which were reasonably & necessarily incurred in such investigation of title; (2) such costs were not covered by the scale fee charge "for preparing, settling, & completing lease & counterpart" under the General Order made under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881.

2788. What constitutes rack rent—Rent representing full annual value of property.]—The object of the General Order under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), is to introduce a short & simple method of ascertaining the cost of ordinary conveyancing matters, including leases, & the scale of fees is based on the bargain actually made between the lessor & lessee as appearing on the face of the document.

A sub-lease of a messuage in London for sixty-one & a half years at a rent of £525 contained (inter alia) full repairing covenants by the lessees. The rent was the full market rent obtainable upon the terms of the lessees undertaking the obligations in the lease. Upon a summons by the lessors' solrs. to review the taxation of their bill of costs, made under a third party order obtained by the lessees, the solrs. claimed that the lease in question was a long lease not at rack rent, & came under the second set of scale charges in Sched. I., Part II. of the General Order, & that the scale fee chargeable was £42 15s.:—Held: the lease was a long lease at rack rent within the first set of scale charges under the order, & the scale fee was £17 10s.—Re SAWYER & WITTHALL, [1919] 2 Ch. 333; 88 L. J. Ch. 474; 122 L. T. 158; 35 T. L. R. 611; 63 Sol. Jo. 662.

I., Part II. of the General Order under Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), is applicable, the solr. of the lessor is not entitled, where the annual rent exceeds £100, to charge any percentage on fractional amounts of £100 in the rental.—Re MCGAREL, [1897] 1 Ch. 400; 66 L. in repair, & at the expiration of the lease, if so required by the lessor, to remove the building; it contained also a proviso that the lessor might purchase the buildings at a valuation, & that if she did not purchase them the lessees might remove them. The lessees agreed to pay the costs of the lessor's solrs. in connection with the lease:—Held: the lease was a "building lease reserving rent" within the meaning of the Second Scale in Sched. I., Part II. of the General Order made in pursuance of Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), & pltf.'s solr.'s costs were taxable under that scale & not under the First Scale in Sched. I., Part II., nor under Sched. II. of the Order.

It is a scale of charges in respect of "building leases reserving rent," & this is such a lease; "or other long leases not at rack rent," that is to say, other long leases not being building leases. That is, in my opinion, the true construction of these words, which were not intended to restrict building leases to long terms of years; any building lease reserving rent comes within the meaning of the language (SWINFEN EADY, L.J.).—*HILLYARD v. 2806. What constitutes attendance—Attendance for merely formal purpose.]—(1) An attendance of a solr. or his clerk for a merely formal purpose, such as delivering briefs or papers at counsel's chambers, is not an "attendance" within Sched. II. of Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), & the practice of the taxing master to allow a fee of 3s. 4d. for such an attendance is correct.

(2) A case for the opinion of counsel is a "document" within Sched. II. of Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), & the practice of the taxing masters to allow a fee of only 1s. per folio as the ordinary fee for the drawing of such a case is wrong.—Re MAHON, [1893] 1 Ch. 507; 62 L. (b) Counsel's Fees.

2807. Third counsel.]—The solr. for pl'tfs. employed three counsel, two of whom were Queen's Counsel, to appear for his clients at the hearing of a cause, & the master, in taxing the solr.'s bill as between solr. & client, under an order obtained by one of pl'tfs., disallowed the fees of the second counsel. The ct. referred it back to the master to review his report, there being nothing to show that it was unnecessary to employ more than two counsel.—WASTELL v. LESLIE (1844), 14 Sim. 84; 13 L. J. 2809. Refreshers—R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 27 (48).]—(1) The special allowances & scale of fees mentioned in R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 65, r. 27 (48), are applicable to all taxations, whether in an action in the Supreme Ct., or under the common order, or under a special order obtained by a client against his solr. under the jurisdiction given by Solicitors

Act, 1843 (c. 73). But Ord. 65, r. 27 (48), does not prevent the client from giving the solr. authority, which may be express or implied, to employ a particular leader, & to give him such special fees by way of refresher or otherwise, though of far larger amount than the maximum fixed by r. 27 (48), as may be necessary to secure his services; & such authority having been shown by the evidence to have been clearly & distinctly given by the clients, a board of directors, to their solr.:—Held: the taxing master was not precluded from allowing more than the maximum scale fee fixed by r. 27 (48), & he must exercise his discretion as to the quantum, having regard to the authority given by the clients to their solr.

(2) There is no recognised rule that where special fees have been paid to the leader, the fees paid to his juniors must be according to the same rate; & accordingly, in the absence of proof that the clients had authorised payment of special refresher fees to the junior counsel proportionate to those paid to the leader, the disallowance by the taxing master of special refresher fees to the junior counsel was upheld.

(3) Although the case was one of very great magnitude & complication, & occupied twenty-nine days, the ct. declined to interfere with the discretion of the taxing master in disallowing extra fees paid by the solicitor to his counsel for consultations.

(4) A solr. who has made disbursements for his client, & who has received from the client sums paid generally on account, but sufficient to cover those disbursements, is not entitled to appropriate the sums so received to costs for which he has not delivered a bill, in order that he may, under Attorneys & Solicitors Act, 1870 (c. 28), s. 17, claim interest on the disbursements.—Re HARRISON (1886), 33 Ch. 2814. Fees not paid before commencement of proceedings—When proceedings for taxation commence—Within R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 27 (29A).—A solr. issued a specially indorsed writ & a summons for judgment against his client upon a bill of costs. On Mar. 23, 1921, an order was made under R. S. C., Ord. 14, that the bill should be referred to the master to be taxed pursuant to Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), & that the solr. should be at liberty to sign judgment against the client for the amount found due to the solr. by the master's allocatur. The bill expressly stated that certain fees to counsel had not then been paid, & these fees were set out under a separate heading in the bill as indicated by R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 27 (29A). On Apr. 1, 1921, the fees were paid. On Apr. 9, 1921, the taxation commenced. The client objected to the fees being allowed as disbursements, & the taxing master upheld the objection:—Held: the order of Mar. 23 represented the result of two proceedings; (a) a summons for judgment by the solr.; (b) a summons by the client for taxation of the bill under Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 37; therefore "proceedings for taxation" had been "commenced by the client" within the meaning of R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 27 (29A), & consequently the taxing master had power to allow the fees.—SMITH v. HOWES, [1922] 1 K. B. 590, 91 L. J. K. B. 388; 126 L. T. 625; 66 Sol. Jo. 367, C. A.

2816. —.]—Upon a summons by a solr. for an order directing the taxing master to review his taxation of a bill of costs:—Held: the journeys of a country solr. to town to attend counsel & otherwise to conduct the proceedings in an action ought to be allowed where the solr. had authority from his client to make these charges, but that such journeys to town ought not to be allowed simply on the principle that the country solr. would probably be better acquainted with the subject-matter than his London agent.—Re STORER (1884), 26 Ch. 2817. — Information collected while travelling for another client.]—A solr. had a retainer to act generally for a co., & also a special retainer to conduct a Chancery suit on behalf of the co. Being employed by another client to go to America, he collected information on behalf of the co. in furtherance of their suit, but without special instructions from the co. to do so. On his return to England he reported to the co. what he had done, & they made use of the information he had obtained. He afterwards took three journeys to Paris to conduct negotiations for a compromise of the same suit, without instructions from the co., but with the knowledge of some of the directors, & on two of them he was accompanied by the chairman:—Held: under the special circumstances of the case, the solr. was entitled to charge the co. for his professional services in America, & also for his professional services & expenses on his journeys to Paris.

A solr. has no right to take special journeys or to go to foreign countries at the expense of his client without specific instructions: nothing is better settled: otherwise the client, in giving a retainer to a solr., would thereby authorise him to travel all over the world at his expense (JESSEL, M.R.).—Re SNELL (1877), 5 Ch. 2829. Functions of taxing master.]—On a taxation between solr. & client of the costs of a cause objections were taken on behalf of the client to charges occasioned by the postponement of the trial & the amendment of the pleadings, on the ground that the postponement of the trial & the amendment of the pleadings had been rendered necessary by the negligence of the solr.; the registrar refused to disallow the items, on the ground that it was not within his province as Taxing Master to inquire into the question of negligence:—Held: on motion in ct. to review the taxation, the ruling of the registrar was right.—THE PAPA DE ROSSIE (1878), 3 P. D. 160; 27 W. R. 367.

2830. —.]—The taxing master in taxing the costs of an action has jurisdiction to disallow the costs of proceedings which were rendered necessary only by the negligence or mistake of the solr. charging such costs.—Re MASSEY & CAREY (1884), 26 Ch. D. 459; 53 L. J. Ch. 705; 51 L. T. 390; 32 W. R. 1008, C. A.

2831. Allowance by way of compensation for services inadequately remunerated.]—By the practice of the ct., solrs. are often not paid at all, or very ill paid, for very important services, & therefore they ought not to be deprived of any lawful fees which the practice warrants, upon the notion that the business charged may have been of no practical benefit. Thus, where a solr. acts for a pltf. & for some defts., he is entitled to charge such defts. for pltf.'s warrants served on his clients defts., & for attendance thereon, & for separate copies of the proceedings.—LUCAS v. PEACOCK (1844), 8 Beav. 1; 50 E. R. 1.

2832. — Distinguished from fictitious charges for important business which has been neglected.]—I have been informed, that solrs. frequently do charge for particular acts of business, which, upon the occasion to which they relate, may not have been necessary or required for the interests of their client, & this, because, in the taxation of costs for the whole business done, such charges are allowed, whilst the charges allowed for other services of the utmost value & importance, truly rendered to their clients, are so inadequate, that unless some compensation were allowed in another way, no adequate remuneration would, upon taxation, be given for the transaction of the whole business.

But doing & charging for some things not required for the interest of the clients, & for which the client has, or is supposed to have compensation by the undercharge which is allowed against him for services truly rendered, is a very different thing, from making a fictitious charge, as for business done on a most important occasion, when, in fact, such business was not done, & the interest of the client was wholly neglected (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—DAVENPORT v. STAFFORD (1845), 8 Beav. 503; 14 L. J. Ch. 414; 5 L. T. O. S. 428; 9 Jur. 801; 50 E. R. 198.

2833. Preparation of conveyance—Where title deeds in possession of adverse party.]—A solr. employed in the sale of an estate knew that the title deeds were in the possession of an adverse party; he however proceeded to prepare & obtained the execution of the conveyance & memorial. The sale went off, in consequence of the absence of the title deeds. He was disallowed the costs of the proceeding, & the deed being a cloud on the title, he was also ordered to deliver it without being paid the costs thereof.—POTTS v. DUTTON (1845), 8 Beav. 493; 5 L. T. O. S. 343; 50 E. R. 194; subsequent proceedings, 6 L. T. O. S. 363.

2834. Two actions brought instead of one.]—An attorney, under the advice of a special pleader, caused two actions of ejectment to be brought where the Court thought that one would clearly have sufficed. The Court refused to interfere with the Master's taxation, who, in his discretion, had disallowed the costs relating to one of the actions.—DOE d. HAMMOND v. ROE (1847), 9 L. T. O. S. 124.

2835. 2836. Attempt to enforce sale—Sale unenforceable because particulars incorrect.]—A solr. inserted an inaccurate statement in the particulars of a sale, which he attempted to cover by a condition. An intending purchaser refused to complete on discovering the inaccuracy, but counsel advised vendor's solr. that the condition in question bound the purchaser, & advised a summons under the Vendor & Purchaser Act, which was accordingly taken out; & the chief clerk & ct. of first instance agreed with counsel, but the Ct. of Appeal reversed their decision, & held that the said condition could not get rid of the positive statement in the particulars, so that the purchaser could not be compelled to complete.

f. Onus of proof of negligence.]—Where services are rendered by a solr. at the instance of a client, possessing the like knowledge of the matters of fact as the solr., the onus is on the client to establish negligence, ignorance, or want of skill, by reason of which alone & entirely the services have been utterly worthless, if he resist the taxation of costs incurred by such services.

2841. — Where retainers separate.]—Separate retainers were given to an attorney by deft. & two other persons, as defts. in a Chancery suit, to conduct their defence thereto; but a joint appearance was entered, & a joint answer put in; one set of counsel only was employed, to whom one set of briefs was delivered, & joint affidavits were made, & joint consultations obtained, the defence throughout being conducted as a joint defence. In an action by the attorney to recover the whole costs of the Chancery suit from deft., the only defence set up at the trial was a special agreement by the attorney that deft. should not be liable for any of the costs of the suit, which agreement, however, the jury negatived. Thereupon, at the suggestion of the judge that it was unnecessary to go into evidence of the reasonableness of the charges, which pltf. was prepared to give, inasmuch as the bill would be taxed in the usual way, a verdict was entered for pltf. for the amount of his bill, "subject to taxation." Upon the bill, which consisted entirely of Chancery charges, coming before the common law master for taxation, he referred it, under Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 42 to a Chancery taxing master, who accordingly taxed the whole bill at a certain sum; but, on the authority of Re Colquhoun, Ex p. Ford, No. 2840, ante, apportioned & allotted one-third part only of such sum as against deft. for his proportionate share of the whole. That apportionment the common law master, on the bill coming back to him for his allocatur, repudiated, & taxed the whole bill at the total sum taxed by the Chancery master, & for that amount judgment was signed by the pltf.:—Held: the view taken by him was right, & pltf. was entitled to recover the whole of his costs from deft.; for, though the retainers were separate, there was evidence, if the case had gone to the jury on that point, that they had merged into one joint litigation; & not having raised the question of separate liability at the trial, it was not open to deft., nor competent to the Chancery master, to raise it on taxation.

There is no difference in the law, as administered in a ct. of equity, & as administered in a ct. of common law, with regard to the question of the joint or separate liability of several defts. The rule is the same in both cts. If there be separate contracts with the attorney, each deft. is liable for his own share only of the costs, & if the contract be joint, then each is liable for the whole.—BURRIDGE v. BELLEW (1875), 32 L. T. 807.

2848. Registrar of county court—Appearing as party in that court.]—County Courts Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 41, which provides that a registrar of a county ct. shall not be engaged as solr. for any party in any proceeding in the registrar's ct., does not prevent a registrar, who is a solr., from defending himself in person in an action brought against him in his own ct., or from recovering from pltf's. in the action such costs as a solr. deft. is entitled to on taxation, under C. C. R., 1903–1908, Ord. 53, r. 25, & by reason of s. 118 of the Act, which provides that all costs shall be taxed by the registrar of the ct. in which they were incurred, the registrar's bill of costs must, of necessity, be taxed by the registrar himself.

Deft. was the registrar of a county ct. & was also a practising solr. Pltf's. brought an action against him in that ct., alleging, negligence by him in his official capacity. Deft. acted as his own solr. in the action & was represented by counsel at the trial. The county ct. judge gave judgment for deft. with costs. Deft. brought in his bill of costs for taxation & gave notice of a taxation before himself. Pltf.'s solr. attended the taxation under protest, & on the taxation, deft. disallowed several items. Pltf's. applied to the county ct. judge to review the taxation, & on the review the judge taxed off two further items:—Held: the taxation had to take place of necessity before deft. himself: deft. appeared in person & did not lose his costs because he was also registrar & a solr.; the county ct. judge had not taxed on any wrong principle: & further, that by their application to the county ct. judge pltf's. had waived their objection to the jurisdiction.—*TOLPUIT (H.) & Co., LTD. v. 2879. — Whether "other business" within Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44).—A client took out a summons to review taxation of a solr.'s bill of costs. The following were among the items in dispute: (a) drawing case for the opinion of counsel at 2s. per folio, the matter was not in conveyancing business, & was previous to an action; (b) making a schedule of the documents which were handed over to a new solr. upon the occasion of withdrawal of retainer to the old solr.; (c) perusal of particulars at a charge of 6s. 8d. The particulars were particulars of defence, & if they had been treated as part of the defence, a charge for perusal of 4d. per folio would have come to much less than 6s. 8d.:—Held: (1) drawing a case for the opinion of counsel not being in a conveyancing matter, & not being in action, was "other business" within above Act, s. 2; (2) the charge for the schedule of documents was rightly allowed, as it was for the benefit of the new solr., & not of the old solr.; (3) particulars were separate "pleading" within the meaning of Appendix N to R. S. C., & a charge of 6s. 8d. for perusal was rightly allowed.

Perusal of particulars delivered in an action under an order may be equivalent to perusal of an amendment of the pleadings & may be charged for as such. It is a matter in the discretion of the taxing master.—Re MORGAN (R. P.) & Co., [1915] 1 Ch. 182; 84 L. J. Ch. 249; 112 L. T. 239; 59 Sol. Jo. 289.

2880. Expedition money paid to stationer.—(1) An order was made for the division & a transfer of a fund in ct., but before it could be completed, the fund became altered, & the solr. presented a petition for a similar object:—Held: it could not be considered as unnecessary, it appearing that the solr., using his best exertions, was unable to act on the first order, by reason of a difficulty as to the legacy duty; the solr. was therefore allowed the costs upon taxation.

(2) Expedition money, paid by a solr. to a stationer or writing clerk employed in the registrar's office, disallowed upon taxation.

SUB-SECT. 1.—NATURE OF LIEN.

2925. A general lien—Applying to all costs.]—

If a solr., whom his client has ceased to employ, by the production of a deed in his hands belonging to the client, & upon which he claims a lien as solr., enables the client to recover a fund in a suit, his lien over the fund so realised is confined to the costs of that suit, but is a lien which he is entitled actively to enforce. Secus as to his general lien upon his client's papers, which applies to all his bills of costs, but is merely a right to retain the papers, & cannot be actively enforced.—BOZON v. BOLLAND, HUSBAND v. BOLLAND (1839), 4 My. & Cr. 354; 9 L. J. Ch. 123; 4 Jur. 763; 41 E. R. 138, L. C.

2926. ———.]—PELLEY v. WATHEN, No. 3011, post.

2927. ———.]—Although a solr. who discharges himself cannot set up a lien for costs as a reason for not delivering up papers necessary to enable his client to proceed with pending matters in litigation to which they relate, yet a solr. who has been discharged by the client may set up such lien, & will not be ordered to produce or deliver up to the client the papers on which he claims the lien, although his not doing so will embarrass the client in prosecuting or defending his claims. Such lien is a general one, & extends to all costs due from the client to the solicitor.—Re FAITHFULL, Re LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. CO. (1868), L. R. 6 Eq. 325; 18 L. T. 502.

2928. Equivalent to security created by contract.]—A lien is equivalent to a security created by contract, & there is no distinction, in point of law, between the lien of a solr. & that of any other party; & where, therefore, a solr. has a lien, in respect of his bill, upon documents in his possession belonging to his client, he cannot be compelled to deliver them up until the bill is paid. Semble: the ct. would take care that the lien of a solr., on a document, should not be productive of injury to or loss of the property to which the document related, & would direct it to be delivered up, if such a step were necessary for the preservation of the property, but without prejudice to the solr.'s lien thereon, & in the case of a policy of assurance, would order the proceeds arising therefrom to be paid into ct., subject to the same right of lien thereon as previously existed on the policy.—RICHARDS v. PLATEL (1841), 1 Cr. & Ph. 79; 10 L. J. Ch. 375; 5 Jur. 834; 41 E. R. 419, L. C.; subsequent proceedings (1842), 11 L. J. Ch. 409, L. C.

2929. Lien can be assigned.]—A solr.'s lien is a dormant security, in which it differs from a mtge.; but a solr. may assign a debt due to him for costs, with the benefit of any lien he may have upon any documents for such costs. The claim is equally valid, whether the deeds are in the actual possession of the solr. or of his assignee; & such lien may pass to the solr.'s assignee, if the deeds were handed over in the solr.'s presence & at his request to his assignee, without his actually touching them.—BULL v. FAULKNER (1848), 2 De G. & Sm. 772; 12 L. T. O. S. 331; 13 Jur. 93; 64 E. R. 346.

2930. Available to extent of debt.]—An attorney has no lien on his client's money in his hands, beyond the amount in which the latter is indebted to him.—MILLER v. ATLEE (1849), 3 Exch. 799; 13 L. T. O. S. 121; 13 Jur. 431.

*Annotation:—Mentd. Sinclair v. Brougham, [1914] A. C. 398.

2931. Whether enforceable by action.]—On a bill filed by a solr., seeking to establish a lien for costs upon a policy of assurance which a client had placed in his hands professionally, & upon which the ct. had in another cause directed an action to be brought, a special injunction was obtained, restraining all proceedings upon the policy; but this injunction was dissolved upon appeal; the Lord Chancellor holding that pltf.'s proper course was to make an application in the other cause.

Qu.: whether such a lien could be enforced by suit; & if so, to what extent.—STEDMAN v. WEBB (1839), 4 My. & Cr. 346; 3 Jur. 213; 41 E. R. 135; sub nom. STEDMAN v. WEBB, 8 L. J. Ch. 193.

2933. ———.]—The ct. will entertain a bill by a solr., seeking to enforce a lien against certain title deeds in respect of his bills of costs, a decree for an account having been made in a suit instituted by the client against the solr., but under which decree the master was not at liberty to take into the general account what was due to the solr. in respect of his bills of costs.—*HECTOR v. PART VIII. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.

2931 i. Whether enforceable by action.]—A solr.'s retaining lien over documents of title to land is merely a passive lien & gives the solr. no right of, or interest in, the land, & nothing can be done by the solr. to convert it into a legal property in the land.—MCLEISH v. PALMER (1921), 21 S. R. N. S. W. 382; 38 N. S. W. W. N.

2931 ii. ———.]—A solr.'s general lien is limited to documents in his hands for the purpose of business, but includes all documents which have so come into his hands, & is a retaining lien incapable of being actively enforced.—GREEN ISLAND CEMENT CO., LTD. v. DEACON, LOOKER & DEACON (1912), 7 Hong Kong L. R. 10.—HONG KONG.

*r. Dependant on circumstances of termination of relationship of solicitor & client.]—*The right to be exercised by a solr. claiming a lien largely depends upon the circumstances under which he has ceased to act for his client, the test being whether the solr. has discharged himself or has been discharged by the client.—*AISHABIBI v. 2940. ———.]—A solr. who had been employed by an administratrix in the administration of deceased's estate was also employed as her solr. in a suit subsequently instituted by creditor of deceased. Pending the suit, the administratrix went to reside abroad, & forbade the solr. to proceed any further with the suit. Afterwards creditor obtained a decree, & a receiver of the estate was appointed. Papers relating to the estate had come into the solr.'s possession, not for the purposes of the suit merely, but for those & other purposes, & he claimed a lien on them for his costs of the suit, & other business. A petition by creditor praying for a reference to ascertain whether the solr. had any lien on the papers, & that he might be ordered to deliver them up to the receiver, was dismissed.—WARBURTON v. 2942. ———.]—The trustee of bkpt.'s estate appointed a solr. whose appointment was duly confirmed, & who transacted considerable professional business for the trustee as such. After several years the trustee was removed by creditors, & a new trustee appointed, who called upon the solr. to hand over all documents relating to the estate to himself or his solr. The title deeds of the property were handed over to the solr., & continued to remain in his possession. Three years afterwards the partnership between the solr. & his partner was dissolved, but the solr. retained the title deeds in his possession. The purchaser died within six years of the date of the purchase. An action was brought for the administration of the purchaser's estate, & the solr. on behalf of the old firm & himself claimed against the purchaser's estate a considerable sum for general costs, some of which were incurred previously to the purchase. The chief clerk, however, allowed only the sum claimed for costs incurred within six years of the purchaser's death, the remainder being barred by Stat. Limitations. The solr., when asked to deliver up the title deeds, claimed to have a lien on them for the amount of costs disallowed by the chief clerk as statute-barred. On a summons for the determination of the right of the solr. to the lien he claimed :—Held : he was not entitled to the lien, as the costs of the purchase of the property had been allowed by the chief clerk, & the solr., to whom the property had been conveyed was not entitled to a lien on the title deeds handed to & retained by him personally for the general costs of the old firm.—*Re GOUGH, LLOYD v. Afterwards the mtgor. instructed the same solrs. to sell the property, & they employed an auctioneer for the purpose, & made use of the deeds in preparing particulars & conditions of sale. The property was put up for sale, but was not sold. The mtgor. then filed a liquidation petition, & the trustee contracted to sell the mtged. property :—Held : the solrs. had no lien on the deeds as against the trustee in respect of their costs of the abortive sale.

Bill of exchange.]—On a lease being granted, the lessee deposited it with the lessor's solr., who acted for the lessor & lessee, together with a bill of exchange as a security for the costs of preparing the lease, which the lessee was to pay. The lessee afterwards mortgaged the term, & defts., who were his solrs. on that occasion, in order to obtain the lease, paid the bill of costs of the lessor's solrs., & received from them, without any authority from the lessee, the lease & the bill of exchange:—Held: (1) without express contract defts. acquired no lien on the bill of exchange beyond the amount which they had paid to the lessor's solrs.; (2) evidence of an express contract would not support such a lien without proof that defts. had explained to their client, the lessee, his rights independently of express contract.—*GIBSON v. 2969. Cheques.]—A cheque having been deposited by H. in the hands of a solr., to be applied by him in payment of any such amount as might be recovered by F., his client, in an action then pending against H., the action proceeded to trial, & F. recovered a sum of money against H., & entered up judgment for the debt & costs. Before the exact amount due on the judgment was ascertained F. became bkpt., & H., having a cross-claim against his estate for a larger amount than was due on the judgment, was admitted to prove for the difference, the rest being set off against the judgment debt under Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849 (c. 106), s. 171:—Held: the solr. had a lien upon the proceeds of the cheque for his costs, to the extent of the sum found due upon the judgment, & such lien was not displaced by the set-off under the proceedings in F.'s bkpcy.—*HANSON v. SUB-SECT. 3.—IN RESPECT OF WHAT COSTS.

A. Work done in Professional Capacity.

2971. General rule.]—WORRALL v. JOHNSON, No. 3066, post.

2972. —.]—The ct. has jurisdiction, upon payment into ct., or giving security for a sum sufficient to answer the solr.'s demand, to order before taxation delivery up by a solr. of the client's papers, where retention by the solr. of the papers on which he claims a lien would embarrass the client in the prosecution or defence of pending actions.

Qu.: whether the jurisdiction is not extended by R. S. C., Ord. 50, r. 8.

This lien is confined to what is due to the solr. in that character, & does not extend to general debts. Accordingly the lien of the solr. of a railway co. for his costs does not include costs incurred in relation to the promotion of the co. before incorporation, such costs by the usual clause in the Act having been made a statutory debt to be paid by the co.—Re GALLAND (1885), 31 Ch. 2979. — Costs incurred while unqualified.]—An attorney of another ct., who conducts an action in the Exchequer in his own name, can bring no action for his fees, & has no lien for such fees; & the ct. will allow one judgment to be set off against another, without regard to his claim of a lien for such fees.—*LATHAM v. 2980. — Costs incurred as mortgagee.]—A client mortgaged property, which was at the time subject to a first mtge. to his solrs., who prepared the mtge. deed to themselves. Afterwards the mtgor. made a third mtge. to another person. In an action by the solrs. against the first & third mtgees. & the mtgor.:—Held: they were entitled only to their ordinary costs as mtgees., & they had no lien on the mtge. deed for the costs of its preparation or other costs due to them from the mtgor.—SHEFFIELD v. EDEN (1878), 10 Ch. D. 291; 40 L. T. 283; 27 W. R. 477, C. A.

2981. — Costs incurred as land agent.]—By indentures of assignment testator assigned to M. two policies on the life of testator. Testator lived in England, but M. for many years acted as solr. & land agent for testator on his estate in Ireland. The policies were assigned by testator to M. as trustee to secure to mtgees. the repayment of a loan on the Irish property. M. acted as solr. both for testator & the mtgees. M. died on July 19, 1889, & testator died on Mar. 14, 1890. C., widow & extrix. of M., claimed in a creditor's action, to have a lien on the proceeds of the policies in ct. for two sums of money: (a) in respect of professional charges of M. acting as solr. to testator; (b) partly for work done as a land agent, & partly for two insurance premiums paid by M. for testator. The chief clerk allowed a claim made by the mtgees., but disallowed the claim of C. to be entitled to a lien on the proceeds of the policies. On summons by C. to vary the chief clerk's certificate:—Held: (1) the solr.'s lien could not be extended to the claim in respect of land agency; (2) as to the professional charges as solr., M.'s lien was preserved subject to the mtge., & the chief clerk's certificate must be varied by finding that C. was entitled to be paid the two sums, except in respect of the land agency, & must have her costs.—Re WALKER, MEREDITH v. WALKER (1893), 68 L. T. 517; 3 R. 455.

2982. — Advances by solicitor.]—The solr. of the extrix. & devisee, paying a sum of money in exoneration of an adverse claim on part of testator's estate, does not, as against creditors of testator, necessarily & by force of the transaction alone, acquire a lien upon the estate, or on the title deeds, for the sum which he so paid.

The solr. of the extrix. having paid a sum which was due to a third party, who had a lien on title deeds belonging to testator's estate for the amount, gave a receipt for the deeds in the name of the extrix., & as her solr., carried into the master's office her examination, in which the sum he had so paid was stated to have been paid by the extrix. & was allowed accordingly:—Held: the solr. must, in such circumstances, be presumed to have made the payment on the behalf & on the personal security of his client; & he could not claim a lien upon the deeds for the amount.—CHRISTIAN v. FIELD (1842), 2 Hare, 177; 5 Jur. 1130; 67 E. R. 74; sub nom. CHRISTIAN v. CHAMBERS, CHRISTIAN v. FIELD, 11 L. J. Ch. 97.

2986. Administration action—Solicitor acting for defaulting trustee.]—In taking the accounts of the estate of S. who died insolvent, the master found that C. who also died insolvent & intestate, had, as exor. & trustee, received & paid several sums, & that there remained a large balance due from C.'s estate. R. was appointed administrator of the estate of C., & in that capacity he received £446 18s. & paid £142 10s. 11d. & the balance he claimed to retain in part payment of a judgment recovered by him against C. for a large sum & costs, but which had not been registered. C. handed over to plff.'s solr. the title deeds relating to the estates of S. which were free from incumbrances, but C.'s solr. claimed a lien upon them from his costs incurred by C. since the death of testator:—Held: (1) on the question of lien C.'s solr. was only entitled to his costs incurred in the administration & trusteeship of S.'s estate antecedent to the suit, but not subsequent thereto; (2) on the question of costs deft. R., the administrator of C., who was a defaulting trustee, was, under the circumstances, entitled to his costs of the supplemental suit out of the estate of S.—*HORNE v. SHEPHERD, HORNE v. their client. The new solr. obtained the usual order for delivery of a bill of costs & taxation & afterwards tendered to them, but not in settlement, the amount claimed & requested delivery up of papers. Both the tender & request were refused on the grounds as to the tender, that the solrs. were entitled first to their balance in settlement & as to the papers, that they had a lien on them for their costs including those of certain habeas corpus proceedings commenced against them, & others on behalf of the client, & which they were defending, that they were entitled to have a sum paid into ct. to answer the costs of taxation, & also to an undertaking to return the papers in case any balance was found due on the taxation to them. On a motion for an order for delivery up:—Held: (1) in the circumstances the solrs. were wrong in refusing to accept the tender; (2) it was their duty to deliver up on a proper receipt being given, which had not been refused; (3) they were entitled to an undertaking to return in case any sum was found due to them on taxation; (4) the costs relating to the habeas corpus not being taxable costs, charges, & expenses incurred by them as solrs. for the client could not be included in the lien; (5) they were entitled to the payment into ct. of a proper sum to answer the costs of taxation; (6) the motion having been rendered necessary by the solrs. taking up a wrong ground, they must bear the costs thereof.—Re HANBURY, WHITTING & NICHOLSON (1896), 75 L. E. Change or Dissolution of Partnership.

2999. Dissolution of partnership—Whether lien continues.—Where a party has employed, as his solrs. in a cause, a firm of two solrs. in partnership, the retirement from the business of one of such partners, under an arrangement with the other, operates as a discharge of the client by the solrs., & the client is thereupon entitled to require that the papers in the cause necessary for its prosecution shall be delivered up to his new solr., upon the usual undertaking for saving the lien, of the discharged solrs.—*GRIFFITHS v. He afterwards continued to act as her solr., & costs were incurred:—Held: as to the joint bill of costs, there could be no lien in favour of A.; if otherwise, there would have been lien; & as to his separate bill of costs, he had taken the deeds as mtgee. & not as solr., & therefore had no lien for costs.—*VAUGHAN v. A question was argued with reference to the continuance of the lien after the successive alterations in the firm of solrs. by whom the deeds were held. On this point I am clearly of opinion that the lien once acquired would not be affected by the circumstance that the party entitled to it afterwards admitted a partner or partners in his business; but I also think that the deeds which first came to the joint possession of the firm did not thereby become subject to a lien for costs due to some or one of the partners separately who may have acted as solr. for the mtgor. before the constitution of the firm to which the deeds were delivered (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—*PELLEY v. 3011. — ——.]—A purchaser of property, subject to a mtge., made, before the completion of his purchase, a second mtge. of it. He afterwards created a third mtge., with respect to which the second mtgee.'s conduct was such as to give it priority over his. Then the purchase was completed, the purchaser paying off the first mtge., & taking a conveyance to a trustee for himself. On this occasion the title deeds were handed to his solrs., who afterwards took a transfer of the third mtge. One of them was the trustee for the purchaser in the conveyance. The second mtgee. did not give them, nor had they any notice of his security:—Held: nevertheless, their lien, either for their general bill of costs, or for their costs relating to the conveyance, could not prevail against the second mtgee., the rights of a solr. in respect of his lien for his bill of costs being no greater than those of the client, & the circumstances of the case not exempting it from the scope of this rule.

Qu.: whether the lien of a solr. is affected by his taking a partner.

The general lien of a solr. is merely a right to keep from his client the deeds & papers which he holds as solr. until his bill of costs is satisfied. It is a right derived through the client, & therefore, on the most obvious principles of justice, cannot go beyond the right of the client himself. If the client's right to the deeds which came to the hands of the solr. is absolute, so will be the right of the solr. If they are subject to the rights of third parties, such rights will follow them. These consequences flow from the nature of the relationship existing between the client & his solr. A solr. can have no lien of a higher nature than the interest the client himself has in the deeds (LORD CRANWORTH).—PELLEY v. WATHEN (1851), 1 De G. M. & G. 16; 21 L. J. Ch. 105; 18 L. T. O. The trustee's solrs. refused to give up the mtge. deeds unless upon payment of their bill of costs:—Held: the circumstances of the realisation of the trust fund by the trustee's solrs., & of the cestuis que trust availing themselves of that realisation, did not entitle the trustee's solrs. to a lien on the deeds or on the fund in ct., as against the cestuis que trust, but they could have no higher claim against the trustee.—*FRANCIS v. No directions were given to debt. to retain the deeds until the purchase-money should be paid. Some necessary parties refused to execute the deeds, & pltf. having abandoned the contract, demanded the deeds from debt., who refused to deliver them up, claiming to have a lien for his demand against B. C. Mortgagor and Mortgagee.

3016. Right of mortgagee's solicitors against mortgagor—Title deeds handed to intended mortgagee—Mortgage not completed—Costs of investigating title.—A. wishing to borrow money on a mtge. of land, delivered the title deeds to B., the intended mtgee., for examination, & said that he would pay all expenses. B. handed the deeds to his own attorneys to be investigated. The negotiation went on, & the attorneys being requested by A. to return his deeds, refused to do so till he paid their bill of costs. On assumpsit brought by A. against the attorneys to recover back the money so paid:—Held: debts. could not be considered as having acted for both parties in the negotiation, & therefore, had not a lien against A. as his attorneys; supposing A. liable to B. for the costs incurred, B. could not communicate to his own attorneys a lien upon A.'s deeds, by handing them to the attorneys for investigation; the undertaking of A. to B., if it amounted to a promise to pay these costs, did not entitle B.'s attorneys to detain the deeds, as it established no privity between them & A.; & A. might have brought trover for the deeds, & was entitled to recover in this action.—PRATT v. VIZARD (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 808; 2 Nev. & M. K. B. 455; 3 L. J. K. B. 7; 110 E. R. 989.

Title deeds in hands of mortgagee's solicitor—Extent of lien on repayment & reconveyance.—A. purchased premises which were mortgaged to B., with a proviso for reconveyance, at the costs of the mtgor. on payment of principal & interest. A. sold the premises & was to pay off the mtge. on the completion of the purchase; but B.'s attorney who held the title deeds, would not deliver them to A. till his own bill was also paid. The bill contained some items fairly chargeable on the occasion as costs due from the mtgor. & others which were probably payable by the mtgee.:—Held: the attorney might enforce his lien on the deeds against A. to the whole extent of the bill; & A., having been obliged to pay it for the purpose of releasing the deeds, could not recover back from the attorney the amount unduly charged.—OGLE v. STORY (1833), 4 B. & Ad. 735; 1 Nev. & M. K. B. 474; 2 L. J. K. B. 110; 110 E. R. 632.

A co. having issued a debenture loan, a deed was prepared by their solr. mortgaging their property to two of the directors as trustees for the debenture holders, the same solr. acting also for the trustees. The mtge. contained a power of sale & the usual covenant against incumbrances. The co. afterwards passed a resolution for a voluntary winding-up, whereupon the trustees acting under their power of sale contracted to sell the mtged. property to a purchaser & applied to the solr. for the co.'s title deeds, which were in his possession. He, however, refused to give them up, claiming a lien upon them for costs incurred by the co. prior to the mtge. Upon a petition by the trustees & a debenture holder praying that the solr. might be ordered to deliver up the title deeds to them:—Held: the solr. was not entitled to a lien on the deeds, & they must be delivered up to petitioners. A solr. acting for mtgee. as well as mtgor. in the preparation of a mtge. thereby loses his lien on the title deeds in his possession for costs due to him from the mtgor., unless such lien is expressly reserved, even though the mtgee. may have known that the solr. had such lien as against the mtgor.—Re SNELL (1877), 6 Ch. D. Trustees.

3028. Lien created by trustee personally—Ineffective against remainderman.]—A. devised certain estates to trustees, upon trust to pay a part of the rents & profits to his widow, & the residue towards the maintenance & education of his son, until he reached twenty-one; & after that time to him, during the lifetime of the widow; & upon her death he devised the estates to his son in fee. The trustees having occasion to employ debt., an attorney, to defend certain causes & suits in carrying into effect the trusts of the devise, incurred a debt to him for certain costs & expenses, for which they deposited the title deeds with him as a security:—Held: debt. had no lien upon them against the son, after the decease of his mother, as the debt was the personal debt of the trustees.—*LIGHTFOOT v. 3029. Lien created in execution of trusts—Effective against beneficiaries.]—A widow & extrix. of testator was entitled, under his will, to a residue for life. The person entitled in remainder to the residue filed a bill against her for the administration of the estate. The extrix. died, at which time title deeds of testator's estate were in the hands of their solr. She was insolvent, & it was not clear that she was not indebted to the estate. The suit was revived against the administrator de bonis non, & a common administration decree was made. The administrator de bonis non filed another bill against solr. of the extrix. for the delivery up of the title deeds, upon which he claimed a lien for his costs:—Held: the solr. had a lien on the deeds for the costs of the suit, inasmuch as the extrix. had herself such lien for costs incurred by a trustee in the execution of the trust.—*TURNER v. 3030. Solicitors employed by trustees—No lien against trust estate.]—As a general rule, solrs. employed by trustees in matters relating to the trust estate are retained by the trustees personally, & have no claim against, or lien upon, the trust estate for their costs. They can, therefore, only obtain payment by such means as a charging order in respect of recovery or preservation of the property, or through the trustees when the latter are entitled to their costs out of the trust estate. The solrs.' right to costs, therefore, is no defence to an application for payment into ct. of money received with notice that it is trust money.—STANJAR v. EVANS, EVANS v. STANJAR (1886), 34 Ch. PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.

3070 i. Claim to equitable jurisdiction of court—To hold judgment as security.]—An attorney has not a lien, strictly so called, upon the fruits of a judgment in favour of his client, for his costs; but he has an equitable right, which the ct. will enforce if the parties to the cause are obliged to apply to the ct. for its assistance. The ct. will not interfere, except in cases of collusion, to deprive the attorney of his costs.—RUTHERFORD v. POWELL (1878), J.—VOL. XLII.

3070 ii. —.]—A solr.'s particular lien over property recovered in proceedings conducted by him on behalf of his client is a right to the equitable interference of the ct. to enable the solr. to retain, or to get a charge on, the fund recovered, & is therefore limited to the costs incurred in the suit.—*GREEN ISLAND CEMENT CO., LTD. v. 3069. —.]—A difference exists between the lien of a solr. on a fund recovered for his client in an action & on deeds coming into his possession, inasmuch as in the former case he has no lien for all costs due to him from his client, but only for the costs of recovering that particular fund; & even where the solr. actually gets the fund into his possession he obtains no greater lien than if it had remained in ct. A. having threatened to sue B. on a dishonoured bill of exchange. B. agreed to give him a charge on certain money which B.'s solrs. were taking proceedings to recover from two insurance cos., on two separate policies of insurance on a ship. The charge was prepared by B.'s solrs. after an interview at which A. & B. were also present & the solrs. sent it to A. in a letter, in which, "in pursuance of the inclosed written charge," they undertook out of any moneys received by them from either the S. Assocn. or the M. Assocn. under the policies to hand over to A., "after payment of the legal charges," so much of the amount recovered from the said assocn. (sic) as might be sufficient to repay him the amount secured by the charge. The proceedings against the M. Assocn. were compromised on the assocn. agreeing to pay a certain sum. Some time afterwards the S. Assocn. obtained judgment in their favour:—Held: the undertaking given by B.'s solrs. could not be construed as entitling them to payment of their legal charges in respect of the proceedings relating to both policies; so that the undertaking was not inconsistent with the general principle as to a solr.'s right of lien.—MACKENZIE v. MACKINTOSH (1891), 64 L. T. 706; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 53, C. A.

3070. Claim to equitable jurisdiction of court—To hold judgment as security.]—An attorney's lien on a judgment being merely a claim to the equitable interference of the ct. to have the judgment held as a security for his costs, he has no authority over the execution of a writ of ca. sa., so as to carry it into effect against the order of pltf., even though pltf. & deft. should collude to deprive him of his lien.—*BARKER v. A second action was brought on the award by B., for the benefit of F., to which A. pleaded a set-off of matters that had not been brought forward at the time of making the award:—Held: the solrs. of F. had no lien as against A. on the costs given by the award.—*BAKER v. He then instructed defts. to take steps to obtain the documents, & eventually as the result of negotiations conducted by them, an agreement was made between pltf. & the representatives of B., who had in the meantime died, under which the documents were handed to defts. as pltf.'s solrs. Defts. claimed a lien on them for all their costs arising from the attempts to recover them as from the time of the instructions given them by Z., claiming that the documents were the fruits of their exertions. Pltf. admitted his liability for costs incurred on his instructions, & paid money into ct. to satisfy those costs, & claimed the return of the documents:—Held: (1) no lien exists on the fruits of a mere negotiation without litigation; (2) in any case the possession of the documents by defts. was obtained as the result of the fresh instructions given by pltf. & was not attributable to anything done on the instructions of Z., & therefore no lien on them existed in respect of the costs incurred on Z.'s instructions.—*MEGUERDITCHIAN v. A husband obtained a decree nisi for dissolution of marriage & the usual order was made for payment of the costs of the wife. The wife appealed, & the appeal was dismissed with costs as frivolous. The wife thereupon applied to have money which had been paid into ct. by the husband as security for her costs paid out to her solr., whose taxed costs under the decree nisi exceeded that amount, & the husband made a cross application that his costs of the appeal might be paid out of the money in ct.:—Held: though the wife's appeal was a hopeless one, there was no ground for affirming that her solr. acted vexatiously or oppressively in conducting it, & he ought not to be deprived of his lien on the fund for the costs of the wife's defence.—*HALL v. Pltf.'s attorney informed deft.'s attorney that he had a large claim against pltf. for costs, & had a lien for the same upon the damages recovered in the action. Subsequently a rule nisi for a new trial was granted on the ground that the verdict was against evidence. Pltf. & deft., without the knowledge of their respective attorneys, settled the action, deft. paying £10 to pltf. who was in great poverty, in discharge of all the claims for damages & costs:—Held: on the application by pltf.'s attorney that his costs should be paid by deft., pltf.'s attorney was not entitled to compel deft. to pay his costs, as the result of the proceedings was doubtful at the time of the settlement, & there was, therefore, no existing fund or security upon which any lien for the attorney's costs had attached, & as the settlement was not shown to be fraudulent.

The items of the bill extended over a period from 1878 to 1899, & Stat. Limitations being pleaded, the judge at the trial gave judgment for deft. in respect of all items prior to 1893, as being statute barred. He referred the rest of the bill to a master for taxation, & to take the cash account from 1893, directing that credit should be given to deft. for all sums of money received by pltf.'s testator for or on account of deft., in respect of, or which ought to be treated as reducing or discharging, the bill of costs so taxed. Upon taxation deft. brought in a surcharge in respect of a sum of £66, which had been received by pltf.'s testator, as deft.'s solr. in an action brought by deft., in 1894, & not accounted for to deft. No cash account had been delivered by pltf.'s testator to deft., except the account of Dec. 2, 1899, which, through an inadvertence, contained no entry of the said sum of £66. Pltf. claimed that this sum should be treated as appropriated to payment or satisfaction of items which had accrued due from deft. to pltf.'s testator prior to 1893:—Held: the said sum of £66 could not be set off against the statute-barred items under the statutes of set-off; & assuming that pltf.'s testator would have had a right to appropriate the said sum to these items, yet, there having been no such appropriation, it was not, having regard to the terms of the judgment of the learned judge at the trial, open to pltf. so to appropriate the said sum subsequently to that judgment; & therefore the surcharge in respect of the said sum of £66, must be allowed.—*SMITH v. PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 4.—A.

3122 I. Right of client to compromise

3127. ———.]—A verdict was obtained in an action of trover for £200, subject to be reduced to 1s. upon the articles for which the action was brought being delivered up. Before they were delivered up, pltf. became insolvent; but deft., nevertheless, on the application of the assignee, delivered up the goods to him:—Held: pltf.'s attorney had no claim in respect of his lien for the costs, either against the assignee or deft., without either showing express notice, or making out a case of fraud.—BLOOMFIELD v. BLAKE (1833), 2 Dowl. 272.

3128. ———.]—An attorney has a lien upon the judgment for his costs, but not upon the action; & an arrangement between a pltf. & deft. to settle the action, is binding upon them, unless either party has been imposed upon, or unless the arrangement is made with a view to prevent the attorney from obtaining his costs in that particular action.—M'PERSON v. AILLSOP (1839), 8 L. J. Ex. 262.

3129. ———.]—The attorney of deft. has no such interest in the suit as to prevent the parties from compromising it without his consent.—QUESTED v. CALLIS (1842), 10 M. & W. 18; 11 L. J. Ex. 345; 6 Jur. 512; 152 E. R. 364.

3130. ———.]—Pltf. & deft. having settled an action, after verdict for pltf., without the knowledge of pltf.'s attorney, deft. gave notice of the compromise to the attorney, who afterwards signed final judgment.

The ct., upon affidavits denying any conspiracy to deprive the attorney of his costs, made a rule absolute to set aside the judgment.

It is quite clear, upon the affidavits, that the action was settled; & it is said that this was done for the purpose of defrauding the attorney of his costs. The burden, however, of proving that it was with this view, lies on the attorney (per CUR.).—CLARK v. SMITH (1844), 6 Man. & G. 1051; 1 Dow. & L. 960; 7 Scott, N. R. 946; 13 L. J. C. P. 97; 2 L. T. O. S. 347; 8 Jur. 406; 134 E. R. 1218.

3131. ———.]—It has been decided that the claim of the solrs. cannot interfere with the equities between the parties, & that the latter may compromise any matter wholly irrespective of them. But still, as I said before, I do not see any means of giving the relief here asked by way of set-off, & all the cases with respect to lien apply (WOOD, V.-C.).—GRAND TRUNK OR STAFFORD & PETERBOROUGH RAILWAY OFFICIAL MANAGER v. BRODIE, Ex p. TURQUAND (1853), 1 Eq. Rep. 64.

3132. ———.]—An attorney's right of lien for his costs, on a judgment recovered by his client, is subject to the right of the parties to the action to make a bonâ fide compromise. The result of such compromise is that the lien is lost. But the lien may prevail against a collusive compromise made by the parties with the express object of defeating it. The parties to cross actions, pltf. in each of which had obtained judgment, bonâ fide compromised the actions, after notice to one of them, & his attorney from the attorney of the other not to do so in prejudice of the latter's lien on his client's judgment:—Held: the attorney had no ground for claiming the equitable interference of the ct. to enforce his lien.—BRUNSDON v. ALLARD (1859), 2 F. & E. 19; 28 L. J. Q. B. 306; 33 L. T. O. S. 220; 5 Jur. N. S. 596; 7 W. R. 581; 121 E. R. 8.

3133. ———.]—A solr.'s lien is not a general

lien on a fund in ct. though brought in by his exertions, but only on what may, on the issue of the suit, belong to his client. Therefore, where by the exertions of a pltf.'s solr. a fund was ordered to be brought into ct. on which defts. had a primary claim, & afterwards pltf. changed his solr., & the parties were proceeding without bringing the fund into ct. to divide it under compromise, without paying pltf.'s original solrs.:—Held: he had no lien on the fund, but it was ordered that no order should be made by compromise or otherwise for payment of any money to pltf. without notice to pltf.'s original solr.—VERITY v. WYLDE, Re DOWNES (1859), 4 Drew. 427; 28 L. J. Ch. 561; 32 L. T. O. S. 368; 7 W. R. 270; 62 E. R. 164.

P. having retained M. as his solr. for the taxation of a bill of costs delivered by J., P.'s former solr., obtained the common order for taxation. Before the taxation was completed, J., without M.'s knowledge, & with the intention of stopping the taxation & so defeating M.'s lien for his costs, paid P., who was in distressed circumstances, a small sum in settlement of the taxation, which consequently dropped:—Held: M. was entitled to an order against J. for taxation & payment of the costs incurred by P. to him, M., up to the time when the taxation against J. dropped.—Re MARGETSON & JONES, [1897] 2 Ch. 314; 66 L. 3138. ———.]—Pltf. brought an action to recover £400, the balance due under a building contract. Shortly before the action was expected to be in the paper for trial by an Official Referee, pltf. & deft. had an interview, the only other person present being deft.'s secretary, at which in spite of a written protest on the part of pltf.'s solr., they settled the action on certain terms, including the payment by deft. to pltf. of £200 in discharge of all claims including costs. Deft. gave pltf. a crossed cheque to order for £180 drawn on a country bank, & pltf., who was an undischarged bkpt., immediately indorsed it to one of his sons. On hearing of this, pltf.'s solr. required deft. to stop payment of the cheque, but deft. refused to do so. Thereupon, on an application by pltf.'s solr., the Official Referee made an order that deft. should pay pltf.'s solr. his costs on the ground that pltf. & deft. had settled the action behind the back of pltf.'s solr., knowing & intending that the settlement would have the effect of depriving the solr. of his costs:—Held: there was no evidence from which it could be inferred that deft. intended pltf.'s solr. to lose his costs.—REYNOLDS v. REYNOLDS (1909), 26 T. L. R. 104, C. A.

3139. — Client suing in formâ pauperis.]—Where a pauper pltf. settles the action behind the back of his attorney, it is entirely a question for the discretion of the ct., under the particular circumstances of the transaction, whether they will interfere & set aside the proceedings.

Where a pauper pltf. settled the action behind his attorney's back, by executing a release, but it appeared that he was the first to make the application, & that the arrangement was fair & reasonable, deft. having pleaded a plea of release puis darrein continuance, the ct. refused to set aside the deed & the plea at the instance of the attorney.—JONES v. BONNER (1848), 2 Exch. 230; 5 Dow. & L. 718; 17 L. J. Ex. 343; 154 E. R. 476.

3140. — The ct. will not interfere, even in the case of pltf. suing in formâ pauperis, to prevent effect being given to a settlement between the parties, although it be evident that the attorney will lose his costs, unless the settlement be clearly collusive.

In cases of this description the ct. requires a clear case of collusion to be made out before they will at the instance of pltf.'s attorney, interfere to prevent effect being given to an adjustment of the disputes between the parties themselves (WILDE, C.J.).—FRANCIS v. WEBB (1849), 7 C. B. 731; 137 E. R. 289.

3141. Solicitor agreeing to compromise on behalf of infant—Retention of lien.]—A solr. acting for infants in an action, in consenting to a judgment compromise whereby a specific fund brought into ct. in the action is ordered to be paid out to trustees for the benefit of the infants, is entitled to the ordinary solr.'s lien for his costs upon the interests of the infants in the fund as fully & effectually as he would have been entitled thereto had his clients been persons sui juris; & it is not necessary though it may be desirable, that his right under such lien should be expressly reserved by the judgment.—Re WRIGHT'S TRUST, WRIGHT v. SANDERSON, Re SANDERSON'S TRUST, WRIGHT v. SANDERSON, [1901] 1 Ch. 317; 70 L. J. Ch. 119; 83 L. T. 515, C. A.

after a settlement between the parties, he must show a clear case of collusion.—ANON. (1830), 9 L. J. O. S. Ex. 6.

3144. — An attorney is not justified in proceeding with an action after it has been settled between the parties themselves, though it is known that costs have been incurred, & that pltf. himself is not in a position to pay them; it must be shown affirmatively, that the settlement was come to for the purpose of cheating the attorney.—JORDAN v. But to entitle pltf.'s attorney to issue execution for the damages recovered against deft., by reason of deft.'s enabling pltf. to get possession of the chattel, & thus to deprive the attorney of his lien, he must make out a case of collusion between the parties for that purpose.—SMITH v. 3148. — To warrant the ct. in setting aside a settlement of an action, even after final judgment signed, which has taken place between pltf. & deft. behind the back of the attorney, it is not enough that the consequence of such settlement will be that the attorney will be deprived of his costs, but it must be clearly shown that such a settlement was fraudulent & collusive.—MOORE v. He also counterclaimed for damages. After the reply had been delivered & notice of trial given, but before trial, pltf., without the knowledge or intervention of his solr., entered into negotiations with deft. & his solrs., which resulted in an agreement of Nov. 2, 1888, that the action should be settled on the terms that pltf. should receive the £50 paid into ct. in full discharge of all claim by him, deft. to do whatever might be necessary to enable pltf. to obtain payment out of ct. of the £50. On Nov. 3, 1888, pltf. signed a notice of his intention to appear in person, which was served upon his solr. On Nov. 4, pltf.'s solr. wrote to deft.'s solr., giving them notice not to pay pltf. any money until his costs in the action had been paid. On Nov. 10, deft.'s solrs. obtained payment out of ct. to themselves of the £50, & on Nov. 13 they paid it over to pltf.

There was no evidence that the compromise was entered into to deprive pltf.'s solr. of his costs:—Held: the £50 must be treated as the fruits of the action, & after express notice of pltf.'s solr.'s lien, neither deft., nor his solrs., were entitled to pay that money to pltf. in disregard of the notice. Inasmuch as the money did not come to deft.'s hands, & no notice was given to him, he was under no liability to pltf.'s solr.; but pltf. & deft.'s solrs. were liable to pay to pltf.'s solr. the £50 or such less sum as should satisfy his lien.

B. & co.'s actions in the meantime ripened into judgments. C. at the date of the deed owed D. a sum exceeding the amount of the taxed costs. If C., who had not acceded to the deed, was reckoned as a creditor of D. for the amount of taxed costs, the deed was not assented to by the requisite majority of creditors. C.'s solr. had not been paid his bill of costs in the bkpcy. proceedings, & claimed his lien on the costs payable by D.:—Held: C.'s solr. was entitled to a lien on the costs ordered to be paid by C. to D., & therefore the debt due from C. to D. could not be set off against them.—*Re DAVIES, Ex p. should be entered by setting-off a decree upon an award in their favour against pltf., it appeared that a prohibitory order had been made against pltf. in execution of a decree obtained by a third party, & the attorney for pltf. claimed a lien for costs on such decree:—Held: debts.' application to set-off was proper, but that this was not a case in which the ct. ought to hold that the solr.'s lien intercepts the force of judgments of nonsuit, in suits which deft. had brought against pltf. in Ireland. Plea of set off on judgments recovered by deft. against pltf. in Ireland. Replication on equitable grounds, that deft. ought not to be allowed to set off against pltf.'s claim the amount mentioned in the plea, because pltf. retained one C. as his attorney to conduct his defence in the suits in the declaration mentioned, & pltf. owes him the full amount of the costs, & C. has a lien upon the orders, & the amounts are therefore due from deft. to pltf. as trustee for C., & pltf. sues as such trustee. On demurrer:—Held: the replication was bad, for the fact, that an attorney had obtained a judgment for a client, & that costs were due to the attorney, did not raise the relation of trustee & cestui que trust between the client & the attorney with respect to the proceeds of such judgment; & the so-called lien of the attorney was merely a claim to the protection of the ct. as to his costs when the equitable interference of the ct. is asked for the purpose of setting off one judgment against another.—*MERCER v. P., having obtained an award in his favour in an action against M., to the effect that M. should pay him certain sums of money, the attorney of P. in the action obtained an order for his costs under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, upon these sums. The property was ordered to be sold, & the money paid into ct., & certain accounts & inquiries were ordered to be taken; & it was also ordered that pltfs.' costs of the action up to & including the hearing be costs in the action, & further consideration was adjourned with liberty to apply. Before the accounts had been taken, or the property sold, the solrs. of pltfs. presented a petition under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), alleging that pltfs. threatened to change their solrs., & compromise the action without making any provisions for petitioners' costs, & their share in the property not sufficient to pay those costs. Appls. were the solrs. to the trustee of a bkpt.'s estate. Bkpt. had sold his stock-in-trade, & gone with the proceeds of the sale to Australia. He was arrested there, & brought back to this country on a charge of offences against Debtors Act, 1869 (c. 62), preferred by order of a ct. of bkpcy. made under s. 16 of that Act upon the application of appls. on behalf of the trustee. On the bkpt.'s arrest a sum of money, the proceeds of the before-mentioned sale, was found upon him & taken possession of by the Australian police. Under a power of attorney prepared by appls., as solrs. to the trustee, this money was handed over by the police & remitted to appls. in this country:—Held: this money was not property recovered or preserved in the bkpcy. proceedings, or any other legal proceeding within Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, & therefore an order could not be made under that sect. charging appls.' costs upon it.

3269. — Effect of termination of interest—Death of tenant in tail without issue & without disentailing.—By virtue of the decree in a suit to set aside an appointment & uphold a settlement, A. became entitled to an estate in tail in certain property. A. died, before he had paid his solr.'s costs of the suit, without issue, & without having executed a disentailing deed, & the property devolved on certain persons under the settlement. On a petition by the solr. that he might be declared entitled to a charge on the property for the amount of his costs:—Held: he was not entitled to any charge on the property, as the interest of his client, on which alone he would have been entitled to a charge, had determined by his death.—*BERRIE v. 3270. — Property of persons not employing solicitor.—The right of a solr. under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, to a charging order upon a fund recovered or preserved by his exertions, for his taxed costs, charges, & expenses in relation to such recovery or preservation, is in the nature of a salvage claim, & is enforceable against the whole of such fund, & not merely against such part of it as may appear to be the property of his own client.

Such charge ought to be a first charge, & may be made in respect of costs not already taxed, it being in the power of the ct. to direct the taxation in the order giving the charge.

The charge should be for costs, charges, & expenses "properly incurred."—CHARLTON v. CHARLTON (1883), 52 L. J. Ch. 971; 49 L. T. 267; 32 W. R. 90.

3271. — ——B. was in possession of real estate as trustee of a will, under the trusts of which he was beneficially entitled to a share & pltf. to another share. By deed of Aug. 1867, pltf. conveyed her interest to B., who made a mtge. of the property to C. After this pltf. having discovered early deeds under which she claimed to be tenant in tail of the whole estate by a title paramount to the will, filed a bill against B. & C. praying that the deed of Aug. 1867, might be set aside, that she might be declared entitled as tenant in tail, & that the mtge., so far as it affected her interest, might be declared void. This bill was dismissed, & the dismissal was affirmed on appeal:—Held: the whole property was preserved for the persons entitled under the will by the defence conducted by B.'s solr.; & the solr. was entitled to a charging order for his costs upon the whole estate, & not merely upon B.'s beneficial interest in it.—*BULLEY v. The wife retained a solr. who successfully conducted her defence, & the bill was dismissed with costs. The husband was unable to pay the costs, & thereupon the solr. presented a petition under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), for the purpose of charging the annuity with the taxed costs of the suit:—Held: petitioner was entitled to have the costs raised & satisfied by a sale of a sufficient portion of the settled property.—Re KEANE, LUMLEY v. 3277. — Action for debenture-holders—Property sufficient for payment of debenture-holders in full—Improbability of recovering from clients.]—In a debenture-holder's action a receiver was appointed, & the same solr. acted for pltf. & for the receiver. In the course of realising the estate proceedings were taken at home & abroad with the sanction of the ct., & the solr. was employed by the receiver for these purposes. In the result property was recovered or preserved, & the funds paid into ct. were sufficient to pay all the debenture-holders in full & to leave a large surplus for the liquidator of the co. Pltf. being unable to pay the difference between party & party & solicitor & client costs of the action :—Held : (1) the solr. was entitled to a charging order for such difference upon so much of the funds as belonged to the debenture-holders ; (2) the solr. was also entitled to a charging order upon the balance of the funds that would be payable to the liquidator for his costs of recovering & preserving assets at home & abroad, which really were part of the receiver's costs of administration & might have been included in his accounts.—*Re HORNE (W. 3278. — Effect of property changing hands—Before charging order applied for—Mortgage of ship.]—(1) After the termination of an action in rem against the owners of a ship for wages & disbursements in which pltf. was partially successful, & after the release of the ship from arrest & its transfer to a limited co., the solrs. of original debt owners applied ex p. & obtained, under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, a charging order upon the ship for their costs in the action. For the enforcement of this charge they also obtained, on notice to mtgees. to whom the vessel had been mortgaged by the limited co., a further order for the appointment of a receiver of freight, & conditionally, for the sale of the vessel. Both orders were subsequently set aside, & the solrs. admitting that the charging order must be postponed to the mtge., appealed as against the limited co. :—Held : the charging order was wrong in form & bad in substance, & together with the consequential order, must be set aside, for at most, the property, if any, preserved by the exertions of the solrs. was limited to the interest of those who instructed them to oppose the claims of the master in respect of his lien on the barque, & the vessel had not only ceased to be under the control of the ct., but had changed hands, & become subject to a mtge., before the charging order was applied for. Furthermore, the co. to whom the vessel was transferred could not be fixed with constructive notice of the possible liability of the vendors for the unpaid costs of their solrs., even though the actual vendor & the promoter of the co. were one & the same person.

(2) The ct., when sitting in Admlty. should follow the practice of the Ch. Div. in requiring notice to the parties affected, & unless the circumstances are very exceptional, should not exercise, on an ex p. application, its discretionary power of Claim by master of ship for wages & disbursements—Counterclaim for money due under agreement to purchase shares—Judgment leaving balance due from master—Charge on master's interest in ship.]—On a claim by a master for his wages & disbursements being referred to the registrar & merchants, a counterclaim was made by the registered owner of the whole ship, which counterclaim included money due from the master under an agreement to purchase certain shares in the ship. In the result it was found, that £103 7s. 8d. was due to pltf. on the balance of his account as master, & £173 11s. 1d. was due from him on account of the counterclaim, thus leaving a balance due from pltf. On a motion by pltf.'s attorney, under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, that he might have a charge for his costs in the suit upon pltf.'s interest in the ship as being property "recovered or preserved" :—Held : as the result of the suit to pltf. was, that he was entitled to a transfer of the shares in the vessel for a less sum than he would have been if the suit had not been instituted, pltf.'s attorney had recovered or preserved the property to pltf., & was entitled to a charge upon it for his costs to an amount not exceeding the sum so preserved.—THE PHILIPPINE (1867), L. 3285. Action for account against trustee—Appointment of receiver—Compromise between parties—Without knowledge of solicitor.]—In a suit by a cestui que trust against a trustee of landed estate, praying for an account & reconveyance, a receiver was ordered to be, & afterwards was, appointed, adversely to deft. Notice of motion for decree was served, but before the time for closing evidence had arrived, pltf., without consulting her solr., & without his knowledge, entered into an agreement with deft. for a compromise of the suit on the terms that a sum of cash should be paid to pltf., then that the mtges. on the property should be paid off, & then that the costs of all parties estimated at a fixed sum should be paid. Upon hearing of the compromise, pltf.'s solr. applied to pltf. & to deft.'s solrs. for the terms of it, but was refused all information. Upon petition under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127):—Held: the solr. was entitled to a first charge for the amount of his taxed costs, as between solr. & client, upon the property of pltf., as having been recovered & preserved through his instrumentality.—*TWYNAM v. 3286. Friendly suit instituted on behalf of infant—Appointment of guardian & provision for maintenance.]—The bill in this suit was filed on June 15, 1863, by M. J., as next friend of the then infant pltf., for a guardian, directions as to the maintenance of pltf. & his brothers & sisters, defts., accounts of the estate of testator, their grandfather, & for a receiver. Solr. employed by the next friend was Mr. J. On July 4, a decree was made, directing inquiries as to testator's real estate; & on Feb. 6, 1864, the chief clerk made his certificate that the real estate was worth about £350 per annum. On Mar. 2, 1864, an order was made for the appointment of a guardian & receiver, & allowing a sum of £220 per annum for the maintenance of pltf. & defts. On Aug. 10, 1866, Mr. J., the solr., died. On Oct. 14, 1867, the infant pltf. attained twenty-one years of age.

In Nov. 1867, he disentailed the real estate of which he was tenant in tail under his grandfather's will. In June, 1868, he obtained an order to discharge the receiver; & on Feb. 10, 1872, procured an order to change his solicitor. On a petition presented under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), by the personal representative of the solr., to establish a charge on the real estate for J.'s costs:—Held: the suit was properly instituted, & the solr. duly "employed" on behalf of the infant; the property was "preserved" in the suit for the benefit of the infant through the instrumentality of the solr.; the infant had, on attaining twenty-one, adopted the suit; Stat. of Limitations was not a bar to the claim: the personal representative of the solr. could present the petition; & an order must be made upon it.—*BAILE v. 3287. Successful suit against incumbrancer—Though incumbrance valueless.]—A solr. is entitled to a charge for his costs on property the subject of a successful suit conducted by him against an incumbrancer, although the incumbrance be entirely valueless, provided it formed a cloud upon the title. It is no objection to an application for such a charge that it is made in a suit which is no longer pending, & which was never brought to a hearing, nor that the property has been sold before the application of the solr.—JONES v. FROST, Re FIDDEY (1872), 7 Ch. App. 773; 42 L. J. Ch. 47; 27 L. T. 465; 20 W. R. 1025, L. JJ.

3288. Administration suit against trustee—Decree with direction for appointment of new trustee—Suit abandoned by plaintiff.]—In a suit by a residuary legatee against the sole surviving trustee of testator's estate an administration decree was made, & it was ordered that a new trustee be appointed. The decree was carried into chambers & the accounts brought in, when pltf. stopped all further proceedings in the suit. On a petition by the solr. who had acted for pltf. in the suit, praying that his costs might be charged on pltf.'s interest in the estate, under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28:—Held: there had been no "property recovered or preserved" within the Act, & the solr. was not entitled to any charge.—*PINKERTON v. 3289. Refusal of mandatory injunction for pulling down buildings—Suit relating to easement only.]—A bill was filed alleging that deft. had built so as to obstruct pltf.'s ancient lights, & was proceeding to build so as further to obstruct them, & asking for an injunction against further building, & a mandatory injunction to pull down part of what had been built. An interlocutory injunction was granted against building higher, & the suit was afterwards compromised on the terms that the building should remain of its then height. Deft. having become bkpt., his solr. petitioned to have his costs made a charge on deft.'s property to which the suit related:—Held: no property had been recovered or preserved within Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28. A suit which only relates to an easement is not a suit in which it can be said that property is recovered or preserved, even though a mandatory injunction for pulling down buildings is refused.

No doubt it [sect. 28] applies to property of all kinds: personal property & real property, corporeal & incorporeal property, property in possession & property in remainder or reversion (MELISH, L.J.).—FOXON v. Afterwards B. & C. sued out a plaint in a county ct. for administration of the estate, & brought into ct. the proceeds of the goods of the intestate, which they had hitherto concealed:—Held: the solr. who acted for A. in the action of detinue was entitled to a charge or lien upon the fund in the hands of the registrar of the county ct. under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, as "property recovered or preserved through his instrumentality," in respect of his costs incurred by him, to be taxed as between attorney & client, & this was the proper ct. in which to make the application.—CATLOW v. 3291 Action to recover sum invested in building society—On ground of fraudulent transfer—Judgment for defendants.—Under R. S. C., Ord. 51, r. 1A, a judge to whom an action has been transferred for trial, has authority to hear a petition by a solicitor under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), for costs incurred in recovering property in the action.

An action was brought by a husband against his wife & another person for a sum of money invested in a building society which the husband alleged to have been fraudulently transferred by his wife to the other person. The building society were also made defts. to the action & appeared. Judgment was given for defts. Upon petition presented under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), by the solr. to defts. other than the building society:—Held: he was entitled to a charge upon the whole sum invested, as being the amount "recovered or preserved" to them.—PORTER v. WEST (1880), 50 L. J. Ch. 231; 43 L. T. 569; 29 W. R. 236.

3292. Money paid into court—Plaintiff's solicitor declining to proceed—Change of solicitor by plaintiff.—Deft. having paid money into ct. in the action, pltf.'s solr. declined to proceed with the action, except on terms to which pltf. would not assent. Thereupon pltf. retained fresh solrs., & obtained an order for a change of solrs. After the order was made the late solr. obtained a judge's order at chambers, charging the money in ct. with his costs in the action:—Held: (1) when an action is pending a judge at chambers has jurisdiction to make such an order; (2) the money in ct. was "property recovered or preserved" within Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28; (3) the order was valid, though pltf.'s solr. had ceased to be such when it was made; (4) though he had discharged himself from the position of pltf.'s solr., yet, as he had not done so wrongfully or improperly, the order was right.

3294. — In bankruptcy proceedings—To abide result of action in High Court.—In an action in the High Ct. deft. counterclaimed for money due from pltf., & also took proceedings in bkpcy. against pltf. The bkpcy. proceedings were stayed, on payment of £300 into the Bkpcy. Ct. to abide the result of the action. The action & all matters in dispute were referred, & an award made in pltf.'s favour. Pltf.'s solr. applied for a charging order on the £300 for his costs. The Div. Ct. declined to make the order, on the ground that it had no power to do so, & also that no sufficient merit had been shown:—Held: the money was not "property preserved" within the meaning of Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, inasmuch as the right to it depended on the discretion of the Bkpcy. Ct., which might be affected by circumstances outside the litigation.—PIERSON v. KNUTSFORD ESTATES CO. (1881), 13 Q. B. D. 666; 53 L. J. Q. B. 181; 32 W. R. 451, C. A.

3295. — Under R. S. C., Ord. 14.—Pltf.'s solrs. obtained an order under above Ord. that deft. should, as a condition of leave to defend, pay the amount claimed into ct. Subsequently pltf., without the knowledge of his solrs. & without making any provision for their costs, compromised the action, & discharged them from their employment. Deft. then applied for an order for the payment out to him of the money in ct., & produced pltf.'s consent to such order being made; but the master being of opinion that the compromise was collusive refused to make the order. The solrs. then applied under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, for a charging order upon the money in ct.:—Held: the money in ct. was under the circumstances "property preserved" within the sect., & there was jurisdiction to make a charging order.—MOXON v. SHEPPARD (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 627; 59 L. J. Q. B. 286; 62 L. T. 726; 38 W. R. 704, D. C.

3296. — Defence denying liability—Plaintiff proceeding with action.—Pltf. claimed £742 for work done under a contract to repair defts.' ship. Defts. paid £500 into ct., with a denial of liability, & counterclaimed damages for pltf.'s delay in completing the work according to the contract. Pltf. proceeded with the action, & in the result £165 was found to be due to him on his claim, & £210 to defts. on their counterclaim:—Held: (1) the sum paid into ct. was not property "recovered or preserved" by the exertions of pltf.'s solr. within Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, so as to entitle him to charge the whole sum with payment of his costs; (2) the claim & counterclaim must be treated as one action for the purpose of determining the solr.'s right to a charging order for his costs; the sum recovered in the action was the balance remaining in favour of pltf. after deducting from the amount found to be due on his claim the amount found to be due to defts. on their counterclaim, & therefore pltf.'s solr. was only entitled to a charging order in respect of that balance.—WESTACOTT v. BEVAN, [1891] 1 Q. B. 774; 60 L. J. Q. B. 536; 65 L. T. 263; 39 W. R. 363; 7 T. L. R. 290, D. C.

3297. — Security for costs of appeal—Appeal abandoned—Appeal against judgment of Prize Court.]—A sum of £500 was paid into ct. by claimants as security for the costs of their appeal to the Privy Council against a judgment of the Prize Ct. condemning their vessel for the carriage of contraband. The appeal was abandoned. Thereupon cross-summonses were issued: (a) by claimants' solrs. for payment out of the sum in ct.; (b) by the Procurator-General for a charging order on the sum in ct., on the ground that the unsecured balance of the taxed costs of the Crown in the proceedings in the Prize Ct. would absorb the whole sum remaining after taxation of the Crown's costs in the abandoned appeal. Claimants' solrs. contended that, at any rate so far as their own costs were concerned, they had a prior claim upon the fund in ct.:—Held: as the solrs. had neither recovered nor preserved the fund the equitable jurisdiction of the ct. did not apply in their favour, & the Procurator-General's application for a charging order upon the whole fund must be allowed.—THE DIRIGO, [1920] P. 425; 90 L. Costs paid under order of court—Refunded by order of Court of Appeal.]—Costs paid under order of the ct. below & ordered by the Ct. of Appeal to be refunded are properly recovered within Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28. An action was dismissed with costs, which were taxed at £298 & paid. On appeal this judgment was reversed, leave was given to amend the pleadings, & the action was ordered to proceed on the amended pleadings, & defts. were ordered to repay to pltfs. the costs they had received & to pay to pltfs. their costs of the appeal, which were taxed at £165. After this pltfs. became bankrupt. On the application of the solrs. who had acted for pltfs. in the appeal:—Held: they were entitled to receive from defts. the £165, & also to receive from defts. out of the £298 the difference between the £165 & pltfs.' costs of the appeal taxed as between solr. & client, & the balance only of the £298, after paying the above difference & the costs of the solrs. & defts. of the application, was to be paid to the trustee in the bkpcy.—*GUY v. 3304. Annual sum secured to wife—On decree for dissolution of marriage—Costs appearing to be recoverable from husband—Facts rebutting presumption of contract by wife.]—A decree for dissolution of marriage having been made on the wife's petition, an order was made under Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857 (c. 85), s. 32, directing her husband to secure to her for life the annual sum of £130. Upon application by the solrs. who had acted for the wife under the petition for an order under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, charging their costs upon such annual sum of £130:—Held: such annual sum was "property recovered or preserved by the solrs.," & therefore liable to a charging order under s. 28; but the ct. refused, in the exercise of its discretion, to make the order, on the ground that upon the facts it could not be presumed that the wife had entered into a contract with the solrs. so as to bind her separate property; the husband was therefore prima facie responsible, & for anything that appeared the costs could be recovered from him.—*HARRISON v. 3305. Property devised & bequeathed by will—Action to establish validity of will.]—Testator by his will, after bequeathing his household furniture & effects to his wife, devised & bequeathed the residue of his real & personal estate to his wife for life, &, after her decease, to his two daughters, of whom one was his legitimate daughter by a former wife & the other was illegitimate, in equal shares. Probate of the will being opposed by testator's daughters, the exor. brought a probate action against them to establish its validity, with the result that probate of the will was decreed. The bulk of the estate was realty:—Held: the solr. who acted for the exor. was entitled under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, to a charge for his costs in the action upon the property devised & bequeathed by the will as property preserved through his instrumentality.—Ex p. TWEED, [1899] 2 Q. B. 167; 68 L. J. Q. B. 794; 81 L. T. 1, 48 W. R. 5, C. A.

3306. Winding up & reconstruction of company.]—A limited co. being unable to meet its liabilities, executions were levied on the co.'s property by creditors, & other creditors threatened actions. An extraordinary meeting of the co. was then held, & resolutions were duly passed to wind up the co. voluntarily. It was further resolved that the liquidator should submit a proposal for the reconstruction of the co.

A scheme of arrangement, sanctioned by order of the court, under the Joint Stock Companies Arrangement Act, 1870 (c. 104), provided that a new co. should be incorporated; that one of its objects should be the acquisition & undertaking of the assets & liabilities of the co.; that the new co. should discharge the unsecured debts of the co. by allotting to the unsecured creditors fully paid-up shares in the new co. in full discharge of their claims against the co.; & that the shareholders of the co. should receive partly paid up shares in the new co. It was also provided that the new co. should pay all the costs of the winding up & of the scheme of arrangement.

In pursuance of this order an agreement, subsequently adopted by the new co., was made between the liquidator & the trustee of the future

new co. whereby it was provided that part of the consideration payable by the new co. to the liquidator should be cash. The new co. did not pay cash, & the assets of the co. accordingly were not transferred to the new co.:—Held: the co.'s assets purchased by the new co. & retained by the liquidator were to be charged with the costs of the co.'s solr. which had arisen in connection with the winding up & reconstruction of the co., the co.'s property having been "recovered or preserved" through the instrumentality of the solr. within Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28.—Re JOHN CLAYTON, LTD. (1905), 92 L. 3307. Compromise of administration action.]—

In an action by beneficiaries under a will against the trustees for (inter alia) execution of the trusts of the will, an account of testator's business, which had been carried on by the trustees under a power in that behalf, & administration, a receiver & manager of the business was appointed on motion, & the action was ultimately compromised at the trial, one of the terms of compromise being that the costs of all parties should be paid out of the estate, including in the costs of the trustees all costs, charges, & expenses incurred by them as exors. & trustees of the will. In the result the action proved disastrous to the trust estate, the business, which previously had been profitable, having to be closed down for want of capital, & the assets of the estate being insufficient to pay the costs of all parties. On an application by plffs.' solrs. for a charging order for their costs under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, & by the trustees for a declaration of priority in respect of their costs, charges, & expenses:—Held: (1) inasmuch as the property had been managed & retained for the rightful owners, it had been "preserved" within the meaning of s. 28; it did not matter that in fact the property when it had been preserved for the benefit of the parties entitled yielded little or nothing for them; & in the circumstances plffs.' solrs. were entitled to a charging order for their costs; (2) having regard to the long-established practice of the Ch. Div. indemnifying trustees for all expenditure properly incurred in relation to their trust estate, & also to the express terms of the compromise, deft. trustees were entitled to payment of all their costs, charges, & expenses in priority to the charging order obtained by plffs.' solrs.

(3) The power of the ct. to make a charging order is discretionary, & it will not be made if the effect is to deprive trustees of their costs, charges, & expenses where they have done nothing to dis-entitle themselves to the consideration of the ct.—*Re TURNER, WOOD v. 3308. Claim for declaration of title to premises—Appointment of receiver & manager—Discontinuance by plaintiff.]—In an action by a wife against her husband claiming as her property the assets of a bridge club carried on by them jointly, the wife obtained an order for the appointment of a receiver & manager of the property. She subsequently abandoned her claim in the action. On an application by her solrs. for a charging order under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, in respect of their costs of obtaining the receivership order:—Held: the property had neither been recovered nor preserved through the instrumentality of the solrs. & they were therefore not entitled to the order.—*WINGFIELD v. 3309 i. Costs in particular matter or suit—Not general costs.]—A solr. is entitled under 39 & 40 Vict. c. 44, s. 3, to a charge for costs incurred in recovering or preserving property, not only against his own client, but against all persons entitled to the property. But the charging order must be confined to costs of proceedings in the ct. where it is made. It does not extend the knowledge of the trustee in his bkpcy., brought an action, claiming (inter alia) remuneration for services rendered by him as an architect to deft., & damages for wrongful dismissal. Def't., without admitting any legal liability to pl'tf. paid £360 into ct. Pl'tf. took out a summons to have the money paid out to him, but before the summons was heard the action came to the knowledge of the trustee, & he obtained an order joining him as co-pl'tf. in the action, on the ground that the remuneration & damages claimed were his property. The bkpt.'s solr. then applied for a charging order on the £360 in respect of his costs, charges, & expenses of or in reference to the action:—Held: the bkpt.'s solr. was entitled to a charging order for his costs up to the time of the intervention of the trustee.

(2) When the ct. makes an order under the Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, declaring a solr. entitled to a charge upon the property recovered or preserved in an action, it is the duty of the judge to limit the order to costs properly incurred in recovering or preserving the property.

Money paid into ct. by a def't., although accompanied by a defence denying legal liability, may be taken out of ct. by pl'tf., & is, therefore, property "recovered or preserved" within Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28.—*EMDEN v. Costs of proceedings in court of justice—Not in respect of proceedings before arbitrator—Under Land Clauses Act, 1845 (c. 18).]—(1) A solr. is not entitled to a charge under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), upon property of his client "recovered or preserved" for costs in respect of proceedings taken before an arbitrator or jury under Lands Clauses Act, 1845 (c. 18), for compensation, such proceedings not being "proceedings in any Ct. of Justice."

(2) The London agents of a country solr. are not entitled to any such charge as against the original client. They are not the solrs. employed within the meaning of Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, their only right being as against the country solrs. who employed them, & who alone are entitled to the statutory charge.

of a solr.'s bill under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, "costs, charges, & expenses" may include fees to counsel which have not been paid before the delivery of the bill or the commencement of the taxation.

A lady was involved in litigation with certain money-lenders. Her son was finding the money for the costs thereof. The lady & her son were being advised by different solrs. The son's solr. prepared the brief in the litigation & the lady's solr. perused & approved it. The litigation was settled, & the lady recovered certain property. Her solr. then applied for a charging order on the property recovered for his costs, charges, & expenses, & obtained by consent an order that his bill of costs as then delivered should be taxed & an undertaking that the amount found due should be paid. The bill of costs contained (a) a sum for counsel's fees which had not then been paid, & (b) a sum for preparing the brief in the litigation. Upon taxation of the bill:—Held: the counsel's fees, which were paid during the taxation, should be allowed as costs, charges, & expenses, though not paid before the commencement of the taxation, but the sum for preparing the brief should not be allowed.—*Re EDEN, WATKINS v. SUB-SECT. 4.—THE APPLICATION.

A. In General.

3319. Form of application—By summons or petition.]—On Dec. 4, 1878 def't.'s solrs. obtained upon a summons intituled in a partnership action an order charging all moneys in the hands of the receiver & payable to def't., with their costs of the action. On the previous day a judgment creditor of def't. obtained a garnishee order nisi, attaching all moneys in the hands of the receiver then or thereafter to become due to def't., & on Dec. 5, 1878 the garnishee order nisi was served on the receiver, & was subsequently made absolute:—Held: (1) the solr.'s charge had priority to the claim of the creditor under the garnishee order.

(2) A charging order under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28 may be obtained either on summons or petition, & is sufficient if intituled in the action or proceeding in which the property is recovered or preserved.—*HAMER v. R. was solr. for plff. & for J. & A., two of the persons entitled to the other shares. After decree he ceased to be solr. for these parties, & obtained an order directing taxation of his costs as their solr. in the action, including the costs of the application, & charging their shares in the estate with the payment of such costs, with liberty to apply to have them raised. He now, the cause not yet having been heard for further consideration, applied to have the costs raised by a sale of the shares raised:—Held: the application was premature, & no order ought to be made for raising the costs until the cause was heard for further consideration.—*Re GREEN, GREEN v. 3326. — Effect of delay—Proceedings in lunacy.]—A lunatic died in June, 1853. In Feb. 1854 an order in lunacy was made, by which it was declared that the costs incurred in prosecuting the commission had been incurred for the benefit of the lunatic, & the bill was directed to be taxed. The taxation was completed in Feb. 1855, & after this the solr. who had been employed in prosecuting the commission delivered for the first time a signed bill of costs. In Oct. 1860 the solr. presented a petition to have his costs raised out of property of which the lunatic, who left issue, had been tenant in tail:—Held: under the proviso contained in Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 29, the application was too late.—Re CUMMING (1860), 2 De G. 3327. ———— No ground for refusing order—Unless other rights have arisen.]—Delay by a solr. in applying under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, for an order charging his costs on property recovered by him is no ground for refusing the order unless other rights in respect of the property have arisen in the meantime.

Solrs. employed by a limited co. recovered a claim against an estate in course of administration by the ct. The co. was subsequently wound up by the ct. Shortly after the winding-up order was made, the solrs. applied for an order charging their costs on the co.'s share of the fund in ct. to the credit of the administration action:—Held: as the charging order in this case conferred no new right, but was only a cheap & speedy mode of enforcing the common law lien on the co.'s share of the fund in ct., which lien existed prior to the winding up, the ct., in the exercise of its discretion under the statute, would make the order.—*Re BORN, CURNOCK v. A charging order under the sect. can be made by any judge of the Div. in which the "suit, matter or proceeding" has been heard, & the application for the order need not necessarily be made to the particular judge who heard the suit, matter or proceeding.

An application to discharge a charging order under the above sect., as in all cases in which it is sought to set aside ex p. proceedings, must be made promptly; for instance, an application

On an application that the amount of these costs, which had been taxed, but not paid in consequence of the trust estate not having been realised, should be declared to be a charge on the trust property:—Held: petitioner having already obtained an order for the payment of these costs, the ct. could not under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, declare the amount to be a charge on the estate.—Re VINEY'S TRUST (1868), 18 L. 3346. - - - In respect of costs for which charge sought.]—In a creditor's administration action the usual decree was made on July 1, 1907. In Jan. 1910, pltf. entered into a contract for the sale of the only outstanding asset for £383. Deft., the surviving extrix., opposed the confirmation of this contract on the ground of undervalue, & the property was ordered to be sold by auction. At this sale, of which deft. had the conduct, considerable expenses were incurred, & the property fetched £400, which was paid into ct. In Jan. 1911, on further consideration, an order was made that a sum of £64 found due from deft. to the estate should be set off against her costs, & that the residue of her costs & those of pltf. should be paid out of the £100. The solrs. who had acted for deft. throughout the proceedings applied for a charging order for the whole of their costs on the fund in ct. as being property recovered or preserved in the proceedings within Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 88:—Held: the order was in the discretion of the ct., & the ct. would not make it in this case, because the order on further consideration practically ordered the same costs as those for which the solrs. now asked for a charge to be paid to their client.—Re COCKRELL'S ESTATE [1912] 1 Ch. 23; *sub nom. Prior to the commencement of the action deft.'s solrs. had been pressing pltf. for a settlement of claims of clients of theirs against him, & for their own costs when acting for him; & pltf. after the compromise of the action but before the arbitrator made his award, wrote to deft.'s solrs. that he agreed to their settling the amount due to themselves & to certain named clients of theirs "out of the money coming in from Paris s.s."

By his award the arbitrator fixed the sum due from defts. to pltf., which, with the agreed costs of the reference, made a total of £405 11s. 8d., & defts.' solrs. forwarded to pltf.'s solrs. a cheque for "small" amount as being the balance out of the above total sum after paying the named clients and themselves. Pltf.'s solrs. took out a summons under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, for a charging order. It was admitted that there was no collusion, & it was agreed that the award should be treated as a decree:—Held: pltf.'s solrs. in the action were entitled to an order charging the sum recovered with the pltf.'s costs to be taxed as between solr. & client, on the ground that the fund recovered by the exertions of pltf.'s solrs. was fixed, though not worked out, at the date of the compromise, & the subsequent assignment of the fund was void under the statute as being an act done operating to defeat the right of the solrs. to a lien for costs, of which right, by reason of the fund being a sum recovered in the action, deft.'s solrs., & their clients through them, were affected with notice.—THE PARIS, [1896] P. 77; 65 L. 3366. —.]—The amount of the debt & costs recovered by pltf. in an action had been levied, & were in the hands of the sheriff, when a judgment creditor of pltf. took out a garnishee summons to attach this money. After the summons was taken out, but before any order was made thereon, the solr. who had acted for pltf. in the action, the proceeds of the judgment in which it was sought to attach, obtained under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, from a judge at chambers, an order charging in his favour the money in the hands of the sheriff. The judgment creditor applied to set this order aside:—Held: the charging order had priority & ought not to be set aside, the judgment creditor who had taken out the garnishee summons was not a bonâ fide purchaser for value within Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, & the word "property" in that sect. included both the debt & the costs recovered in the action.—*DALLOW v. In 1881 S. mortgaged his interest under the agreement to C. In 1891 the trustees, as mtgees., advertised the three houses for sale by public auction. At this time S. had paid the instalments for one house, & he brought an action against the trustees & M., claiming specific performance of the agreement, & an injunction to restrain the sale. At the trial, defts. were ordered to convey to S., or his mtgees., the one house in respect of which the purchase-money had been paid, & a set-off of costs was directed.

Pending the trial, C. had refused either to release her charge over the one house in question or to concur in any way with S. in the prosecution of his action. The solrs. of S. applied for a charging order on the house to secure to them their taxed costs of the action:—Held: they were entitled to the order, & it had priority over C.'s mtge.—*SCHOLEY v. 3372. Claim by foreign consul—Salvage action.]—Salvage actions were brought against an Italian vessel, & she was sold by order of the ct. After the salvors had been remunerated, the balance of the fund in ct. was insufficient to satisfy the costs of the solrs. who had appeared in the above actions for the parties interested in the ship, & who sought to enforce their claim for such costs by virtue of Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, as well as the claim of the Italian consul in respect of the expenses of sending the crew back to Italy. It was proved that by the law of Italy such expenses & the keep of the master and crew ranked next to the salvage payments:—Held: the claim of the Italian consul had priority to that of the solrs.—THE LIVIETTA (1883), 8 P. 3374. ———. Person with knowledge of action & solicitor's employment.]—Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, provides for the making of an order declaring a solr. employed in any suit, matter, or proceeding, in any ct. of justice, entitled to a charge upon the property recovered or preserved for his costs, & that all conveyances & acts done to defeat such charge shall, "unless made to a bonâ fide purchaser for value without notice," be void as against such charge.

A solr. had acted for pltf. in an action, which was compromised by deft.'s agreeing to pay a sum of money to pltf. by instalments. Pltf. assigned for valuable consideration the money payable to him under the compromise to a person who had been a witness in the action. It was not proved that express notice of the claim of pltf.'s solr. for costs had been given to the assignee. Subsequently to the assignment the solr. obtained a charging order upon the money recovered in the action for his costs:—Held: the assignee, being aware that the subject-matter of the assignment to him was money recovered in an action, in which the solr. had acted for pltf., must be taken to have had notice of the solr.'s rights in respect of his costs, & therefore was not "a purchaser for value without notice" within the meaning of the Act; & consequently the solr. was entitled to a charge upon such money in priority to the assignee.—*COLE v. 3375. Landlord claiming rent—Not having distrained.]—In an action in the Ch. Div. by one partner against another for a dissolution of the partnership, judgment was given for a dissolution & the appointment of a receiver of the assets of the partnership. Both the partners were afterwards adjudged bkpt.; the action was transferred to the Q. B. Div. in bkpcy. & the judge having jurisdiction in bkpcy. made an order under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, charging the costs of pltf.'s solr. on the funds in the hands of the receiver. Before this order was made, the landlord of the premises in which bkpts. had carried on their business had given notice to the receiver of a claim for rent due to him but had not attempted to distrain. The judge was not informed of this claim before he made the order & he subsequently made a further order, by which he directed the receiver to pay the rent due to the landlord & to pay the balance in his hands to the solr.:—Held: (1) the landlord not having distrained had no lien on the funds in the hands of the receiver in priority to the solr.; (2) the charging order was not made by the judge in the exercise of his bkpcy. jurisdiction & he had consequently no power to rescind or vary it under Bkpcy. 3376. Trustee in bankruptcy.]—A suit was commenced in Jan. 1887, to establish a will & codicil. Pltf. was the surviving exor. appointed by the will, & deft. was a daughter of deceased, who contested the validity of the codicil only. A son of deceased who was the principal legatee under the codicil, obtained leave, on Mar. 8, 1887, to intervene in the suit, & propounded the codicil. On May 3, 1887, the trustees appointed under the bkpcy. of the legatee also obtained leave to intervene, & they, too, propounded the codicil. On Nov. 9, 1887, the case came before the President, who, by consent, pronounced for the will & codicil, & reserved all questions of costs & of the trustees & of other interveners. On Dec. 6, 1887, upon summonses for direction as to these costs, it was ordered that the costs of the bkpt. be paid "out of the residue of the estate, if any." It was stated that there would be no residue.

On Apr. 30, 1889, the judge in chambers made an order giving L.'s solr. a charge in respect of his costs in these proceedings upon the interest of his client under the codicil. This order was served upon the trustees in bkpcy, & upon the surviving exor. The trustees thereupon issued a summons to set aside the order. That came before the judge in chambers, on May 14, & was by his direction adjourned into ct., whereupon after reargument:—Held: the trustees in bkpey. having intervened & propounded the codicil, & having obtained judgment thereon, the solr. for the bkpt. was only entitled to a charge upon any residue which might be found due to the bkpt. after his creditors had been satisfied.—KEESON v. The action was continued by new solrs. on behalf of pltf., & judgment was delivered in favour of pltf., ordering deft. to pay him the money. After the trial the former solr. obtained, under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, a declaration of charge upon the sum recovered, "subject to the lien of the present solrs. of pltf. upon the said sum":—Held: the solr. who was solr. at the time the fund was recovered was entitled to a first charge thereon for all his taxed costs of the action, & subject thereto the discharged solr. was entitled to such lien as he obtained under his charging order.—Re WADSWORTH, RHODES v. 3381. Set-off—For damages.]—A collision took place in 1912 between the British steamship K. & the German steamship M. G. The K. was held alone to blame, & the damages were referred to the Registrar for assessment. Before the damages had been assessed war broke out & the reference was not held until after the conclusion of peace. During the war the owners of the K. lost a vessel by German submarine attack, & claimed that under annex 14 to Article 296 of the Treaty of Versailles they had a right to set-off that loss against the damages they had to pay to the owners of the M. G., & that the right of set-off was superior to the right of the solrs. acting for the owners of the M. G., who claimed a charging order on the damages for their costs.

Under art. 297 (h) provision is made (inter alia) for "the net proceeds of sales of enemy property, rights or interests . . . & in general all cash assets of enemies" to be dealt with through clearing offices:—Held: "assets" meant net assets, i.e. subject to the deduction of the cost of collection & realisation; assuming, without deciding, that annex 14 gave the owners of the K. a right of set-off, they would only be entitled to that set-off as against the net assets which would otherwise have to be credited to the Creditor Clearing Office; & the solicitors for the owners of the M. G. were entitled to a charging order upon the damages for their costs, the costs to be taxed as between solr. & client.—THE MARIE

3382. — For costs of unsuccessful appeal.]—There is no general right to a set-off of resp.'s costs of pltf.'s unsuccessful appeal against money paid into ct. by deft. in the action & recovered by pltf. in respect of a claim not the subject of the appeal, & upon which money, subject to the set-off of deft.'s costs of action ordered by the ct. below, pltf.'s solr. had obtained a charging order.

The Ct. of Appeal has a discretion under R. S. C., Ord. 58, r. 4, as to the costs of the appeal, & the charging order having been properly obtained, the ct., in the exercise of that discretion, gave effect to the lien by ordering the costs of the appeal to be set off against the residue of the money in ct. remaining after satisfaction of the charging order.—KNIGHT v. The fourth beneficiary was not a party to this order. The solr. took out a summons for a sale of the property under the liberty to apply. The summons was not served on the fourth beneficiary, as her address was not known:—Held: (1) no order for a sale could be made without notice to the fourth beneficiary; (2) substituted service on her might be allowed, & by means of advertisements; a notice calling upon her to appear within a certain time should be advertised, & thereupon, if she did not appear, an order might be made on the summons.—*ROWLEY v. 3468. —. Pending petition to allow costs of taxation.]—More than one-sixth part of an attorney's bill having been taken off on taxation, deft. presented a petition to the Vice-Chancellor to allow the costs of taxation. SUB-SECT. 5.—DEFENCES.

A. Plaintiff Not Qualified.

See Part II., Sect. 6, sub-sect. 4, B., C., ante.

B. No Benefit from Services.

3476. General rule.—An attorney cannot recover a charge for conducting a suit in which the party charged has not had the benefit of the attorney's judgment & superintendence. Therefore, where, in an action on an attorney's bill, it appeared that pltf. lived at D., five miles from W., that deft. lived at H., fourteen miles from W., & applied to B., who resided at W., & who had been a clerk of pltf.'s, & practised in his name, to carry on the suit for which the bill in question was incurred; B. carried on the suit, & it did not appear that deft. ever saw pltf., or had the benefit of his judgment; the business done at the office at W. was for B.'s benefit, except one-third, which pltf. received for coming over once a week to show his face; Pltf.'s name was not on the door at W., nor was it employed by B. in soliciting business; but B. frequently consulted with pltf.; drafts were sometimes engrossed at D. for the office at W.; the draft of the brief in the suit, which B. had carried on for deft., was in the handwriting of pltf., as well as some items in B.'s books touching that suit; deft., when applied to, admitted the sum claimed, but required to set off a sum due to him from B., which was refused:—Held: a non-suit, directed by the judge who tried the cause, was proper.—HOPKINSON v. SMITH (1822), 1 Bing. 13; 7 Moore, C. P. 237; 130 E. R. 6.

Annotation:—Refd. Shaw v. Arden (1832), 9 Bing. 287.

3478. —.]—In considering an attorney's bill, a charge for work entirely useless may be rejected by the jury; contra, as to a charge for work partly useless, or in respect of which there has been any negligence; the client's remedy in that case being

by a cross action only.—SHAW v. ARDEN (1832), 9 Bing. 287; 1 Dowl. 705; 2 Moo. & S. 341; 2 L. J. C. P. 1; 131 E. R. 623.

3479. —.]—An action by an attorney for his charges incurred in selling or mortgaging the property of a party confined in prison for debt, after such party has petitioned the insolvent ct. for his discharge, cannot be resisted on the ground that such sale or mtge. was fraudulent as against the creditors of the insolvent. The only ground, it would seem, on which such an action can be defended is, that the insolvent could derive no benefit from pltf.'s skill.—TABRAM v. WARREN (1835), Tyr. & Gr. 153.

Loss of benefit due to negligence.—See Sub-sect. 5, C., post.

C. Negligence.

(a) In General.

3480. Whether a defence.—Negligence in the conduct of a cause cannot be set up as a defence to an action on the attorney's bill. At least unless it was negligence such as to deprive deft. of all possible benefit from the cause. Qu.: whether even in such case it can be used as a defence.—TEMPLER v. M'LACHLAN (1806), 2 Bos. & P. N. R. 136; 127 E. R. 576.

ROLT (1833), 2 Dowl. 62.

3487. —.]—An attorney agreed to conduct a cause, & to charge his client only money out of pocket. The client paid money to the attorney during the cause, which was expended in carrying it on. The jury found that the cause subsequently failed by the neglect of the attorney:—Held:

PART IX. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 5.—B.

3476 i. General rule.—Where the defence to an action on an attorney's bill is that the costs were incurred in a suit which the attorney had settled without deft.'s authority, it is a material question for the jury, in determining whether deft. obtained any benefit from pltf.'s services, to ascertain whether the previous suit was settled with his consent.—DIBBLEE v. WOOD (1872), 1 Pug. 137.—CAN.

3480 ii. —.]—Where services charged for by an attorney were required only in consequence of his own mistake or neglect, which a careful person would not have been likely to fall into, a matter affording room for doubt or difficulty, he cannot recover; & such a defence is available under the general issue.—BURNHAM v. BURNS (1862), 21 U. C. R. 349.—CAN.

Sect. 1.—Action: Sub-sect. 5, C. (a) & (b), D., E.

(1) the attorney was not entitled to recover money out of pocket paid by him subsequent to the act of negligence, as money paid to deft.'s use; (2) the client was not entitled to set off the money advanced & expended previous to such negligence.—LEWIS v. SAMUEL (1846), 8 Q. B. 685; 1 New Pract. Cas. 424; 15 L. J. Q. B. 218; 7 L. T. O. S. 60; 10 Jur. 429; 115 E. R. 1031.

3488. —.].—Where a solr. has been retained for & has undertaken a particular business, his bill of costs for carrying that business through to its conclusion is but one bill; & where the business in question is the prosecution of a suit, & the solr. has, by his crassa negligentia in the conduct of the suit, caused the suit to be lost, he cannot recover any portion of his bill.

In a cause, commenced by information, the relators' solr. intending to cross-examine two defts. who had previously been examined in chief on behalf of a co. deft., such defts. were, by mistake, examined upon interrogatories for the examination of witnesses in chief on the part of the informant, & by reason of this mistake, the information was dismissed, with costs:—Held: the mistake was crassa negligentia on the part of the solr., & disentitled him to recover any portion of his bill of costs.—STOKES v. TRUMPER (1855), 2 K. & J. 232; 25 L. T. O. S. 140; 3 W. R. 503; 69 E. R. 766; on appeal, 25 L. T. O. S. 278, 1. JJ. Annotations—Refd. Re Cartright (1873), L. What amounts to negligence.—See Sub-sect. C. (b), post.

(b) What Amounts to.

3489. No benefit resulting from services.—TEMPLER v. M'LACHLAN, No. 3480, ante.

3491. —.].—TAYLOR v. TENNANT (1846), 6 L. T. O. S. 413.

3492. —.].—Loss of benefit partly due to accident.—It is no answer to an action on an attorney's bill for prosecuting a suit for deft., that no benefit has been derived by deft., where the failure does not result wholly from pltf.'s negligence, but partly from accident.—DAX v. WARD (1816), 1 Stark. 409; 171 E. R. 513, N. P.

3493. —.].—Misrepresentation as to effect of bankruptcy.—It is no defence to an action by a solr. against an assignee under a commission of bkpt., that the commission was sued out under a misrepresentation by pltf. that the commission would be operative in the Isle of Man, & that it has been wholly fruitless; for the commission cannot be treated as a mere nullity.—PASMORE v. BIRNIE (1817), 2 Stark. 59; 171 E. R. 572, N. P.

3494. —.].—Question for jury.—If an attorney, conducting a suit, commits an act of negligence by which all the previous steps become useless in the result, he cannot recover for any part of the business done. Whether or not, in such a case, the work became wholly useless by pltf.'s fault, is a question for the jury. Such failure of the work is a defence admissible on non assumpsit, in an action upon the attorney's bill.—BRACEY v. CARTER (1840), 12 Ad. & El. 373; 113 E. R. 853.

3495. —.].—In an action by attorneys for the costs of a defence, which failed, they having been absent on the day of trial, & some of the witnesses consequently not being in ct.:—Held: they were entitled to recover, notwithstanding the verdict had passed against their clients, defts., unless the jury thought that the absence of the witnesses had caused the loss of the verdict, & so made pltf.'s services wholly valueless.—DUNN v. HALLEN (1861), 2 F. & F. 642, N. P.

3496. —.].—In an action by an attorney for the costs of an action to recover a chattel, the subject of a specific bequest, but claimed by the possessor as a gift from testator, the defence being that the action, which had failed, was only brought under the advice of the attorney, & that it was wholly useless; the proper course being to take out an administration summons in Chancery, the course it was ultimately found necessary to adopt:—Held: it was nevertheless for the jury on the whole case, not whether the course was proper, but whether it was so wholly useless as that deft. had derived no benefit from it; also, attorneys might be called & examined as skilled witnesses on that question.—FLETCHER v. WINTER (1862), 3 F. & F. 138.

—Compare Nos. 3476–3479, ante.

3497. Failure to inquire as to solicitor's authority—Arbitration proceedings.—A dispute between A., a married woman, & C. was referred to arbn. After the reference had proceeded for some time, an additional matter was submitted by the attorneys for the parties. C.'s attorney signed the submission in his presence. A.'s attorneys signed in the presence of C.'s attorney, but without any authority from their client. The award was afterwards set aside & C.'s attorney sued him for the expenses of the arbn.:—Held: he had not been guilty of such negligence, in not requiring to see the authority of A.'s attorneys, as would prevent his recovering the amount of his bill.—EDWARDS v. COOPER (1828), 3 C. & P. 277; 172 E. R. 419, N. P.

3498. Ignorance of sessions practice.—Where an attorney was employed by parish officers to conduct an appeal, which failed through the attorney's gross ignorance of sessions practice:—Held: he could not recover in an action on his bill for conducting it.—HUNTLEY v. BULWER (1839), 6 Bing. N. C. 111; 8 Scott, 325; 3 J. P. 787; 3 Jur. 1105; 133 E. R. 44.

3499. Delay in suing out writ.—If an attorney delays to sue a writ, in an action against a constable, until after the expiration of the time within which the action must be brought, or if he omits the words "by statute" in entering deft.'s plea upon the record, in consequence of which omission a verdict given for pltf. is subsequently set aside; these are such instances of negligence as will afford a good defence to an action brought for the recovery of his bill of costs.—ANON. (1845), 4 L. T. O. S. 454, N. P.

3500. —.].—Pltf. had been retained by deft. to bring an action for a false imprisonment against a constable & a person who had acted as a magistrate. The action was brought against the constable only, & not within the time limited by the statute. The constable pleaded not guilty, by statute, but the record was made up without the words "by statute" being inserted in the margin. The then pltf. in consequence obtained a verdict at the trial, but which was subsequently set aside by the ct., as it appeared that the plea had contained the words "by statute" in the margin. Pltf.'s attorney, the now pltf., had thereupon consented to a non-suit, & a moiety of the costs had been levied upon the now deft.

In an action by the attorney for his costs in that action, it was held, that he was not entitled to recover, on the ground of the gross negligence in the matter.—SAFFERY v. WRAY (1846), 7 L. T. O. S. 183.

3505. Action necessitating taking evidence on commission—Commencing action in Court having no power to issue commission.]—Deft. instructed pltf., an attorney, to take proceedings on his behalf to recover a percentage, which he claimed to be due to him from the underwriters on certain policies of assurance. From the circumstances of the case it was clear that to establish his claim it would be necessary to take the evidence of witnesses at Calcutta. Pltf. first wrote letters, demanding payment from the underwriters, & this being refused, he then issued writs against them in the Lord Mayor's Ct., which Ct. he afterwards discovered had no power to issue a commission to examine witnesses, & so the proceedings were useless:—Held: pltf. had been guilty of such negligence in suing in the Lord Mayor's Ct. without first ascertaining whether that Ct. had power to issue a commission, as to disentitle him from recovering his charges in respect of the actions; but that he was entitled to recover for the letters written before action.—COX v. LEECH (1857), 1 C. c. No retainer under seal.]—An attorney, acting for a municipal corp., cannot recover upon his bill of costs against such corp., unless his retainer was under seal; an appointment by restitution of the council is sufficient.—PRESIDENT, ETC. OF SHIRE OF COLAC v. BUTLER (1879), 5 V. L. R. (L.) 137.—AUS.

d. Charges not in tariff & claim rendered as barristers & solicitors.]—In an action for an account due ptfs. for professional services, as solrs., attorneys & barristers, one of the grounds of defence was that that claim was for services rendered as barristers & counsel, that the charges were not in the tariff, & therefore, not recognised by law:—Held: if the contention were sustained, it would revolutionise professional business in this Province, but English rule in its strictness is not applicable to the circumstances of this Province, where the division between attorney & barrister is not recognised; & the Legislature would seem to have been of the same opinion, for, in the attorneys' fees, they allow counsel fees to be taxed which are taxed for the attorney, & cannot be considered in the light of honorariums. The English rule, that a barrister cannot maintain an action for remuneration for advice or advocacy in matters of litigation, does not apply to matters unconnected with & not ancillary to litigated business.—MOTTON v. BRENNAN (1881), 2 R. & G. 162; 1 C. L. T. 663.—CAN.

e. Excuses for delay.]—An action by solrs. to recover the amount of a bill of costs was begun & deft. appeared in Feb. 1883. No further step was taken till Feb. 1892, when ptfs. delivered a statement of claim. Pltf.'s reason for the delay was that deft. had no means to pay during the period of delay. Upon motion by deft. to dismiss & cross-motion by ptfs. to validate the delivery of the statement of claim:—Held: the action should be allowed to proceed.—FINKLE v. LUTZ (1892), 14 P. F. Other Defences.

3508. Part of bill in respect of proceedings improperly undertaken.]—Motion to restrain a solr. from proceeding to recover the amount of a bill of costs refused, although much the greater part of the bill consisted of charges in respect of proceedings improperly taken by the solr.; some few of the items of trifling amount appearing to be due from & properly claimed against the client.—WIGGINS v. PEPPINS (1838), 2 Jur. 320, L. C.; subsequent proceedings (1839), 2 Beav. 403.

3509. Failure to communicate offer of compromise.]—If an attorney who is conducting a cause do not communicate to his client an offer of compromise made by the other party, but go on with the action to put costs in his own pocket he cannot after that charge his client with the costs incurred; but as it is the duty of an attorney to communicate such offer to his client, it must be presumed that he did so till the contrary is shown.—SILL v. THOMAS (1839), 8 C. & P. 762; 173 E. R. 707, N. P.

3510. Payment—Agreement in discharge of former action.]—To an action on an attorney's bill, deft. pleaded that, after the accrual of the causes of action, in the declaration mentioned, pltf. had entered a plaint against deft. in a county ct., & that deft., being an infant at the time of the accrual of the cause of action, sued on in the county ct., gave notice to defend on the ground of infancy, & that thereupon it was agreed between pltf. & deft. that pltf. should accept from deft. £30, & his costs of suit in the county ct., in full satisfaction & discharge of the cause of action in the county ct., & all other causes of action which pltf. then had against deft. Issue having been taken on this plea the judge at the trial told the jury that the only question was whether the agreement was only in respect of the county ct. action, or of all causes of action which pltf. then had against deft.:—Held: no misdirection; the averment in the plea, of infancy at the time of the accrual of the cause of action sued on in the county ct., being immaterial.—COOPER v. PARKER (1853), 14 C. B. 118; 2 C. L. R. 49; 23 L. J. C. P. 41; 22 L. T. O. S. 88; 2 W. R. 16; 139 E. R. 49; affd. (1855), 15 C. B. 822, Ex. Ch.

It is very unusual for people to pay their bills to attorneys till they are regularly made out; & besides as this pltf. has delivered his bill a month before action brought, as he was bound to do, it was in the power of deft. to have had it taxed; & if it had appeared to the master that this note had been given for the fees, he would have deducted that amount from the bill (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—*KING v. There was no undertaking on the part of the client, nor any order upon him, to pay what should be found due. At the request of both parties, the master entertained & decided the question of retainer; & he gave his allocatur for the balance due, & for the costs of the taxation:—Held: the decision of the master upon the question of retainer was conclusive; & the attorneys were entitled to have judgment entered up for them for the amount, under Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 43.—Re LOWLESS & SON (1848), 6 C. 3553. Duty to bring authorities to notice of counsel—With view of presenting authority to court.]—Upon the hearing of an appeal in the House of Lords, it is the duty of counsel to bring to the attention of the House any authority, statutory or other, within their knowledge which bears one way or the other upon the matters under debate, irrespectively of whether or not the particular authority assists the case of the party who is aware of it. It is likewise the duty of those who instruct counsel, if they are aware of any such authority, to bring it to the attention of counsel, in order that they in turn may bring it to the attention of the House.—*GLEBE SUGAR REFINING CO., LTD. v. 3570. ———.]—In a debenture-holder's action against the co. the property comprised in the debentures was sold by pltf. & receiver under an order of the ct. which directed that the purchase-money should be lodged in ct. The purchase-money was in fact received by E., the solr. on the record acting for pltf. It was not paid into ct., but found its way into the hands of one J., an unqualified person, who paid it into his own banking account. J. was associated in business with E., who paid him £1 a week for the use of his offices. J. introduced business which was transacted by E., J. paying out of pocket expenses & participating in the profits of the business introduced by him. Among the business so introduced was the conduct of the action. All payments & receipts passed through J.'s banking account, upon which E. had no authority to draw. Proceedings to recover the purchase-money from E. having failed, pltf. moved before a judge for a seven-day order upon J. to lodge it in ct. Upon the hearing of the motion it was objected that the ct. had no jurisdiction to make a summary order against him.

The judge held that J. had assumed the privileges of a solr. & carried on legal proceedings as an officer of the ct., & was therefore amenable to the summary jurisdiction:—Held: on the 3601. Abuse of or assault on solicitors of opposite party—In solicitor's office.]—An order was made in the suit for the inspection of documents at the office of C., deft.'s solr. An order was also made to stay the proceedings in the suit till security was given for the costs. E., pltf.'s solr., called on C., offered him a bond as security, & left with him a draft copy of the bond for his perusal. E. then proposed to inspect the documents; C. refused to allow him to do so, & also declined to accept the security. E. then left the office, but soon after returned, & asked for the draft bond. C. refused to give it up, & used abusive language to, & assaulted, E., but afterwards apologised for his conduct. On a motion to commit C. for contempt:—Held: he had been guilty of a contempt, within the spirit, if not the letter of the above order; & as the motion to commit was originally sustainable, he must pay the costs of it; but upon appeal this decision was reversed.—*Re CLEMENTS, COSTA RICA REPUBLIC v. 3651. Necessity for demand by person authorised to give receipt—After order for delivery.]—An order was made for the delivery of papers after a demand had been made for them by a person duly qualified to give a receipt; delivery of the papers was refused; no other regular demand being made, an order was pronounced, either for the delivery of the papers or commitment; & on motion the order for commitment was dismissed with costs.—Re DICAS (1831), 9 L. J. O. S. Ch. 183.

3652. ——— Authority must be produced.]—The ct. will not issue an attachment against an attorney for not delivering up papers pursuant to a rule of ct., unless it appear that the demand was by a party duly authorised to make it, & that the authority of the party making the demand, was shown at the time of making it.—DOE d. HICKMAN v. HICKMAN (1840), 8 Dowl. 833; 1 Man. & G. 566; 1 Scott, N. R. 398; 4 Jur. 746; 133 E. R. 457.

3669. ———.]—Re MURRAY, No. 3663, ante.

3670. Mode of proceeding—Summons—Affidavit in support—How intitled.]—One who has been an attorney remains liable to the summary jurisdiction of the ct., for his conduct whilst he was an attorney, although he may have taken his name off the roll & ceased to be an attorney; & on an application against him for a matter springing out of a cause in which he acted as an attorney, the affidavits must be intitled in the cause, though judgment has been signed & execution issued.—SIMES v. GIBBS (1838), 6 Dowl. 310; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 40; 2 Jur. 418.

3671. ——— Time for service.]—By R. S. C., Ord. 71, r. 1, an “originating summons” means “a summons by which proceedings are commenced without writ”:—Held: this definition means a summons by which proceedings which under the old practice would have been commenced by bill in Chancery or by writ are commenced without writ.

Consequently a summons calling upon a solr. to deliver up his client's papers is not an “originating summons” & it is sufficient if it is served two clear days before the day appointed for hearing & it is not necessary that an appearance should be entered to it.—Re HOLLOWAY, Ex p. PALLISTER, [1894] 2 Q. B. 163; 63 L. J. Q. B. 672; 70 L. T. 615; 42 W. R. 433; 10 T. L. R. 411; 38 Sol. Jo. 398; 9 R. 384, C. A.

3672. ——— Necessity for appearance to.]—Re HOLLOWAY, Ex p. PALLISTER, No. 3671, ante.

3673. ——— Not by special interrogatory—During taxation.]—On a reference to the master to tax a bill of costs, leave to exhibit a special interrogatory to solrs., “whether they or either of them had or have any & what papers, documents, etc., in their or his custody or possession,” will not be granted. If they do not deliver up the papers their production must be the subject of another kind of proceeding.—Re BURR, Ex p. NASH (1845), 5 L. T. O. S. 190.

3674. Loss of right to order—Successful defence to action by solicitor for costs—Retainer repudiated.]—If a party successfully resists an action by an attorney plff. for costs, on the ground of his never having been employed as his attorney, he cannot afterwards summarily compel the attorney to give up documents which have come to his possession in the course of the business, for the doing which the action was brought.—Ex p. MAXWELL (1835), 4 Dowl. 87.

3675. Application in Chancery — After order obtained in King's Bench.]—Petition for delivery of documents, after an order upon the same subject obtained from the ct. of Q. B., dismissed.—NEALE v. POSTLETHWAITE (1838), 2 Jur. 987.

3676. Time for delivery up.]—Where the ct. made an order upon a solr. to deliver up papers, the time for delivering up was fixed at three days from the date of the order, & for their return ten days after the purpose for which they were delivered up was answered.—WEBSTER v. LE HUNT (1861), 25 J. P. 662; 9 W. R. 827.

3677. Condition of documents on delivery up—Delivery in reasonable condition.]—It is the duty of an attorney or solr., when duly called upon by his client to deliver to him the papers of which he has the charge, to deliver them in a reasonable condition. The question, whether the condition in which they are delivered is reasonable, is for the jury.—NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. v. SHARP (1854), 10 Exch. 451; 3 C. L. R. 52; 24 L. J. Ex. 44; 24 L. T. O. 3679. Papers delivered to solicitor for particular purpose—Purpose fulfilled by solicitor.]—The ct. will not order an attorney to deliver up deeds which he swears were delivered to him for a special purpose, which he has fulfilled.—SMITH v. COTTERELL (1781), 4 Doug. K. B. 205; 99 E. R. 812.

3680. Lease deposited with solicitor for assignment.]—The ct. will not compel an attorney upon a summary application to deliver up, on payment of his demand, a lease put into his hands for the purpose of making an assignment of it; there being no cause in ct., nor any criminal conduct imputed to him in respect of it.—Re LOWE (1807), 8 East, 237; 103 E. DAVISON* (1837), 1 Jur. 352.

3684. Deed held by solicitor as trustee—Draft of marriage settlement.]—A judge at chamber having made an order requiring an attorney to deliver up to the husband, who had paid for it, the draft of a marriage settlement under which he, the attorney, was a trustee. The ct. refused to set aside the order.—Ex p. HOLDSWORTH (1838), 4 Bing. N. C. 386; 6 Scott, 170; 1 Arn. 189; 7 L. J. C. P. 225; 132 E. R. 836.

3686. Papers retained by solicitor's executor—Executor deceased solicitor's son—Not adopted as solicitor by client of deceased.]—The ct. refused to grant a rule, calling upon an attorney to deliver up papers, when it appeared that the documents had come into his possession as exor. to his father, who had been attorney to appct., but where appct. did not adopt the son as his professional agent.—*Ex p. 3703. Deeds held by solicitor of testator—Claim by executors—Objection by one executor & beneficiaries.]—By a deed of settlement estates were conveyed to trustees to the use of A. for his life, remainder to such uses as he should direct by his will, the deed giving the usual powers for appointing new trustees in case of death, etc. A. devised all the real estates of which he had power to dispose, & all his personalty, to trustees, whom he also made his exors. to sell, & invest the produce, & pay the interest to his widow during her life, & afterwards to stand possessed of the funds in trust for B. & C., share & share alike. A. died, leaving his widow surviving. Two of the exors. proved the will. The last surviving trustee under the settlement died, leaving a son, to whom, as his heir-at-law, the legal estate in the settled property descended, but who never was appointed a trustee. Before & after testator's death, an attorney was employed in business relating to the settled & devised estates, for which a sum of money was due to him; & he held the title deeds.

After testator's death, the son of the trustee under the settlement & one of the exors. joined in an application to the ct. that the attorney might account for all sums received by him in respect of the estates, & deliver up the deeds to the trustees for the estates, on payment to him of anything that might appear to be due from them. The other exor., & all the parties beneficially interested, objected to the application. The ct. refused to interpose, the rights of the parties not being clear, & one exor. not concurring in the motion.—Re BUNTING (1835), 2 Ad. & El. 467; 111 E. R. 181.

SUB-SECT. 1.—SUMMARY ENFORCEMENT.

A. In General.

3710. How application made.]—Re KERLY, SON & VERDEN, No. 3783, post.

3711. Terms must be clear—Damages capable of measurement.]—The attorney for deft. in a cause in this ct. signed an undertaking, whereby, in consideration of pltf.'s agreeing to suspend execution on the judgment, he undertook to make an arrangement with him respecting the payment of the debt & costs, prior to deft.'s being discharged from prison on other detainers; or, in the event of pltf.'s not agreeing to the terms offered, to inform him in sufficient time of deft.'s intended discharge, so that pltf. might not be deprived of his power of lodging a detainer against him:—

pay all costs due: as such an order can only be made upon a person with whom the ct. may settle. If any other person have the deeds, the client must file a bill against him.—ASHLEY v. BUSTEED (1825), 2 Mol. 489.—IR.

PART X. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 5.

k. Attachment—Costs allowed not sanctioned by law.]—Where an attorney on the Queen's Bench practising in an inferior ct. has charged & the judge has allowed costs clearly not sanctioned by law, the Queen's Bench will punish by fine or attachment.—R. v. WHITEHEAD & WARD (1827), Tay. 476.—CAN.

l. — Malpractice.]—The ct. will not attach on a charge of malpractice, where the alleged conduct has been merely inadvertent, & the party complaining has a remedy by action.—Re STUART (1836), 5 O. S. 70.—CAN.

m. — Non-payment of money under judgment.]—CALVERT v. FORBES (No. 5) (1896), 3 Torr. L. R. 353.—CAN.

n. — — —.]—Where a solr. made default in the payment of a sum of money which he received on behalf of his client, & an order for payment within a certain date was obtained from the ct., petitioner undertaking to give credit for any sums due by her, on non-payment of the sum, within the fixed period, an order for attachment was obtained. The solr. not having made any affidavit of credits due from petitioner was not allowed to treat them as a set-off against the sum for non-payment of which the attachment was sought.—Re W. (1874), 22 W. R. 479.—IR.

o. — Responsibility for payment of deposit.]—A solr. who attends a sale, & bids for his client, is responsible for the payment of the deposit, & will be attached if it is not paid.—HOBHOUSE v. HAMILTON (1826), 1 Hog. 401.—IR.

p. — Using language likely to provoke breach of peace.]—An attachment will be granted at the instance of one solr. against another, for using language tending to provoke a breach of the peace immediately after coming out of the master's office.—LAWDER v. DEMPSTER (1829), 2

Ir. L. Rec. 1st ser. 462.—IR.

q. — When conditional order granted.]—A conditional order for an attachment granted against an attorney for not lodging money, but not for not paying costs, as it did not appear by the affidavit that there had been a demand for the costs.—ANON. (1829), 2 Ir. L. Rec. 1st ser. 481.—IR.

r. — Intention of contempt denied.]—When an attorney had been subpoenaed to give evidence on a trial, & excused his absence on the ground that he was attending a motion in the rolls ct., & denied any intention of contempt, the ct. would not grant an attachment at the instance of pltf. against whom there had been a verdict.—COLLINS v. GREENE (1840), 3 I. L. R. 17.—IR.

t. — Failure to bring in assets.]—A solr., executor of a will, who failed to obey an order to bring the assets into ct., was attached.—Re T. (1899), 33 I. L. T. 37.—IR.

Sect. 3.—Liability upon undertakings: Sub-sect. 1, A., B. & C. (a) & (b).]

Held: this was not such an undertaking as the ct. could enforce summarily, inasmuch as they could not measure the damages sustained by the non-performance of it.—THOMPSON v. GORDON (1846), 15 M. & W. 610; 15 L. J. Ex. 344; 4 Dow. & L. 49.

3713. Whole agreement must be before court.]—Upon the compromise of a suit, an agreement was entered into between the respective solrs. of pltf. & defts., from which certain benefits were to be derived by defts., & defts.' solr. undertook to pay to pltf.'s solr. the amount of his bill of costs, & to indemnify pltf. against the costs of other defts. It was not stated by either party whether the other parts of the agreement had or had not been performed. Upon motion in the cause & in the matter of defts.' solr., he was ordered to pay the bill of costs of pltf.'s solr. within two days. But upon appeal to the Lord Chancellor the order was discharged.

This is a contract of various parts, entered into between two parties, & I can no more carry it into effect, as to a particular limb, without knowing what has taken place with respect to others, than I could entertain a suit for one provision of a complicated contract without being informed of the whole. The result is, I think, that the order should be discharged, that the ct. may be put in possession of the whole grounds of the case, & give the other party an opportunity of showing that the jurisdiction should not be exercised (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—GILBERT v. COOPER (1848), 17 L. J. Ch. 265; 11 L. T. O. S. 169, L. C.

3714. Client dying after undertaking given.]—An attorney who stay proceedings upon an undertaking to pay costs is bound to fulfil his engagement, although his client dies before bail is put in.—HELLINGS v. JONES (1825), 3 Bing. 70; 10 Moore, C. P. 360; 3 L. J. O. S. C. P. 164; 130 E. R. 440.

3715. —.] —Pltf.'s attorneys gave deft.'s attorneys an undertaking to pay the costs in the event of deft.'s obtaining a verdict. Deft. obtained a verdict & died; & judgment was entered up within two terms:—Held: pltf.'s attorneys were liable to pay the costs, although no sci. fa. had been sued out by the personal representatives.—CHAUVEL v. CHIMELLI (1833), 4 B. & Ad. 590; 1 Nev. & M. K. B. 731; 110 E. R. 577.

3716. Performance waived.] —Where defts. attorney, on their being sued by pltf., undertook, by letter, to procure their signature to a cognovit, for the payment of debt & costs, which he failed to do, but pltf. afterwards said that he would proceed with the action:—Held: this was virtually a waiver of the attorney's undertaking, & he could not be called on by the ct. to perform it.—MILLER v. JAMES (1823), 8 Moore, C. P. 208.

*Annotation. —Consd. The Borre, [1921] P. 390.

3717. Discharge from undertaking.]—Where an attorney undertook to pay the sum which should be awarded to be paid by his client in a particular reference, the arbitrator being to make his award by a particular day, but did not do so, & a judge's order for enlarging the time was made by consent, the attorney acting on that occasion for his client, the ct. held him discharged from his undertaking, he not having recognised it after the original time for making the award had expired.—STAITE v. HADDON (1841), 9 Dowl. 995.

3718. Conditional undertaking—Fulfilment of condition requisite.]—Deft. obtained a judge's order in the following terms:—"It is ordered that pltf. do forthwith give security for costs to the satisfaction of the master, no stay of proceedings in the meantime, the attorney for pltf. hereby undertaking to find such security":—Held: the proper construction of the order was, that the attorney should give the security in case further proceedings were taken, & therefore, he was not liable to an attachment for not giving the security, no further proceedings having been taken.—HILL v. FLETCHER (1850), 5 Exch. 470; 1 L. M. & P. 518; 19 L. J. Ex. 320; 15 L. T. O. S. 258; 155 E. R. 205.

3719. Client instructing solicitor not to perform undertaking—Entering appearance to writ.]—Re KERLY, SON & VERDEN, No. 3783, post.

3720. Client changing solicitor after undertaking given.] —When the ct. makes an order in reference to which a solr. gives his personal undertaking, the fact that his undertaking is not embodied in the order, as subsequently drawn up by the Crown Office, does not release him from liability, nor is his responsibility altered by the fact that since the order of the ct. was made he has ceased to act as solr. to the client.—WILLIAMS v. WILLIAMS & PARTRIDGE (1910), 54 Sol. Jo. 506, C. A.

B. Basis of Jurisdiction.

3721. Maintenance of honesty of officers of court—No misconduct need be suggested.]—The ct. has jurisdiction, on the application by a person to whom a solr. gives an undertaking in his capacity as a solr., to exercise its summary procedure to compel the solr. to carry out the undertaking, even though appet. is not the client of the solr. & the undertaking was not given in the course of legal proceedings, & there is no suggestion of dishonourable or discreditable conduct on the part of the solr.—UNITED MINING & FINANCE CORPN., LTD. v. BECHER, [1910] 2 K. B. 296; 79 L. J. K. B. 1006; 103 L. T. 65; on appeal, [1911] 1 K. B. 840, C. A.

3726. — — — —.]—When an attorney, in his character of attorney, gives an undertaking to pay the debt of another, the ct. will on motion compel the attorney to perform it, notwithstanding it is void at law; the object of the interference of the ct. being to ensure the honesty of its officers.—Re HILLIARD, Ex p. SMITH (1845), 1 New Pract. Cas. 185; 2 Dow. & L. 919; 14 L. J. Q. B. 225; 5 L. T. O. S. 58, 59; 9 Jur. 664.

3727. — Lapse of time no bar.]—It is no answer to a rule, calling upon an attorney to pay money pursuant to his undertaking, that more than two years have elapsed since the undertaking was given.—Re SWAN (1846), 15 L. J. Q. B. 402; sub nom. TITTERTON v. SHEPPARD, 3 Dow. & L. 775; 1 Saund. & C. 99; 10 Jur. 715.

C. Conditions Precedent to Summary Enforcement.

(a) Undertaking Must be Given Personally.

3728. General rule.—The solr. of the assignees of a bkpt. tenant, upon whose lands a distress had been put by the landlord, gave the following written undertaking: "We, as solrs. to the assignees, undertake to pay to the landlord his rent, provided it do not exceed the value of the effects distrained":—Held: they were personally liable.—BURRELL v. JONES (1819), 3 B. & Ald. 47; 106 E. R. 580.

3729. —.—.]—Where the attorneys for pltf. & deft., in a cause which was ready for trial, entered into an agreement whereby they personally undertook that the record should be withdrawn, that certain things should be done by pltf. & deft., & that costs should be taxed for deft. in a certain manner:—Held: the attorney for pltf. was personally bound to pay the costs when taxed in the mode specified.—IVERSON v. CONINGTON (1823), 1 B. & C. 160; 2 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 307; 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 71; 107 E. R. 60.

3730. —.—.]—If the attorneys on both sides, on an indictment against a parish for not repairing a road, enter into an agreement, in which one "agrees, on the part of the parish to pay the costs," this agreement is personally binding on the attorney; & if it is agreed that A. shall tax the costs, it is no answer to an action for the costs, that deft. had no notice to attend the taxation; if he did not object to that, when he was first apprised of the taxation having taken place in his absence.—WATSON v. MURREL (1824), 1 C. & P. 307; 171 E. R. 1207, N. P.; subsequent proceedings, 2 L. J. O. S. K. B. 155.

Annotation—Consd. Lewis v. Nicholson (1852), 18 Q. B. 503.

3731 —.—.]—The solr. for petitioning creditor, on the commission being superseded, writes to bkpt., "I am ready, & hereby offer, to allow & pay the costs" incurred by bkpt. in petitioning for the supersedeas:—Held: the solr. was personally liable on this undertaking, & bkpt. might petition for an order on the solr. to pay these costs, notwithstanding a subsequent commission had issued against him, under which he had not obtained his certificate, his assignees disclaiming all interest in the matter.—Re BENTLEY, Ex p. BENTLEY (1833), 2 Deac. & Ch. 578; 2 L. J. Bcy. 39.

3732. —.—.]—HALL v. ASHURST, No. 3760, post.

3733. —.—.]—As to whether an attorney for the prosecution was "personally" liable to pay the costs of the day on an agreement to pay the costs of the day not having on it the word personally.—R. v. COLLs (1844), 8 J. P. 455.

3734. —.—.]—Where a cause was referred to arbn., & pltf.'s attorney, on taking up the award, gave his personal undertaking to the arbitrator to pay over to him all moneys which he should receive from deft.; & the attorney having received £30, paid over £15 to the arbitrator:—Rule nisi granted for the attorney to pay over the other £15.—BRANDON v. SMITH (1853), 1 W. R. 130.

3735. —.—.]—After issue joined in an action, an agreement was signed by pltf.'s attorneys, deft.'s attorneys, & deft., which, after providing that the record in the action should be withdrawn, & that certain things should be done by deft. within a specified time, stipulated that, if these things were not so done by him, his plea should be withdrawn by his attorneys, so as to allow judgment to be signed by pltf.s:—Held: deft.'s attorneys, who had signed the agreement without professing to sign on his behalf, were personally liable in respect of the plea not having been withdrawn.—LEEDHAM v. BAXTER (1856), 26 L. T. O. S. 234; 4 W. R. 241.

3736. —.—.]—Where a solr. in the course of legal proceedings makes a statement to a person, even though not his client, that funds have been put into his hands for the purpose of payment to that person upon a certain event happening, & that upon the happening of the event he will pay the money, the personal undertaking of the solr. is sufficient to enable the ct. to exercise its summary jurisdiction to compel him to carry out the undertaking on the application of the person to whom it is given, although it is not a personal guarantee in the sense that the solr. guarantees the payment of the money out of his, the solr.'s, own pocket. Further, the ct. will exercise its disciplinary jurisdiction to prevent a breach of trust where there has been a declaration of trust by a solr. in favour of a person even though not his client, which induces that person to alter his position. The dishonourable conduct . . . in order to give the ct. jurisdiction must be dishonourable conduct to appet. in the course of legal proceedings (A. T. LAWRENCE, J.).—Re A SOLICITOR, Ex p. HALES, [1907] 2 K. B. 539; 76 L. J. K. B. 931; 97 L. T. 212; 23 T. L. R. 573; 51 Sol. Jo. 626, D. C.

Annotation—N.F. United Mining & Finance Corpn. v. Becher, [1910] 2 K. B. 296.

3737. —.—.]—An undertaking by solrs., defts., in these terms: "In consideration of you, pltf.'s solrs., on behalf of your clients, agreeing to the proceedings . . . being adjourned for one week . . . we on behalf of our clients undertake to apply at the opening of the ct." for certain cross-summonses "& to pay to you on behalf of your clients whatever balance may be adjudged by the magistrate to be due to your clients," is a personal undertaking by the solrs., for if it were not so the undertaking would mean nothing, the clients being liable by the order of the magistrate.—Re C. (1908), 53 Sol. Jo. 119, D. C.

(b) Undertaking Must be Given in Professional Capacity.

PART X. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

b. Undertaking by solicitor's clerk—To obtain removal of caveat.]—A clerk of debts. (a firm of solrs.) gave an undertaking to the pltf.'s solrs., on the completion of the purchase of certain land, in the following form: "In consideration of settlement of this matter to-day we . . . undertake to satisfy the requisitions of the Registrar-General with regard to the withdrawal

B.'s signature to an agreement of reference, & to find security for the performance of the award to the satisfaction of the master.—Ex p. HUGHES (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 482; 106 E. R. 1267.

3756. Payment of money.]—BIRCHINSHAW v. JACKSON (1825), 3 L. J. O. S. K. B. 253.

3757. — Refund after taxation.]—The ct. will not grant an attachment against an attorney for not performing his undertaking to refund money, upon his bill being taxed. The usual course is, to make the order for taxing it a rule of ct.—MORLING v. TONGUE (1823), 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 108.

3758. — Into court—Bankruptcy of lunatic client—Proof by solicitor.]—Re AYTOUN, Ex p. OFFICIAL SOLICITOR OF SUPREME COURT (1904), 20 T. L. R. 252.

3759. Verbal undertaking — To pay costs & damages.]—The ct. cannot permit an attorney to have the benefit of executions issued against a client for damages & costs which the former has been compelled by a rule to pay in consequence of a personal undertaking. Semble: the ct. will enforce a verbal undertaking made by an attorney on behalf of a client to pay damages & costs, where the other party has been thereby induced to consent to take a verdict for a certain sum, instead of going to the jury.—KITE v. MILLMAN (1833), 2 Moo. & S. 616.

3760. Payment of expenses of barrister.]—Deft., who was the solr. to the London creditors of a bkpt., wrote to pltf., the solr. of the country creditors, a letter, wherein he stated, that he was willing "on behalf of the London creditors," to bear two-thirds of the expenses of the attendance of a barrister to resist a particular claim, & of investigating the accounts; concluding with the words—"I hereby undertake to bear & pay, on behalf of these creditors, two-thirds of the expenses incident thereto accordingly." A further attendance of a barrister becoming necessary, he again wrote—"I shall have no objection to bear, as before, the proportion of expense of the barrister attending the meeting stated in your letter":—Held: deft. was personally liable to pltf. for the two-thirds of the expenses he had so undertaken to pay.—HALL v. ASHURST (1833), 1 Cr. & M. 714; 3 Tyr. 420; 2 L. J. Ex. 295; 149 E. R. 586.

WARNER* (1833), 1 Dowl. 680; sub nom. WILLS v. WARNER, 2 L. J. Ex. 174.

3762. Payment of fees—Commission of lunacy.]—Where an attorney, attending a commission of lunacy for petitioner, promised the undersheriff to pay the fees due to him, the comrs. & the jury, on the inquisition being returned, but failed to do so on the return & on request, this ct. granted a rule calling upon him to pay such fees, on the ground that, when his undertaking was accepted, credit was given to him in his professional character; & it was held no objection to such rule, that the proceedings of which in respect the obligation was incurred took place in another ct.

3763. Payment of debt.]—Attorneys, assignees of a mtge. of lands, brought an action in the name of the mtgee. against W., the mtgor., for principal & interest; & W. pleaded. The attorneys had obtained from E., their client, a loan to W. on further mtge. of the same lands, & had brought an action, for E., against W. for principal & interest due on that mtge.; & W. had pleaded. They also obtained a verdict against W., & certificate for execution, in an action of debt at their own suit. D., an attorney, but not employed as such by the mtgor., who was the brother of D.'s professional agent, wrote to pltf., promising that, if they would not issue execution for two months, the pleas should be withdrawn & judgment suffered by default in the first two actions; & further undertaking as follows. "I shall pay all the principal, interest & costs through a friend of mine in London, to whom a transfer of all the securities you have will have to be made." "The cash will be ready, if the securities will, on the 10th instant." Pltf. agreed, & forbore issuing execution; but the party referred to by D. did not advance the money:—Held: D. was personally liable in assumpsit on the above undertaking, for the amount claimed by pltf. in the first two actions.—*HARPER v. 3764. Undertaking to abide by order of Court of Appeal as to costs.]—Two out of four bkpts. appealed from the adjudication, & the Ct. of Appeal gave them leave to try the question in an action, upon the undertaking of their solrs. to abide by such order as the Ct. of Appeal might make as to costs. The adjudication was sustained at law:—Held: the appeal must be dismissed, but without costs; the solrs. in pursuance of their undertaking, to pay the costs of the action.—Re CASTELLI, Ex p. CASTELLI (1854), 23 L. J. Bcy. 42, L. JJ.

3765. Undertaking not to interfere with witness.] Upon an application to enlarge the time for closing evidence in the above cause, deft.'s solr. signed an undertaking that, in the event of a certain witness being produced for examination, no attempt should be made to discover her place of residence, or in any way to molest her. On motion to commit the solr. to prison for a breach of the above undertaking:—Held: the serving such witness while before the examiner with a copy of a writ of subpoena to give evidence in another cause, amounted to an act of molestation; & the solr. was ordered personally to pay the costs of the motion.—*LAWFORD v. The ct. directed the order made on the motions to be drawn up without entering the unstamped documents, & made a four-day order on the solrs. to produce the documents to the registrar duly stamped.—Re COOLGARDIE GOLDFIELDS, LTD., Re CANNON, SON & MORTEN, [1900] 1 Ch. 475; *sub nom. 3779. —.]—When pltf. is improperly delayed in his action in consequence of deft.'s attorney not fulfilling his undertaking to enter an appearance in due time, the ct. will not compel the latter to give security for the debt & costs conditional on pltf.'s obtaining a verdict.

If there is any remedy it is against the attorney on his undertaking (WILLIAMS, J.).—MORRIS v. JAMES (1838), 6 Dowl. 514; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 177.

3780. —.]—Where pltf. moved for an attachment against an attorney for not entering an appearance, pursuant to his undertaking; & it appeared that he had not, previous to moving the rule, requested the attorney to enter the appearance, the ct. discharged the rule.—JACOB v. MAGNAY (1842), 12 L. J. Q. B. 93; 7 Jur. 326.

3781. —.]—An attorney who undertakes to accept process & appear for deft. may be punished by attachment for not performing his undertaking.—WILLIAMS v. ROBERTS (1850), as reported in 14 Jur. 399.

3782. — Reasonable time.]—An undertaking to appear, given by an attorney, must be enforced within a reasonable time; & therefore a motion, made in Michaelmas term, to compel an attorney to enter an appearance, pursuant to an undertaking given by him on Mar. 8, is too late.—BALLS v. STRUTT (1837), 7 L. J. Ex. 7.

3783. — Withdrawal of authority by client.]—(1) Where, with the authority of deft. in an action, his solr. accepts service of the writ on his behalf & gives a written undertaking, under R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 9, r. 1, "to enter an appearance in due course," that undertaking is unconditional & must be performed forthwith, & at the instance of pltf., it can be enforced by attachment of the solicitor under R. S. C., Ord. 12, r. 18.

Solrs. to deft. in an action accepted, by his authority, service of the writ on his behalf, & at the same time gave pltf.'s solr. a written undertaking to enter an appearance in due course, but, on account of a proposal by deft. for settlement, the time for appearance was extended for two months. No appearance was ever entered, & no step was taken in the action for a further period of eighteen months, when pltf. desiring to proceed, required deft.'s solrs. to enter appearance pursuant to their undertaking, which they declined to do, on the ground that their clients, considering the action at an end, had directed them not to enter appearance.

Upon an application by pltf., under R. S. C., Ord. 12, r. 18, to attach the solrs. for breach of their undertaking, the Ct. of Appeal ordered the solrs. to enter appearance forthwith, with liberty to pltf. to renew his application in case of their default.

(2) An application by pltf. under R. S. C., Ord. 12, r. 18, to enforce by attachment a written undertaking by deft.'s solr. to enter an appearance to the writ, should be made & intitled, not in the action, but in the matter of the solr., by virtue of the jurisdiction of the ct. over his officers.

(3) A written undertaking by a solr. acting on the authority of a deft., to enter an appearance to the writ, constitutes a contract on the part of deft. by the solr. or his agent to enter appearance, & differs from an ordinary contract only in that it may be enforced against the solr. himself by attachment at any time within six years, provided the action continues effective (FARWELL, J.).—Re KERLY, SON & VERDEN, [1901] 1 Ch. 467; 70 L. 3784. —.]—Defts.' solrs. signed, without qualification, a notice, under R. S. C., Ord. 29, r. 12, by which they undertook to enter an appearance & give bail in a sum not exceeding the value of ship, cargo, & freight; but pltfs.—notwithstanding the caveat which on the filing of the above notice in the registry had been thereupon entered—took out, under R. S. C., Ord. 29, r. 18, a warrant for the arrest of defts.' vessel in a salvage action:—Held: defts.' solrs., by signing the undertaking without qualification, rendered themselves personally responsible, & pltfs. might have taken a reasonable time to make inquiry whether the undertaking was satisfactory; but as, instead of doing so, they had insisted upon the security of the ship, pltfs. had failed to show "good & sufficient reason" within R. S. C., Ord. 29, r. 18, for arresting the vessel, & must, therefore, be condemned in damages & costs.—THE CRIMDON, [1900] P. 171; 69 L. J. P. 103; 82 L. T. 660; 48 W. R. 623; 16 T. L. R. 403.

3785. Without authority of client—Breach of warranty.—Where an authority given to an agent has without his knowledge, been determined by the death or lunacy of the principal, & subsequently, the agent has, in the belief that he was acting in pursuance thereof, made a contract or transacted some business with another person, representing that, in so doing, he was acting on behalf of the principal, the agent is liable, as having impliedly warranted the existence of the authority which he assumed to exercise, to that other person, in respect of damage occasioned to him by reason of the non-existence of that authority.

Solrs. were instructed by a client to conduct his defence to an action which was then threatened & was afterwards commenced against him. Before the commencement of the action the client became, & was certified as being, of unsound mind. In ignorance of his unsoundness of mind, & of his having been so certified, the solrs. entered an appearance for him in the action, & delivered a defence, to which pltf. replied, & other interlocutory proceedings took place in the action. Subsequently, the action not then having come to trial, pltf.'s solr. was informed that the deft. had been certified as being of unsound mind; & an application was made on behalf of pltf. at chambers for an order that the appearance & all subsequent proceedings in the action should be struck out, & that the solrs. who had assumed to act for deft. should be ordered personally to pay pltf.'s costs of the action up to date, on the ground that they had so acted without authority. The master made an order that the appearance & subsequent proceedings in the action should be struck out, but refused to make an order for payment of pltf.'s costs by the solrs. personally, which refusal was on appeal affirmed by the judge at chambers. Pltf. having appealed to the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: (1) the appeal was on a matter of practice & procedure within Jud. Act, 1894 (c. 16), & therefore, the appeal lay direct to the Ct. of Appeal, & not to the Div. Ct.; (2) the solrs. who had taken on themselves to act for deft. in the action had thereby impliedly warranted that they had authority to do so, & therefore were liable personally to pay pltf.'s costs of the action.—*YONGE v. In consequence defts.' vessel was not arrested. On Feb. 17, 1921, defts.' solrs. wrote to pltfs.' solrs. that their clients were unable to make arrangements for bail, that accordingly the undertaking for bail was withdrawn, & that, as the vessel was within the jurisdiction of the Ct., pltfs. could arrest her. Pltfs.' solrs. arrested the vessel but wrote to defts.' solrs. that they reserved all their clients' rights under the undertaking for bail. On Mar. 16, 1921, the vessel was appraised as being at that time of a value of £600. Defts. provided bail in that sum & the vessel was released. On Apr. 12 pltfs. applied for an order that defts.' solrs. should forthwith provide good & sufficient bail, pursuant to their undertaking. It appeared that in June, 1920, the value of the vessel was much in excess of £600, & pltfs. estimated her value at £4,500:—Held: (1) the undertaking to give bail could not be withdrawn by substituting the vessel for the bail; (2) pltfs. had not waived their rights under the undertaking by arresting the vessel; & (3) defts.' solrs. must complete their undertaking by putting in bail to the value of the vessel as on June 22, 1920.—THE BORRE, [1921] P. 390; 91 L. The schedule to the order directed payment to deft. personally. Deft. changed his solrs., & received the money out of ct. by virtue of the schedule. The appeal was afterwards allowed with costs, but no costs of trial on either side:—Held: the solrs. could be ordered upon motion to refund the money so received by their late client in pursuance of their undertaking.—DOTESIO v. BISS (1912), 56 Sol. Jo. 736, C. A.

3800. — Court cannot compel undertaking.—On appeal, a workman recovered judgment & costs. The employers applied for a stay, pending appeal to the House of Lords, but this was refused, & the ct. suggested that some terms might be made between the parties. It was then agreed to pay the workman certain weekly compensation in any event, pending the further appeal, but nothing was said as to costs. War was declared before costs were paid, & a stay was obtained under the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914 (c. 78), on the full amount of taxed costs being paid into ct. Before these costs were paid out the employers applied to the Ct. of Appeal for an order that the workman's solr. should be made personally liable for their return, in the event of the further appeal being successful:—Held: the ct. could not impose such terms upon the solr., but, under the circumstances, the costs were ordered to remain in ct., pending the result of the further appeal.—CHILTON v. BLAIR & Co., LTD. (1914), 8 B. W. C. C. 1.

3801. — No liability unless undertaking given—Decision reversed on appeal.—A solr. who has demanded & received payment of costs payable to his client under an order of ct., with knowledge that an appeal against the order was pending, cannot on its reversal be ordered personally to repay the costs so paid to him where there has been no misconduct & no undertaking to repay.—*HOOD BARRS v. 3804. — Payment of balance of purchase-money.]—An attorney, who on completing a purchase, gives an undertaking to pay over a balance of the purchase-money, cannot be called on summarily to perform his undertaking.—Ex p. PHILLIPS (1838), 1 Will. Woll. & H. 418.

3805. — Payment of costs of abstract—Mortgage.]—Where an undertaking is given in the character of attorney, the ct. will compel its officer to perform it. Where, therefore, the attorney of a mtgor. induced the attorney of a mtgee. to give up the title deeds, on his undertaking to pay the costs of abstract, etc., the ct. ordered him to pay the amount, in pursuance of his undertaking.—Re GEE (1845), 2 Dow. & L. 997; 10 Jur. 694.

SECT. 4.—LIABILITY FOR COSTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See, now, R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 11.

3810. Power of judge to make order—Without application from any party.]—The powers given by R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 11, of disallowing costs improperly incurred or rendered fruitless by undue delay, are not confined to delay, & costs taking place & named after the Orders of 1883 came into operation, but extend to all costs incurred in an action pending when the Orders came into operation which costs had not already been adjudicated upon, & these powers may be exercised by the judge of his own motion without any request from any of the parties.

The rule extends to cases where in the ordinary course the costs are paid out of a fund, & is not confined to disallowing costs as between the solr. & his client who has to pay them.—BROWN v.

DANIELL* (1834), Hayes & Jo. 586.—IR.

n. — Registration of title.]—A solr. acting for the vendor gave an undertaking, signed by him, to a purchaser of land, already registered in accordance with Local Registration of Title (Ireland) Act, 1891, that, in consideration of the purchaser paying the balance of the purchase-money to him, he would have all the incumbrances affecting the property effectually released & would hand over the original documents creating the charges & also the deeds of release duly registered. The solr. declined to register the releases, on the grounds that it was contrary to the Act, & was useless & unnecessary.—Held: the solr. was bound to comply with his undertaking as to registration.—Re A SOLICITOR (1918), 53 I. SUB-SECT. 2.—PROCEDURE TO OBTAIN ORDER.

A. In General.

See R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 11.

3812. When substantive application necessary—Misconduct not in character of solicitor.]—If a rule for a quo warranto is discharged on a defect in the affidavits in support of it, costs may be adjudged to be paid by a deposing party, who from the circumstance of his being an attorney, or from an affidavit in answer may be presumed to have been cognisant of such defect; it is otherwise, if the rule is discharged on the affidavits in answer.

When the conduct objected to in an attorney has not been done in his character of attorney, the costs should not be granted against him without a special application.—R. v. GREENE (1842), 4 Q. B. 646, 649; 2 Gal. & Dav. 789; 11 L. J. Q. B. 281; 6 J. P. 687; 6 Jur. 896; 111 E. R. 1043; subsequent proceedings (1813), 12 L. J. Q. B. 239.

3813. — Application by respondent against appellant's solicitor.]—An appeal by a married woman having been dismissed with costs, resp. asked that applt.'s solr. might be ordered to pay the costs personally.—Held: if the ct. had jurisdiction to make the order it must be on a substantive application.—TATUM v. TATUM (1886), 2 T. L. R. 423, C. A.

3814. What is good service of petition—Leaving copy at solicitor's office.]—The ct. refused to make an order, that service of a petition against an attorney, for an order to pay certain costs for which he had been declared liable, by leaving a copy at his chambers, should be deemed good service.—Re SANDYS (1833), 3 Deac. & Ch. 34.

3815. Necessity for notice to solicitor.]—An order upon an attorney of one of the parties to pay the costs incurred in proceedings in a cause, he not being a party applying to the ct., is bad, if the attorney had no notice in the summons that he would be called upon to pay such costs.—ROUCH v. ALBERTY (1863), 3 New Rep. 137; 33 L. J. Q. B. 127; 12 W. R. 136; sub nom. ROUCH v. ALBERTY, Ex p. WOOD, 9 L. T. 420.

3816. —.]—(1) The ct. will not order the costs of proceedings to be paid personally by the solr. conducting them, on account of any misconduct unconnected with those proceedings, or upon an application not giving him proper notice of the charges against him.

hitherto acted, to deliver up all deeds belonging to the client on the usual terms, sent the deeds to a relative of the client who held a power of attorney from him, with the bill of costs, the amount of which they retained out of moneys in their hands belonging to the client, & they then informed P. that they had no deeds in their possession, & no bill of costs against the client. An order of course was then taken out by P., on behalf of the client, for taxation & delivery up of deeds & papers, but it was not complied with, & a writ of attachment was issued against G. On a motion to set aside the attachment with costs to be paid by P. personally:—Held: in the circumstances of the case, G. were not justified in refusing to deliver up the papers, or to give in their bill for taxation; (2) it was no ground of objection to the attachment, that in consequence of the indorsement required by Consolidated Order 33, r. 10, being omitted in the order first served on G., it had been served a second time in proper form more than fourteen days afterwards.—Re GREGG, Re PRANCE (1869), L. 3818. When order made to indemnify client—Necessity for payment by client—Before application made.]—Pltf. who has been made liable to the costs of the day by the negligence of his attorney, cannot compel the attorney to pay him those costs unless he, pltf., has first paid them to deft.—LAYTON v. WOOD (1839), 3 Jur. 124.

B. Who May Apply.

3819. Either party.]—If an attorney commence an action in the name of a pltf. from whom he has no retainer nor authority, the proceedings may be stayed on application to the ct. by either party, & the attorney is liable to the costs of both.—HUBBART v. PHILLIPS (1845), 2 Dow. & L. 707; 13 M. & W. 702; 1 New Pract. Cas. 232; 14 L. J. Ex. 103; 153 E. R. 294, Ex. Ch.

3820. Adverse party.]—Where an action is brought in the name of a person as pltf. without his authority & he subsequently repudiates the action, debts on application in the action may obtain an order for payment of their costs by the solrs. who issued the writ. So held in a case where an infant was joined as co-pltf. by solrs. on the assumption that he was of full age.—GEILINGER v. GIBBS, [1897] 1 Ch. 479; 66 L. J. Ch. 230; 76 L. T. 111; 45 W. 3822. — Adverse party agreeing to withdrawal of juror.]—Where deft. has consented to withdraw a juror he cannot afterwards apply to the ct. to make pltf.'s attorney pay his costs, on the ground that the action was brought without the consent or authority of pltf.—HAMMOND v. THORPE (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 64; 4 Tyr. 838; 3 L. J. Ex. 358; 149 E. R. 995.

SUB-SECT. 3.—GROUNDS FOR MAKING ORDER.

A. Acting without Authority.

(a) In General.

3823. General rule.]—Upon a revocation by a client of the authority under which his solr. acted, the solr. is not permitted to take any further step, even in an interlocutory proceeding already commenced; & he will be answerable for the costs of any such subsequent step, as well as for the costs of a motion on the part of the client to restrain the solr. from proceeding.—FREEMAN v. FAIRLIE (1838), 8 L. J. Ch. 44.

3825. Onus of proof of authority—On solicitor.]—MARIES v. MARIES, No. 3837, post.

3826. Consenting to final reference.]—Solrs. assenting to interlocutories may bind but not to final reference.—COLWEL v. CHILD (1660), 1 Cas. in Ch. 86; 1 Rep. Ch. 195; 22 E. R. 707; sub nom. COLLWELL v. CHILD, Freem. Ch. 151.

Annotation:—Mentd. H'ide v. Petit (1670), Freem. Ch. 133.

3827. Consenting to supersedeas—In absence of client.]—If a solr., in the absence of his principal, undertake to consent to a supersedeas, the ct. will, in the event of the petition for a supersedeas being dismissed, make the solr. pay the costs.—Re MUNK, Ex p. MUNK (1836), 6 L. J. Bey. 9.

3828. Consenting to judgment.]—One partner has no implied authority to consent to an order for a judgment in an action against himself & his co-partner. Though the ct. will, in general, where deft. is prejudiced by the act of an attorney in acting for him without authority leave him to his remedy against the attorney, if solvent; that rule does not apply, where deft. is in custody by reason of the unauthorised act, or where pltf. or his attorney is party to the wrong.—HAMBRIDGE v. DE LA CROUEE (1816), 3 C. B. 742; 4 Dow. & L. 466; 1 New Pract. Cas. 512; 16 L. J. C. P. 85; 8 L. T. O. S. 163; 10 Jur. 1098; 136 E. R. 297.

3829. Consenting to settlement.]—Female pltf. consulted a counsel residing in the country upon the subject of her rights for seduction & breach of promise of marriage against deft. The counsel himself, then wrote to him, but as terms could not be effected the counsel recommended her to an attorney to bring the actions, & what was required to be done by an attorney was done in his office by his clerks. Pltf. never spoke to the attorney himself. At the assizes where the causes were ready for trial female pltf. & her mother, in a conversation upon terms of settlement, told the managing clerk to settle on the best terms he could, the counsel who had sent her to the attorney was her junior counsel in the case. Terms of settlement were come to in ct., when he was present, & these terms indorsed on the briefs of the leading counsel for pltf. & deft. Afterwards she refused to be bound thereby; & repudiated the terms come to, saying she had not authorised them:—Held: there must be a new trial under the circumstances, her attorney to pay the costs, & of the rule for it. If she authorised the terms, then she would pay those costs. If she did not, they would properly fall upon her then attorney.—BROOKS v. COX (1858), 30 L. T. O. S. 288; 6 W. R. 287.

3830. Causing arrest.—An arrest having been made by a person named in the warrant, who did it at the request of the attorney, the ct. discharged the party out of custody, & ordered the attorney to pay the costs.—BRADBURY v. HUNTER (1824), 2 L. J. O. S. K. B. 79.

3831. Continuing proceedings—After revocation of authority—Appointment of receiver of lunatic.—B. having become of unsound mind, his family applied to S., his agent, to render accounts. S. consulted his solrs. M. & P., who in Aug. 1871, filed a bill in the name of B. by a next friend, who was a stranger to the family, against S. for an account. A receiver was appointed, & in Dec. 1871, without notice to the family, the cause was heard as a short cause, & a decree made directing accounts & inquiries. In Mar. 1872, B. was found lunatic, of which M. & P. had full notice. On June 8, 1872, the chief clerk made his certificate, & on June 29, 1872, the cause was heard on further consideration, & an order made directing the costs of both parties, as between solr. & client to be paid out of the moneys in the hands of the receiver. In the accounts of the receiver as passed were also included considerable sums for his poundage & for the employment of an accountant to investigate the books. Some time after the order on further consideration a committee was appointed in the lunacy. On petition by the lunatic & his committee:—Held: all the proceedings in the suit after the appointment of a receiver were unauthorised and improper, & all proceedings after the finding on the inquisition were irregular & void, & M. & P. must make good to the lunatic's estate the sums paid to the accountant, & the sums paid to themselves & deft.'s solrs. for costs, less the costs up to the appointment of the receiver, & must pay the costs of the petition, both before the Vice-Chancellor & the Ct. of Appeal, as between solr. & client.—BEALL v. SMITH (1873), 9 Ch. App. 85; 43 L. J. Ch. 245; 29 L. T. 625; 38 J. P. 72; 22 W. R. 121, L. J.

PART X. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 3.— A. (b).

3834.1. Whether solicitor ordered to pay costs.—Where an attorney commenced an action of tort on behalf of a supposed husband & wife, upon instructions from the wife, without ascertaining whether the husband authorised such proceedings the ct. on summons by the male pltf. who had authorised or been cognisant of such proceedings, struck out his name from the writ & all subsequent proceedings, & ordered pltf.'s attorney to pay the costs of such pltf., as between attorney & client; & also ordered pltf.'s attorney to pay deft.'s costs as between party & party.—*HILL v. 3849. ———.]—Motion by defts. claiming to be duly elected directors of & in the name of pltf. co., asking that all proceedings in the action might be stayed on the ground that they had been instituted without the authority of the co., & that the solrs. by whom the writ was issued might be ordered to pay the costs of the action & of that application. The co. was formed in 1890, under Table A. of Companies Act, 1862 (c. 89). No appointment of directors was made, nor did the subscribers of the memorandum of association act as directors. Seven gentlemen, however, constituted themselves directors, & proceeded to act as such. Disputes subsequently arose which resulted in the present action. Pending the disputes the secretary of the co. convened a meeting of the subscribers to the memorandum of assocn. for the purpose of (inter alia) appointing directors. Ten out of the twelve subscribers attended, but two protested, & withdrew. The remaining eight appointed defts. as directors. The persons who had originally constituted themselves directors also made an effort to get themselves duly appointed by a document intended to be signed by all the subscribers to the memorandum. It was, however, in fact signed by seven only :—Held : the self-constituted directors had never been properly appointed. Article 62 of Table A. only applied to continue in office directors who had been properly appointed in the first instance, & would not apply either to de facto directors or to subscribers of the memorandum of assocn. The subscribers to the memorandum were entrusted with the power of appointing directors, & they exercised it by appointing defts. The motion must therefore succeed, & the solrs. must be ordered to pay the costs personally.—JOHN MORLEY BUILDING CO. v. BARRAS, [1891] 2 Ch. 386 ; 60 L. J. Ch. 496 ; 64 L. T. 856 ; 39 W. 3850. ——— Solicitor unaware that authority invalidated—Effect of notice from opposite party.—The rule that proceedings taken by a solr. without proper authority will be annulled with costs, to be paid by the solr., does not apply unless the solr. was aware of the circumstances which invalidated his authority ; & notice from the other side is not sufficient to fix him with knowledge, if he had good reason to suppose that the facts stated in the notice were not true.—THOMAS v. FINLAYSON (1870), 19 W. R. 255.

3851. ——— Commencing action against company—Without giving indemnity.—An order was made on the application of R., in a winding-up, directing that he should receive his costs of the application out of the assets. H. & co. were his solrs. in this application, but had no other connection with the co. or its affairs. The costs were not paid, & R. became bkpt. Subsequently the Vice-Chancellor made an order, on the application of H. & co., that they should be at liberty, on giving such indemnity as the judge should direct, to institute such proceedings as they might be advised against the former directors & promoters, to recover certain sums from them, appcts. undertaking to pay into the bank to the credit of the liquidators whatever was recovered, & also to abide by any order the

ct. or judge might make as to the costs of such proceedings. H. & co. thereupon commenced this action in the name of the co., against the former directors & promoters, without having taken any steps to have the indemnity fixed by the judge. Defts. moved that all further proceedings might be stayed, or the suit & all proceedings under it set aside, on the ground that the action had been commenced without proper authority. This application was refused by the Vice-Chancellor, who expressed his opinion that the undertaking of H. & Co., contained in the order, was a sufficient indemnity :—Held : (1) as H. & co. were strangers to the co., being neither creditors nor contributories, & having no charge on the assets, there was no jurisdiction to give them leave to sue in the name of the co. ; (2) if there had been jurisdiction to make such an order, the action would still have been commenced without authority, the condition precedent of H. & co. giving indemnity not having been complied with, therefore, the action must be dismissed, as having been instituted without authority, & H. & co. must pay the costs of all parties, including the official liquidators ; the costs of the co. being taxed as between solr. & client, & the other costs as between party & party.—CAPE BRETON CO. v. 3852. Whether solicitor ordered to pay costs.—C. & D. were trustees of a will, under which the funds became divisible on the death of the tenant for life in June, 1890. The greater part of the trust funds were distributed during the autumn of 1890. D. died in Dec. 1890, & C. was left sole surviving trustee. The trust funds then consisted of £3,000 invested on mtge. & a small amount of railway shares. The firm of B. & G. of which G. was the sole surviving member, had always acted for the trustees. Notice had been given to pay off the mtge., & C. repeatedly wrote to G., who also acted for the mtgor., asking when the mtge. money would be paid. G. answered with plausible excuse that the mtgor. was selling other property to pay off the mtge., & delays had arisen in completion. On Oct. 23, 1891, some of the beneficiaries under the will, who had been constantly applying to G. as C.'s solr., for accounts, took out an originating summons against C. for an account. G. entered an appearance for C. without authority & without any communication with C. C. having discovered this, moved to set aside the appearance & all subsequent proceedings. G. had meanwhile absconded, & it was found that he had received & retained the mtge. money :—Held : the fact that G. had acted as solr. for C. in all matters connected with the trust did not authorise him to enter an appearance for him as deft., & the appearance must be set aside with costs to be paid by G.—Re GRAY, GRAY v. 3890. Acting against former client—Wrongly defending action—To set aside deeds prepared by himself.]—A suit which had been instituted to set aside certain deeds & documents by which pltf. had conveyed away the whole of her property, & to recover back the property lost by means of them, was defended on behalf of the party who claimed under the deeds by the solr. who had prepared the documents sought to be impeached. The bill was then amended by making the solr. a party for discovery, & asking that he might be ordered to pay the costs of the suit. The amended bill also contained charges of improper motives against him, which were not sustained:—Held: his having defended the suit on behalf of principal deft., & endeavoured to support the transactions sought to be impeached, in addition to want of caution in the preparation of the documents themselves, were sufficient reasons for ordering him to pay the costs of the suit if the estate sought to be made liable were insufficient to pay them, notwithstanding that the charges against him were not sustained. It was an additional circumstance against him, that when he acted as solr. in the suit, he knew that the estate sought to be made liable would probably not be able to pay the costs of the suit.—*BAKER v. Subsequently to this the attorney called upon pltf.'s wife to know if the amount had been paid, & finding that it had not, he desired that the amount should not be received unless the sum also of £2 was paid for costs, as he had brought an action in the Bail Ct. Upon surprise being expressed at this course being pursued, he offered to take £2 & say nothing more of it. Nothing more was heard of the matter until deft. obtained a rule for judgment as in case of a nonsuit, which was the first intimation which pltf. had of any action having been commenced in the Bail Ct.:—Held: the attorney must discontinue the action, & pay all costs of the action brought in the Superior Ct.—HOLT v. NEW (1851), 18 L. T. O. S. 98, 111; 15 J. P. Jo. 755.

3929. Giving wrong evidence -- As to identity of witness.]—Pltf.'s attorney, in a cause tried at Nisi Prius, contradicted the testimony given by one of deft.'s witnesses, who had sworn that he never had had any conversation with the former on the subject in question—by stating positively that he had, & what the conversation was. Deft.'s witness was in consequence committed for perjury, but was afterwards discharged, on the attorney stating the next day that he might have been mistaken in the person of the witness for that of his brother, who greatly resembled him. An application being made for a new trial under these circumstances; & that pltf. or his attorney should be ordered to pay the costs of the former trial; the ct. granted a rule accordingly, which was afterwards made absolute, the ct. ordering pltf.'s attorney to pay the costs of the former trial.—TRUBODY v. BRAIN (1821), 9 Price, 76; 147 E. R. 26.

3930. Refusal to disclose name of client.]—Pltf. in an action on a statute passed for the preservation of game, being insolvent, & his attorney refusing to tell by whom he was employed, the ct. directed the action to be stayed, & ordered the attorney to pay the costs that had been incurred unless in ten days he gave security for the payment of the costs.—SMITH v. MATSON (1824), 2 L. J. O. S. K. B. 92.

3931. Improperly signing judgment.]—Where a plea was delivered after the time for pleading had expired, but before judgment actually signed, of which pltf.'s attorney was informed, but afterwards, on the ground that the time for pleading was out, signed judgment, the ct. set aside the 3939. Improperly opposing application—To set aside attachment for non-payment of purchase-money—Where failure to make good title.—Lands having been ordered by the ct. to be sold by private contract, an application was made by an illiterate person to the vendor's solr., who had the conduct of the sale, to become a purchaser of part of the premises; & a conditional contract was entered into, whereby the vendor agreed to sell & the purchaser to purchase the premises for £100. The purchaser also agreed at his own expense to obtain an order of the ct. confirming the sale, & in default that the vendor might obtain such an order at his, the purchaser's, expense. On the same day the purchaser gave a written retainer to the vendor's solr. to act as his attorney. The purchaser was a marksman, & both the above instruments were witnessed by the same solr. Afterwards an order was obtained confirming the purchase & ordering payment of the money. The purchaser, after the contract, finding that a good title could not be made to the premises, failed to pay the purchase-money, whereupon another order was obtained for payment, in default of which the purchaser was attached & committed to prison. On motion to set aside the attachment, the vendors & their solr. opposed the application. The ct. ordered the attachment to be set aside, & prisoner to be discharged, the agreement to be cancelled, & the costs of the prisoner throughout the proceedings, & of all parties on the motion, to be paid by the solr.—*BROMAGE v. 3940. Refusal to produce order to registrar—For payment of money out of court.—An order was made for the payment out of ct. of a sum of money to a married woman for her separate use. The solr. who had the charge & carriage of the order refused to produce it to the registrar, to enable him to countersign the cheque of the Accountant-General, except upon condition of his being paid thereout a sum of money, which, he alleged, he had advanced to the lady, or become security for, upon the faith of his being repaid out of the said money. Upon motion, he was directed to produce the order & to pay the costs of the motion.—BENYON v. AMPHLETT, Re SIDNEY (1862), 8 Jur. N. S. 759.

been found against him adjourned before the judge without taking out a summons for that purpose; & where a question of principle is involved in a particular item it may be necessary to do this. But the ordinary practice is to wait till the account is completed, & then take the adjournment once for all before the judge. If a solr. were to insist upon his right to take particular items before the Judge in an unreasonable manner, the ct. might make him pay the costs personally.—UPTON v. BROWN (1882), 20 Ch. 3949. Assisting client in execution of illegal conveyance.]—A solr. who assists his client in the execution of an illegal conveyance may properly be made a party to a suit to set aside the conveyance in question.

A bill was filed to set aside an illegal conveyance prepared by T., a solr. The bill charged fraudulent contrivance & undue influence against T., & prayed that T. might be ordered to pay the costs of the suit. These charges not being substantiated:—Held: the costs of T. so far as they had been occasioned by having to meet these charges, must be paid by pltf's.; but otherwise T., though not liable to pay costs, was not entitled to any costs as against pltf's.—PHEEP v. the ct. will order him to pay the costs.—FAWKES v. PRATT (1719), 1 P. Wms. 593; 24 E. R. 531.

3954. — Necessity for clear proof.]—The ct. will not, on a summary application, order an attorney to pay the costs of setting aside proceedings for irregularity, even where he has admitted that it was owing to his error, & has promised to pay, unless there is clear evidence of the nature of the negligence, & that it was gross.—DICKINSON v. JACOBS, Re AN ATTORNEY (1862), 5 L. T. 757; 10 W. R. 303.

3955. Delay.]—Delay having taken place, the solr. was ordered to pay personally the costs of a motion to take the carriage of proceedings, although the motion was refused, the solr. to have his remedy against his client.—Re JACKSON (1851), 16 L. T. O. S. 421.

3956. — In administration proceedings.]—Where very considerable delay had occurred in proceedings under a decree in an administration suit which, in the opinion of the ct., ought to be accounted for, the ct., in exercise of the powers afforded by R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 11, ordered that, in the taxation of the costs, the matter be referred specially to the taxing master, & he be directed to inquire into the cause of the delay, to make such disallowance of costs in respect thereof as he might think fit, & to call upon the solrs. engaged in the conduct of the case to show cause why that disallowance should not be made.—FURNESS v. DAVIS (1885), 51 L. T. 854; 33 W. R. 320; 1 T. L. R. 211.

3957. — —.]—An administration action was commenced in May, 1875, & in Nov. 1887, was heard on second further consideration. It then appeared that the costs would probably amount to a sum almost equal to the value of the estate. The judge thereupon referred the matter to the taxing master under R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 11, for inquiry & report as to the delay & the costs occasioned thereby, which order was affirmed on appeal. The taxing master reported that there had been great delay in the suit, which was caused by the conduct of the solr. for plff., & he disallowed considerable sums of the costs as between the various solrs. & their clients:—Held: the ct. will not permit the costs occasioned by improper litigation, or by the negligent conduct of administration proceedings, to be paid out of an estate under its care; the amount of costs allowed by a taxing master as between the client & his solr. is not conclusive of the amount which the ct. will allow out of the estate; & therefore the ct. had jurisdiction to refuse to allow plff., a trustee, to have the full amount of the costs allowed him in taxation paid out of the estate.—*BROWN v. 3959. Failure to summon commissioners.]—The quorum comrs. residing in the country have a right to be summoned to attend all meetings held under flats directed to their lists; & the ct. will visit the solr., who neglects to summon them, where the facts showed that his conduct was grossly negligent.—KESSACK v. KESSACK'S TRUSTEE, [1919] W. L. D. 96.—S. AF.

a. Duty to advise client of his responsibility.]—The solr. of a party beneficially interested, using the name of a mere trustee in litigating a question of interest, is bound to put such mere trustee on his guard, as to his responsibility for damages or costs, & by neglecting to do so, may render himself responsible in default of his principal without giving any undertaking, or being guilty of any misconduct.—Re BURTON, Ex p. SCALLAN; Ex p.

Pltf. did not deliver his statement of claim, & deft. took out a summons for the dismissal of the action for want of prosecution, but did not attend the summons personally, & was represented by his clerk. The solr. for pltf. objected that deft. must attend personally, & could not be represented by his clerk, & that there was no evidence to support the summons. The chief clerk overruled the objection that the personal attendance of deft. was necessary, & adjourned the summons for an affidavit as to the non-delivery of the statement of claim, but pltf.'s solr. insisted on the objection as to the necessity for the personal attendance of deft., & at this request, the chief clerk adjourned the summons to the judge upon that point. Deft. attended in person before the judge, but pltf.'s solr. did not attend, & the judge dismissed the application, with costs, & ordered pltf.'s solr. to pay personally the costs of deft.'s attendance. On a motion by pltf.'s solr. to vary so much of the order as directed him to pay personally the costs of deft.'s attendance before the judge:—Held: R. S. He instituted a suit to compel probate, & obtained in it an account which was insufficient. He took then no other steps for three years, & then, without further consulting the client, filed a bill for an account;

he had no other authority than that retainer & the client denied any parol authority to file a bill:—Held: the retainer did not justify the solr., & the bill was dismissed with costs, to be paid by the solr.—ATKINSON v. ABBOTT (1855), 3 Drew. 251; 25 L. T. O. S. 314; 61 E. R. 899.

4029. Costs of client as between solicitor & client—Costs of adverse party as between party & party.]

—The proper form of order where an action is instituted by solrs. without authority is to direct the solrs. to pay all the costs occasioned by their commencing the action without such authority; those of pltf. as between solr. & client, & those of deft. as between party & party. In such a case defts. are not entitled to any order upon pltf. to pay their costs, or to any indemnity from them against the same; but on motion to dismiss, the solrs. will be ordered to pay deft.'s costs of the action. Where solrs. had joined A. as pltf. upon the instructions of B., another pltf., who had, in fact, no authority for that purpose, & who was since dead, & where the solrs. had been ordered to pay A.'s & deft.'s costs of the action:—Held: the solrs. would be entitled to prove against the estate of B. for all the costs so ordered to be paid by them.—*NURSE v. 4035. — Against solicitor litigant—Appeal from order for taxation.]—A common order was made against a solr. for delivery of his bill of costs & taxation. He moved to discharge this order, & his application was dismissed with costs. He then appealed, & his appeal was also dismissed with costs:—Held: the non-payment of the costs of the appeal was not a default in payment of a sum of money by a solr. as an officer of the ct. within Debtor's Act, 1869 (c. 62), s. 4; (1) & an attachment could not be issued against him.—Re HOPE (1872), 7 Ch. him as costs on the higher scale together with the costs of the order, & the solr. repaid the amount so received by him in excess but failed to pay the costs, & application was made for his committal, the ct. in the absence of authority refused to make an order to commit, being doubtful whether resp. had been ordered to pay the money in respect of which a committal order was asked for in his character of solr.—Re APELT, Ex p. Ch. 323.—CAN.

t. —.]—Re WALKER (1868), 2 Ch. Ch. 324.—CAN.

a. Mode of procedure for recovery.]—The proper proceeding against an attorney for mere non-payment of money pursuant to a rule of ct., where there are no special circumstances showing fraud or dishonesty, is by judgment & execution under C. S. U. C. c. 24, s. 15, & not by motion to strike him off the rolls, nor by attachment. Under Imperial Act, 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 4 (4), attorneys ordered to pay money in that character are excepted from the general rule & may be attached as before. There is no exception in our Act.—Re CAMPBELL (1872), 32 U. C. R. 441.—CAN.

b. Duty to lay money out at interest — & right to commission thereon.]—A party receiving money as attorney of another was bound to lay it out at interest within six months thereafter, & was liable in 5 per cent. for all money not so laid out; & he was entitled to a commission of 2½ per cent. on the money received by him.—BROWN'S TRUSTEES v. c. —.]—A sum of money belonging to a trust estate was lodged for some years in the hands of the factors & law agents for the trustees administering the estate, & was not invested; during these years certain questions regarding the trust estate were under discussion, & the trustees were cognisant of the money remaining uninvested. — Held: in accounting for money, the factors were only bound to debit themselves with interest on it at the rate of 4 per cent.—FORTUNE'S TRUSTEES v. GIBSON-CRAIGS, WARDLAW & DALZIEL (1839), 2 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 59.—SCOT.

d. Right of set-off for fees against money advanced by clients.]—When a client advances a sum of money to a firm of attorneys on account of costs in a pending action the contract between them is not one of depositum, but is a contract whereby the client indemnifies the attorneys against loss owing to the costs of the action to the extent of the advance with a right in them to use the money & no right in himself to reclaim it unless they should, on a successful issue of the suit, be reimbursed by the opposing party. In the event of the suit being successful, the attorneys would be entitled to set off against the advance any sum due by the client to them for professional work & to retain so much of the advance as would suffice to satisfy their claim.—NGANGELIZWE KAMA v. 4051. —.]—A. purchased an estate from B., & on the completion, one solr. acted for both parties, & the purchase-money was paid into his hands. Afterwards, the purchaser was defeated by C., who had a paramount mtge. The purchaser presented a petition against the solr., asking payment by the solr. out of the purchase-money of the losses occasioned, or that he might indemnify petitioner. The petition was dismissed with costs, the ct. holding, first, that it had no jurisdiction to award compensation or damages in such a case, & secondly, that the money having come to the hands of the solr. as agent of the vendor, & not of petitioner, it could not interfere.

I agree that if a client pay a sum of money to his solr. in that character, this, like other matters arising between them in the relation of solr. & client, can be inquired into summarily in this ct. D. was solr. to pltf. in a cause, & also to the receiver, & the receiver was in the habit of remitting the rents to him:—Held: D. must be considered to have received the rents as solr. or agent of the receiver, & pltf. could not call upon him to account for them under the summary jurisdiction.—*DIXON v. Of the three possible periods for ascertaining whether the person ordered to pay & making default held the character of a solr., & was as such within the exception of Debtors Act, 1869 (c. 62), s. 4 (4), viz.—(a) of the act done; (b) of the order made; or (c) of the default committed, that to be looked to is, if not the first, at the latest the second period.—Re STRONG (1886), 32 Ch. 4060. Money borrowed from client—For purchase of land by solicitor—Returnable when purchase uncompleted.]—A client agreed in writing to lend his solr. a sum of money to enable him to make a purchase of land, but if the purchase was not completed, the money was to be at once repaid. The purchase was not made, & the money was not returned.

The client applied for an order for repayment, under the summary jurisdiction of the ct.:—Held: there being no relation of solr. & client between the parties in respect of the agreement, no order could be made under the summary jurisdiction of the ct.—Re BRYANT (1884), 50 L. T. 450.

4061. — Trust money lent by trustee.]—(1) In an administration action it appeared that the trustee had lent moneys of the trust estate without security to his solr., who had accepted the loan with notice that it was trust money. The solr. was not a party to the action:—Held: the ct., in the exercise of its summary jurisdiction over its officers, had power on motion in the action, to order the solr. to bring the money into ct.

B. applied by summons under R. S. C., Ord. 52, r. 25, for payment of the £200, & interest thereon:—Held: having regard to the terms of the document & to the other evidence, the transaction was a loan to the solr., & not a payment to him of money for investment, & therefore the master had no jurisdiction under R. This was done, but the solr. did not make any further payment within the extended time, & he was arrested. received in acting as agent.]—An Irish attorney, employed by an English attorney to recover a debt due in Ireland to an English client, received the amount but did not pay it over, & having been ordered by the ct. to pay it & the costs of the order, did not obey the order:—Held: he was solr. may take up a speculative case on behalf of a poor client, & as to the terms on which he may do so.—WIGGINS v. LAVY (1928), 44 T. L. R. 721, C. A.

4123. Liability to pay costs personally—Where bonâ fide cause of action.]—RICH v. COOK (1900), 110 L. T. Jo. 94, C. A.

4124. —.].—In a speculative action brought to recover damages for personal injury the evidence at the trial showed that the action was wholly unwarrantable. As pltf. was a man of straw, defts., judgment with costs having been entered for them, moved that the solr. for pltf. should be ordered personally to pay their taxed costs:—Held: although the solr.'s clerk who had taken instructions & prepared the brief had been guilty of reprehensible conduct, there was no absolute proof that the solr. had not acted bonâ fide in the matter. There was nothing wrong or illegal in taking up a speculative action so long as the solr. took reasonable care to assure himself that pltf. had a case fit to be brought into ct. In the present case the solr. deposed that he had given the matter his consideration, & had decided on the documents that pltf. had a fair chance of succeeding. He was therefore entitled to the benefit of the doubt, & it would not be fair to order him to personally pay defts.' costs. At the same time, defts. ought not to pay more than their own costs of the motion, which for the reason above stated was dismissed.—WARREN v. LONDON ROAD CAR CO. (1907), 52 Sol. Jo. 13.

4125. —.].—Illegal agreement between solicitor & client.]—A solr. acting for a client in reference to a claim against a bank wrote to the client as follows: "Inasmuch as you have agreed to pay me 25 per cent. of whatever you may succeed in recovering . . . I agree that such percentage shall cover all my costs & expenses in any action . . . taken in respect of your claim, & in the event of your failing to recover anything I undertake to make no claim against you for my costs or charges." A writ was issued against the bank, but from a very early period in the action the solr. knew that there was no substance in the claim. Eventually the client withdrew her claim & judgment was entered for the bank, with costs. The costs not being paid by the client, the bank sought to make the solr. personally liable:—Held: the agreement between the solr. & the client was champertous & illegal; the solr. had been guilty of misconduct as a solr.; & he must pay the bank's costs in the action inasmuch as these would not have been incurred but for his conduct.—DANZEY v. METROPOLITAN BANK OF ENGLAND & WALES (1912), 28 T. L. R. 327.

Part XI.—Solicitors and Third Persons.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

4126. Necessity for proof of employment.]—Defender M. was trustee under a marriage contract, by which the wife's property was settled on herself for life, excluding the jus mariti; &, in case she survived her husband, to her in fee; but, should she predecease her husband, to him for life or until his second marriage; & lastly, in the event of her predeceasing her husband, to her children in fee, after her husband's decease or second marriage. Defender M. & the husband & wife, who were also trustees, lent this trust fund on the security of unfinished houses in course of erection under a building speculation. The only valuation the trustees had before them was one by an architect, which had been obtained by the borrower, but they consulted defender H., who was their law agent, & were informed by him that there was no object to the investment. The deed contained an immunity clause exonerating the trustees from "omissions or neglect of diligence, or the insufficiency of securities, insolvency of debtors, or depreciation in the value of purchases." Pursuers, the children of the marriage, while both spouses were alive, brought an action for a declarator that defender M. & the law agent were jointly & severally liable to restore the fund, which had been lost by the failure of the speculation:—Held: the law agent was not liable, for there was no evidence to prove that he had been employed by pursuers or any person on their behalf.—RAE v. MEEK (1889), 14 App. Cas. 558, H. L.

4127. Duty of solicitor—On making arrangement with opposite party.]—The prudent course for attorneys, when they enter into any arrangement with an opposite party, is to draw up a memorandum of the terms agreed upon & read it over to the party, & let him sign it.—GREENWOOD v. ELDRIDGE (1833), 6 C. & P. 128; 172 E. R. 1175.

4129. — Solicitor acting for trustee client—Duty as against cestui que trust.]—It is improper conduct in a solr. acting for a trustee to attempt to protect his client against the just demands of a cestui que trust by throwing formal difficulties in the way of the latter, which the solr. would not otherwise have insisted on as necessary for the protection of his client.—AYLMER v. WINTERBOTTOM (1857), 4 Jur. N. S. 19.

4130. — On acquiring interest in land—Not in character of solicitor.]—Where a solr. acquires by contract a different interest beyond what his character of solr. confers, such as an equitable mtge., it is incumbent on him immediately to give clear & distinct notice of such interest to all persons in the visible ownership of the estate, & such a case is not within the principle of the cases in which a purchaser of land has been held bound to inquire of the tenant in possession the nature of his interest.—*BOZON v. 4133. Sheriff's fees.]—A sheriff's officer can recover caption fees, by an action against the pltf.'s attorney, who caused the warrants from the sheriff's office to be directed to him, it being proved that the master will allow the caption fee in taxing costs, & that it is always paid by pltf.'s attorney, notwithstanding 23 Hen. 6, c. 9.—*TOWNSEND v. Proof of the usage of business is admissible in evidence to establish the liability of the attorney.—NEWTON v. CHAMBERS (1844), 1 Dow. & L. 869; 13 L. J. Q. B. 141; 2 L. T. O. S. 351; 8 Jur. 244.

4135. Costs—Refunding costs—Paid by defendant to solicitor—Solicitor acting without authority of client.]—If an attorney sue out a writ against A., at the suit of B., without any authority, express or implied, from B. for so doing, & A. pay the costs of such writ to the attorney, A. may recover back the amount of those costs, by bringing an action for money had & received against the attorney; but if the attorney had any authority, either express or implied, from B. to sue out the writ, such action for money had & received will not lie against the attorney, even though B. had no cause of action against A.—DUPEN v. KEELING (1829), 4 C. & P. 102; 172 E. R. 626, N. P.

4136. — — — Paid for client by third person—After taxation on third person's application.]—If a party taxes the bill of an attorney for costs due from a third person & pays the bill, he cannot afterwards recover the amount without showing the payment to have been made through ignorance or misrepresentation; & if an action be brought, the ct. will stay proceedings.—KENDALL v. ALKEN (1834), 10 Bing. 438; 2 Dowl. 783; 4 Moo. & S. 319; 131 E. R. 974.

4137. Expenses of witnesses—Where express promise to pay—Compensation for loss of time.]—A promise by an attorney after trial to pay a witness a compensation for his loss of time cannot, it seems, be enforced either by action or attachment.—BATES v. STURGES (1832), 2 Moo. & S. 172.

4138. ——— Money received from opposite party.]—A., an attorney, caused B. to be subpoenaed as a witness in a cause in which A. was attorney, & B., before he went to the Assizes, asked A. who was to pay him, & A. said he would do so. After the Assizes, at which B. attended, & was examined. A.'s clerk, by the direction of A., gave B. an I.O.U. for the amount of B.'s expenses & loss of time, which amount A. received from the opposite party after the costs in the cause had been taxed:—Held: B. might recover the amount from A. on a declaration containing counts for money had & received, & on an account stated.—EVANS v. PHILLIPOTS (1840), 9 C. & P. 270; 173 E. R. 831. ———.]—See EVIDENCE, Vol. XXII., p. 436, Nos. 4530, 4531.

4139. Money received in bankruptcy proceeding—Solicitor acting for creditor—Without authority.]—Assignees, on the representation of the solr. to the commission that he is authorised to receive it as agent, pay over a dividend to such solr. It turns out he had no such authority. Upon petition of creditor for payment to him of the dividend, charging that no authority was given to that solr., held, that being solr. to the commission he might be made resp. as well as the assignee, & that a joint order might be made against them all for its payment.—Re JOHNSON, Ex p. STORY (1834), 4 Deac. & Ch. 504; 2 Mont. & A. 54; 4 L. J. Bcy. 11, Ct. of R.

4140. Expenses of commissioner for examining witnesses.]—On a petition by the comr. appointed to examine witnesses in the cause, the solr. for defts. was ordered to pay the comr.'s expenses in attending the commission, & the costs of this petition, although he had given no personal guarantee for the payment of such expenses.—PARSONS v. BENN (1850), 19 L. J. Ch. 264.

4141. Application of trust money—Received under administration order.]—(1) Although the fact that solrs. have, in the administration of a deceased person, received trust moneys with knowledge of the trust, & paid them over to their client, the personal representative, by whom they have been wasted, will not render them personally liable to the cestuis que trust, yet when there was a decree directing the representative to pay into ct. what he should receive, & subsequently to that decree portions of the estate came into the hands of the solrs., from which they discharged themselves, partly by taking credit for their antecedent bills of costs, & partly by payments to their client shortly before his bkpct., in a suit by the cestuis que trust:—Held: the solrs. were bound to see that the decree of the ct. was obeyed; they were not entitled themselves to receive, or to appropriate any part of the estate in a manner at variance with the order, & they must be charged with the amounts in question, & interest from the time when they received the principal.

(2) As to moneys forming part of the estate which, at a period anterior to the decree, the solrs., acting for the personal representative, had lent upon certain bonds, & the bonds were, after the decree, paid off to the solrs.:—Held: inasmuch as these were never bonds of testator, & as in a prior administration suit, the investment upon them had been disallowed, these moneys must be regarded as having been throughout in the hands of the representatives, & the solrs.

were not liable to the cestuis que trust in respect of them.—HARRIES v. REES (1867), 37 L. J. Ch. 102; 17 L. T. 418; 16 W. R. 91, L. JJ.

4146. No priority between client & third persons.]—A person instructs an attorney to bring an action; who employs his own stationer, generally employed by him. The client has nothing to do with the stationer, if the attorney becomes insolvent. The client pays the attorney. The stationer therefore has no remedy against the client (LORD ERSKINE, C.).—Ex p. HARTOP (1806), 12 Ves. 349; 33 E. R. 132, L. C.

4147. Express contract—Not entered into as solicitor.]—An attorney who signs an instrument agreeing to give up certain bills of exchange, on certain things being done, is personally liable, unless he enters into the agreement as the attorney or agent, & it is so specified on the instrument.—KENDRAY v. HODGSON (1805), 5 Esp. 228; 170 E. R. 794, N. P.

4148. ——— Purchase of freehold in own name—Specific performance.]—A solr. contracted, in his own name, to purchase a freehold; he resisted the performance of it on the ground, that he had acted as the mere agent of a client, & that, being a case of hardship, damages at law would be an adequate remedy to the vendor:—Held: he was bound to perform the contract.—*SAXON v. 4150. ——— Where no authority.]—Semble: if an attorney enters into an agreement professing to bind others, but which is inoperative by reason of the want of authority, he renders himself personally liable thereon.—WESTMINSTER IMPROVEMENT COMRS. v. FULLER (1849), 13 L. T. O. S. 264.

4151. ——— ———.]—A contract having been entered into by a firm of solrs. acting on behalf of their client, to pay pltf. certain sums of money, pltf. filed his bill against the client & solrs., alleging that the client was bound by the contract, but that the client denied that he was so bound on the ground that the solrs. had no authority to enter into such contract; & the bill prayed specific performance by the client; or otherwise if it should appear that the solrs. were not authorised, then that the solrs. themselves might be declared personally liable to perform the same. A demurrer to the bill by the solrs. was allowed on the ground that pltf. did not himself allege that the client was not bound, & also, that alternative relief could not be prayed against one deft. in case relief could not be obtained against another deft. —CLARK v. RIVERS (LORD) (1867), L. R. 5 Eq. 91; 37 L. J. Ch. 70; 17 L. T. 166; 32 J. P. 71; 16 W. R. 123.

4152. Implied contract—Expenses of messenger under commission of bankrupt.]—Petitioning creditor, & not the solr., is liable to the messenger under a commission of bkpt., for the costs & expenses attending it. The solr. is an agent merely, & is not to be regarded as a principal as respects the messenger; & although he make himself responsible to the messenger, petitioning creditor will not therefore be exonerated, without the express consent of the messenger to discharge him.—HART v. WHITE (1816), Holt, N. P. 376; 171 E. R. 277, N. P.

4153. ——— Refreshments supplied to witnesses.]—An attorney who takes witnesses to an inn, is prima facie liable to the innkeeper for the expenses incurred.—CARISS v. RICHARDSON (1822), 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 11.

4154. ——— ———.]—The mere circumstance of a party being the attorney in the cause will not make him responsible for refreshments supplied by a coffee house keeper to the witnesses while attending the trial. But the fact of his being found in communication with the witnesses at the coffee house, is some evidence to go to the jury, that the supplies were sanctioned by him.—FENDALL v. NOKES (1839), 7 Scott, 647; 3 Jur. 726.

4156. ——— ——— As expert witness.]—An attorney, being in the position of an agent for his client, is not liable for the charges or expenses of a skilled witness retained by him, in pursuance of his general instructions to make surveys, researches, calculations or experiments, with a view to examination as a witness in his client's cause.—LEE v. WINT (1858), 1 F. & F. 261, N. P.

4158. ——— Employment of shorthand writer—Liability for fees.]—Where a solr. employs a shorthand writer to take shorthand notes of a case in which the solr. is acting for a client, in the absence of a special arrangement the solr. is personally liable to the shorthand writer for the costs of the notes.—*COCKS v. 4159. ——— Employment of photographer—Liability for photographs supplied for use in court.]—A member of a firm of solrs. ordered certain photographs from pltf., a photographer, for the purpose of litigation in which the solrs. were acting for a client. Pltf., who knew that the solrs. were so acting & that the photographs were required for the purpose of litigation, debited the solrs. with the price of the photographs in his books. In an action brought by pltf. to recover the price of the photographs from the solrs.:—Held: the solrs. were not liable inasmuch as they were prima facie agents acting on behalf of a principal, & the transaction was not a cash transaction in the sense that the solrs. had no authority to pledge the credit of the client, nor had any custom been proved that a solr. who makes a contract of this nature is personally liable.—*WAKEFIELD v. A. In General.

4161. Wrongful payment of money—After bankruptcy of client—Liability to assignees of bankrupt.]—A party being arrested gave a bail bond, but in consequence of his not perfecting special bail, the sheriff was fixed. Pltf. having sued on the bail bond, a summons was taken out on behalf of the bail, & a judge ordered the proceedings to be stayed, on payment of debt & costs to the attorney for the original pltf., by the attorneys of the original deft., who had in the meantime become bkpt., but had, before his bkpcy., supplied them with a sum of money towards paying the debt & costs; the money having been paid over accordingly:—Held: this payment under the judge's order was payment under process of law, & A.'s assignees could not recover it from original pltf., to whom it was so paid.

Semble: their remedy was against bkpt.'s attorneys, who paid over the money after the bkpcy.—BELCHER v. MILLS (1835), 2 Cr. M. & R. 150; 1 Gale, 142; 5 Tyr. 715; 4 L. J. Ex. 160; 150 E. R. 64.

4162. — Proceeds of bill of exchange—Liability to indorsee.—A., the acceptor of a bill, had agreed with his creditors to pay a composition partly in money & partly in notes. The bill having become due the drawer was unable to take it up, but the indorsee entrusted it to the drawer to get the composition in money & notes for him. The drawer handed it to his attorney with other bills accepted by A., to get the composition for him, & at the same time obtained an advance of £200 from the attorney. The attorney obtained the composition in money & repaid himself the £200 & carried the balance to the account of the drawer. For the composition in notes he took one note for the aggregate amount of the composition on the several bills handed to him:—Held: the attorney was not liable to the indorsee either in trover for the bill, or for the money kept back by him to repay the advance to his client, the drawer.—SYMONDS v. ATKINSON (1856), 1 H. & N. 116; 25 L. J. Ex. 313; 27 L. T. O. S. 160; 156 E. R. 1153.

4164. Improperly concealing settlement—Mortgage of settled property—Liability for repayment to mortgagee.—B., being in pecuniary difficulties, consulted her solr. as to the best means of raising money. He suggested that certain leasehold property which had been settled by her upon trust for herself for life with remainder to her children, might be treated as belonging to her absolutely & be mortgaged. The trustees of the settlement declined to join in raising money, but, knowing all the circumstances of the case, retired from the trust conditionally on other trustees being appointed. This was done & money raised by the new trustees, the existence of the settlement being concealed from the mtgees. On a bill filed by the mtgee. against B., her solr., & the old & new trustees, nine years after the discovery of the fraud, praying for a declaration that all & each were liable to make good the moneys advanced by the mtgee.:—Held: all defts. were liable as prayed.—*CLARK v. were a joint stock co., which was formed for the purpose of purchasing & working a colliery & ironworks formerly the property of J. B., deceased. Before the co. was formed J. B.'s trustees entered into negotiations with R., a financial agent, to get up a co. for the purchase of the property for about £300,000. R. applied to C., & C. made an arrangement with G., upon the terms stated below. Two contemporaneous agreements were signed, by one of which the trustees agreed to sell the property to a trustee for the co. for £300,000; & by the other which was called in the pleadings the secret agreement, the trustees agreed with C., that he should bring out the co. or forfeit £20,000; & that they should pay £85,000 for commission & risk. On the same day C. agreed with G. that G. should take the whole risk of bringing out the co. & should receive £60,000 & C. £25,000 of this bonus. D. & co., the vendors' solrs., were to receive £1,500 from the tenant for life of the property if the purchase was completed. The co. was established, the first directors being found by R.; & D. & co. became the solrs. of the new co. The prospectus & articles referred to the agreement for the purchase of the property, but made no mention of the agreement between the vendors & C. or of any of the arrangements relating to it. The purchase-money was paid to the vendors, who paid out of it £85,000 to C., of which he gave £60,000 to G. & £10,000 to R. The directors were not informed by D. & co. or any other person, of the agreement between the vendors & C.; but some time afterwards they discovered it, & thereupon called a general meeting of the co. to consider the subject. The result was that a bill was filed by the co. against the vendors & against R., C., G., & D. & co. praying that the purchase might be rescinded or that defts. might be held liable to repay all profits which they had made by the transaction; pltf. offering to allow expenses properly incurred & a fair commission. Before the cause came to a hearing pltf. compromised the suit with the vendors, receiving from them £31,000 as the price of not insisting on the purchase being rescinded:—Held: although D. & co. had acted improperly in concealing from the co. the agreement between the vendors & C., they ought to have been dismissed from the suit when pltf. elected not to rescind the purchase; & inasmuch as D. & co. had acted in the matter with no fraudulent intent the ct. dismissed the suit against them without costs up to the time of the compromise & with costs as to all subsequent proceedings.—*BAGNALL v. 4167. — Prosecuting bankruptcy petition without reasonable cause.]—S., an attorney, having been instructed by H. to make J. bkpt., obtained a debtor's summons under Bankruptcy Act, 1869 (c. 71), s. 7, & served it on J., who thereupon applied to the registrar of the county ct. to dismiss the summons. Having heard both parties, the registrar made an order on Apr. 12, that J. should within seven days enter into a bond, with two such sufficient sureties as the ct. should approve, to pay such sum as should be recovered by H. in any proceeding taken for the recovery of the debt due to him from J., together with costs; & that all proceedings on the summons should be stayed until the ct. in which such proceedings for the recovery of the debt should be taken had come to a decision thereon. S. drew up the order, which was the first of the kind made by the county ct. in pursuance of the statute. During the seven days a correspondence took place as to the proposed sureties, who were objected to by S. on behalf of H., & no bond having been executed in consequence, a petition in bkpcy. was, by the express order of H., presented by S. on Apr. 21, under sect. 8, & on the same day a receiver was appointed under sect. 13, the act of bkpcy. alleged being that the petitioning creditor had served on J. a debtor's summons, & that he being a trader had for seven days neglected to pay the debt alleged to be due, or to secure or compound for the same. J. objected to the petition; & after several hearings under sect. 8, the county ct. judge on May 8 adjudged J. to be bkpt.:—Held: upon these facts an action was maintainable by J. against S. for maliciously & without reasonable & probable cause presenting the petition & causing him to be adjudicated a bkpt.—*JOHNSON v. B. Misrepresentation.

4168. Consent of client—To postponement of execution.]—Deft.'s attorney requested pltf.'s attorney to forbear charging deft. in execution until next term, & falsely represented to pltf.'s attorney that he had the authority of deft. to consent that he should not be charged in execution until the next term; & deft.'s attorney gave a consent in writing to that effect, which omitted to state that the proceedings were stayed at the request of deft., according to the rule Hil., 1786. Pltf.'s attorney forbore to charge deft. in execution until the next term, & deft. was discharged for want of having been so charged, on the ground that the consent did not state that the proceedings were stayed at the request of deft. In an action brought by pltf. against deft.'s attorney for the false representation, as having occasioned the damage:—Held: the action was not maintainable.—HEWITT v. MELTON (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 232; 4 Tyr. 1003; 3 L. J. Ex. 228; 149 E. R. 1066.

4169. Identity of person in custody—Liability to sheriff.]—A sheriff declared in case, for that, defts. being attorneys of P. who had sued out a ca. sa. against W., & the sheriff having in custody, under another ca. sa. another W., who was entitled to his discharge, defts., well knowing the premises, falsely represented to the sheriff that the last mentioned W. was the W. against whom P.'s writ had issued; by means whereof defts. caused the sheriff to detain the W., who was in his custody; for which the last mentioned W. sued the sheriff, & he paid money by way of compromise. The attorneys pleading not guilty, evidence was given, for the sheriff, that his officer delivered a note to defts.' managing clerk in P.'s action describing the W. who was in custody, & inquired if that was the W. whom they had sued on behalf of P.; & that the clerk took the letter into the office where defts. were, & afterwards returned & told the officer that that was the W.; neither defts. nor the clerk at that time knowing the contrary:—Held: a plea alleging that defts. had good & probable reason to believe, & did with good faith believe, the representation to be true, was an answer to the action.—*EVANS v. Pltfs. lent B. money on mtge. on the application of his solr., who assured them, in writing, that in his opinion he would be able to pay the amount. Pltfs., alleging this to be a false & fraudulent misrepresentation, instituted a suit in equity to make the solr. personally liable:—Held: their remedy, if any, was at law.—*WHITMORE v. 4184. ——— Fraud of managing clerk—Administration action—Forgery of affidavit.]—In an administration action a fund belonging to the children of R. who should attain twenty-one or marry was carried over to "the account of the issue or children of R., deceased." The fund in Jan. 1884, consisted of £4,387 10s. 3d. Consols & £195 19s. 4d. cash. B., managing clerk of the firm of solrs. conducting the action, knew that R. died leaving one daughter, who would attain twenty-one in Dec. 1886. He retained L. as solr. on behalf of the daughter to get the fund out, saying he had authority. A summons was taken out in chambers, & B. having produced an affidavit that the daughter was of age, an order was made by the chief clerk on Jan. 28, 1884, for transfer & payment to the daughter. B. got the usual form of power of attorney from the Paymaster General, & it was apparently executed by the daughter of R. in favour of L., but in reality it was forged. L. obtained payment, & after deducting one-half of one-sixth of the fund & other expenses, pursuant to an agreement between him & B., paid the remainder to B. on an authority apparently signed by the daughter of R. but really forged. L. never saw the daughter of R. & had no communication with her. The daughter of R. never saw B. & never gave any authority to B. B. absconded. In Dec. 1886, when the daughter of R. attained twenty-one, she presented a petition to the Lord Chancellor under Court of Chancery Funds Act, 1872 (c. 44), s. 5, for a certificate under that sect., in order that the fund might be replaced out of the Consolidated Fund. Upon the hearing of this petition on Dec. 14, 1887, counsel for the Treasury contended that the application should not go until petitioner had herself obtained a proper order from the ct. for payment out of the fund to her, & the Paymaster General had failed to comply with such order. This was a petition to discharge the order of Jan. 28, 1884, & for payment out of the sums above-mentioned, & the interest & dividends. The petition was served on the Comrs. of Her Majesty's Treasury, & the Paymaster General & upon L.:—Held: (1) the order of Jan. 28, 1884, must be discharged, & an order now be made that the sums of £4,387 10s. 3d. Consols & £195 19s. 4d. cash, & such further sums as would have been standing to the credit of the account, if the order of Jan. 28, 1884, had not been made, should be respectively transferred & paid to petitioner, & L. should within two months from the date of the present order pay into ct. to the account of the Paymaster General the sum of £4,387 10s. 3d. Consols & £195 19s. 4d. cash, & such other sums as should be payable to petitioner under the present order; (2) such costs of petitioner as would necessarily have been incurred if petitioner had been applying for payment to her of the funds which would have been standing to the credit of the account if the order of Jan. 28, 1884, had not been made, must come out of the fund, or be paid by petitioner, & L. would be ordered to pay all the other costs of the proceedings, including the costs of the requisite application to the Lord Chancellor under Court of Chancery Funds Act, 1872 (c. 44), s. 5.—*SLATER v. 4185. Wrong distribution through solicitor's negligence—Creditors' suit.]—Where a fund, paid into ct. in creditors' suit, has been distributed by mistake among specialty & simple contract creditors, to the exclusion of a mtgee., this ct. holds such creditors liable to repay, not in solido but pro rata; & no creditor will be fixed with liability in respect of the rateable part which the mtgee. may fail to recover from creditor, who, since sharing in the fund, has become insolvent, or cannot now be found. Pursuant to a decree in creditors' suit, real estate was sold, & the purchase-money paid into ct. In consideration of such payment, a mtgee., who was not a party to the suit, but whose mtge. was noticed in the conditions of sale, executed the conveyance, but the fund was distributed among the other creditors without any payment being made to the mtgee. Upon bill filed by his personal representative:—Held (1) the latter was entitled to recover (a) from debtors who had been paid simple contract debts, the several sums paid to them, the total amount of such sums being less than pltf.'s claim; (b) from the only specialty creditor, so much as might be necessary to satisfy what might remain due to pltf. for principal moneys & interest, after deducting the total amount of the moneys paid to the simple contract creditors, whether parties to this suit or not; (c) from the solr. of pltf. in creditors' suit, whatever might be necessary to make good any deficiency arising by reason of some of creditors becoming insolvent, or of others not being to be found, or the like; it being the duty of such solrs. to see that the purchase-money paid into ct. was properly applied; (d) although, under the circumstances, the mtgee.'s solr. was chargeable, as between his client & himself, with gross negligence in not placing a stop order on the fund in the original suit, his duties were dehors that suit, in which the primary duty lay with the solrs. of pltf., who had the distribution of the fund, & in this suit he could not be made responsible.—*TODD v. 4187. ———.]—Trustees paid into ct., under the Trustee Relief Act, a legacy of £500 bequeathed to D., an infant, to the credit of an account in the matter of the trusts of the will of testator. Two years afterwards they transferred into ct. to the same account a sum of Consols, representing a legacy of £7,000 bequeathed to M., & after her death to her children, & on both occasions the trustees in the petitions stated that the office of N., their solr., was to be the place for the service of any notice in reference to the funds. A year after the transfer to the Consols a petition was presented by M., by her next friend, a solr., & by the trustees, for the purpose of dealing with the Consols, & the solrs. on the record for petitioners were the firm of whom N. was a member, & the office of N. was to be the place where any notice was to be served relating to the trust fund. The petition set forth what had been done in respect of the Consols & other matters. An order was made in reference to the Consols & dividends; but in drawing it up an error occurred by including in it the whole of the fund standing to the credit of the account, & the future dividends were, as ordered, paid to M. during her life. D. had suffered loss by payments wrongly made to M., now deceased, & she, on attaining majority, presented a petition asking that the estate of M. might be made primarily liable for the loss which she had suffered, & that N. might be made liable for any deficiency:—Held: N., as officer of the ct., had been guilty of negligence in not seeing that all the facts relating to the funds were brought before the ct. when the order was made, & he must, after D. had exhausted the estate of M., make good any deficiency, & pay the costs of the petition.—Re DANGAR'S TRUSTS (1889), 41 Ch. 4188. Money taken out & paid to client—Judgment for less sum—Liability to refund to opposite party.—In an action for wrongful dismissal, claiming a year's salary in lieu of notice, deft. pleaded that pltf. was only entitled to one month's notice; or, in the alternative, three months'; that before action deft. made tender of three month's salary, which pltf. refused; that deft. had paid the amount into ct., & that it was enough to satisfy pltf.'s claim. The request for lodgment in ct. contained a statement that the money was paid in with a defence setting up tender.—Pltf.'s solr., without obtaining an order, but on the written authority of pltf., took the money out of ct., & pltf. proceeded with the action. At the trial judgment was given for deft. on the ground that pltf. was only entitled to one month's salary. Dft. applied for an order against the solr. to refund so much of the money taken out of ct., as represented the difference between one month's & three months' salary. The solr. had acted bonâ fide in taking the money out of ct., & had paid it over to pltf. before the application to make him refund it was made:—Held: although pltf. ought not to have had the money out of ct., because a defence of tender of the sum paid in could not be pleaded to a claim for unliquidated damages, yet under the circumstances the solr. ought not to be ordered to refund it.—DAVYS v. RICHARDSON (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 202; 57 L. J. Q. B. 409; 59 L. T. 765; 36 W. R. 728; 4 T. L. R. 608, C. A.

4190. — To make good loss of interest—Solicitors having conduct of sale—Failure to give instructions to invest purchase-money.—(1) An order was obtained by the solr. for pltf. that the purchaser of property, sold under an order of the ct. in an action, should pay his purchase-money into ct., & that the money when paid in should be invested in Consols. Pltf. had the conduct of the sale. The money was paid into ct. by the purchaser, but pltf.'s solr. omitted to leave with the Paymaster the necessary request for its investment & consequently the investment was not made. On the further consideration of the action it was ordered that the balance of the purchase-money after the payment of certain costs, should be paid to the receiver in the action, in part satisfaction of a balance due to him. The carriage of the order was given to the receiver, & he then discovered that the purchase-money had not been invested. He took out a summons, asking that pltf.'s solr. might be ordered to pay to him the amount of interest lost by the non-investment of the purchase-money:—Held: the solr., as the officer of the ct. having the conduct of the sale, was responsible not only to his client, but to the ct. for the due discharge of his duty, & he must make good to the person entitled the loss of interest, but he was entitled to a set-off in respect of a gain which had resulted from a fall in the price of Consols between the time when the investment ought to have been made, & the date of the order on further consideration; this liability could be enforced by summons in the action.

(2) On allowing the set-off, it appeared that the amount to be paid by the solr. would be only £5 8s. 6d.:—Held: the solr. must pay the costs of the summons.—BATTEN v. WEDGWOOD COAL & IRON CO. (1886), 31 Ch. D. 346; 55 L. J. Ch. 396; 54 L. T. 245; 34 W. R. 228; 2 T. L. R. 236.

Debt. sent B., an attorney, to A. to endeavour to effect a compromise. A. claimed £85 5s. 2d. including a claim for interest at 4 per cent. upon the judgment, from the time it was entered up, under sect. 17. It was ultimately agreed between A. & B., that debt. should be discharged upon payment of £80, which agreement was carried into effect. There was a further provision that from the determination of the partnership the retiring partner, his exors. or administrators, or the exors. or administrators of the deceased partner, should be entitled to receive out of the net profits of the partnership business, during so much, if any, of the term of five years from May 1, 1880, as should remain after the determination of the partnership, the yearly sum of £350, & during so much, if any, of the term of five years from May 1, 1885, as either the retiring partner, or a widow of the retiring or deceased partner, should be living, the yearly sum of £250, any sum which might under this provision for the time being become payable to the exors. or administrators of a deceased partner to be applied in such manner as such partner should by deed or will direct for the benefit of his widow & children, & in default of such direction to be paid to such widow, if living, for her own benefit. It was further provided that the annuity should, so far as legally might be, be constituted a charge on the net profits of the business. One of the partners died in 1883, leaving a widow, but without having given any direction as to the application of the annuity. By his will he appointed his widow his universal legatee & sole extrix. Partnership in respect of business for particular company—To commence on admission of intending partner—Business done for different company—Intending partner not practising.]—Pltf., in 1844, then preparing to be a solr., entered into an agreement with defts., who were solrs., that defts. should be solely interested as solrs., for the provisional committee of the D. N. Ry. co. until pltf. was admitted a solr. ; & that for three years from that time the profit of all business that might be transacted by the parties for the railway should be divided between them in equal shares : in the event of the business being conducted by defts. with the aid of their establishment to a greater extent than by pltf. & his establishment, a percentage to be paid to defts. before any division of profits ; the foregoing arrangements to be applied to any collateral lines & undertakings that might emanate from the D. N. Ry. co.

The D. N. Ry. co. Bill was afterwards withdrawn, & the co. in 1846 amalgamated with another, the two forming together the G. N. Ry. co., of which defts. became part solrs.

Pltf. was admitted a solr. in June, 1847. The bill was filed in May, 1848, & prayed for specific performance of the agreement, & for an account.—Held : as this was a mere money demand on the footing of an account, where there was no mutuality between the parties, & a want of consideration moving from pltf., he was not entitled to a decree for specific performance of the agreement.

Moreover, inasmuch as looking at the agreement as a contract for partnership, it appeared that no partnership had ever taken place, & that the claim was in respect of business done, not for the D. N. Ry. co., but for another co., the bill was dismissed, but without costs ; defts. not asking for them.—ORD v. JOHNSTON (1855), 26 L. T. O. S. 68 ; 1 Jur. N. S. 1063 ; 4 W. R. 37.

4218. — — — — —.]—Where two separate solrs. are retained by the same clients in the same business, the presumption of law is, that as their liability is joint, the profits are to be equally divided, & this presumption is not removed by the delivery of separate bills of costs where the solrs. have conducted different parts of the business. Where, therefore, the evidence in favour of an agreement for a different division was not stronger than that against it, the ct. decided in favour of equality.

Where the contrary [that they were not partners in this matter] is alleged, the burden of proof is on him alleging it.—ROBINSON v. ANDERSON (1855), 20 Beav. 98 ; 7 Do G. M. & G. 239 ; 44 E. R. 94.

4219. — — — — — Effect of release by one solicitor.]—At a meeting held in 1852, between pltf. & deft., two solrs., it was agreed that the professional business connected with the formation of a new line of railway should be apportioned between them ; that they should co-operate as solrs., in getting up the co. & obtaining the Act of Parliament at their own risk ; that each should provide the cash for his own disbursements, such disbursements to be repaid in the first instance, & then that any profits should be equally divided between them. The co. was formed & the Act obtained ; & at a meeting of the co. in Mar. 1855, a proposal in writing was made by pltf. & deft., & confirmed by the co., that pltf. & deft. should be allowed £1,500, in paid up shares, in addition to their disbursements, such £1,500 to be received in full professional business up to the then present time, but to be subject to revision in case the line should be completed. In 1856 part of the line was commenced, but the works were stopped for the want of funds. These funds were afterwards supplied by deft., & others, pltf. not being able to contribute. In 1858 a small part of the line was completed, & pltf., early in 1859, pressed the co. for payment on account of his costs. In May, 1859, the co. paid pltf. £150 in cash & £740 in paid up shares, & took from him a general release of all claims. From that time pltf. ceased to act as solr. to co. Deft. said that some time in 1858 he told pltf. when he was pressing the co., that he, deft., should henceforth decline undertaking any fresh business of the co. in co-operation with him ; & alleged that since the date of the release he had had nothing whatever to do with pltf. He admitted pltf.'s right to have the profits attending the obtaining of the Act of Parliament ; but insisted that the memorandum of Mar. 1855, & the payments and release of May, 1859, settled all questions between the pltf. & himself. He denied that any partnership was ever constituted between pltf. & himself :—Held : the release did not put an end to the agreement between the parties, & pltf. was entitled to a decree for an account down to Apr., 1859.—HANSLEY v. KITTON (1862), 7 L. T. 291 ; 8 Jur. N. S. 1113, L. C.

4220. — — — — — Irrespective of work done.]—Two sets of parties having projected a railway on a similar line, agreed to consolidate the project, & appointed as solrs. of the proposed co. pltf. & deft., whom they had respectively consulted prior to the consolidation. The two solrs. accepted the appointment without making any definite arrangement as to the division of the business, or of the emoluments of the office, & a much larger portion of the work was done by deft. than by pltf. In a conversation between them about six months after the appointment, & before the principal part of the business was transacted, pltf. stated, as the result of his inquiries into the practice in like cases, that the allowance for office expenses & personal trouble in such limited partnerships between solrs. was made by each party retaining, besides his expenses & disbursements, from ten to twenty-five per cent. on the amount of the net charges for the business done, & which principle he considered satisfactory; & deft., in reply, observed that there could be no misunderstanding about it between honourable men. Upon a bill by pltf. claiming an account & division of the profits of the business done by the co., upon the footing of an equal co-partnership, & offering to allow twenty-five per cent. upon the work done separately to the partner who did it, the ct. in the circumstances, made a decree accordingly.—WEBSTER v. Payment of sum to one solicitor—To meet liabilities of client—Right of other solicitor as against sum paid—Account.—Pltfs. were, jointly with deft., the solrs. of an abortive railway scheme under an arrangement to divide the profits between them in moieties; on the failure of the project certain of the directors subscribed £680, & deposited it with deft. to meet the liabilities of the co. Large sums being due to pltfs. in respect of costs, they requested deft. to apply the £680 for that purpose, but he refused, stating that the money was deposited with him conditionally. Pltfs. then resolved to bring actions against the directors who would not contribute; deft., who refused to take any part therein abandoning to pltfs. all claims on the costs to be recovered, & being indemnified against all risk. Actions were successfully brought, & a large sum recovered, but was reduced on taxation to a small sum, the directors declaring that the £680 were applicable to the payment of costs. Pltfs. filed their claims for an account of partnership transactions, & to recover the £680 from deft., which he had represented as not applicable to the costs. The claim was dismissed as to the £680, & the usual accounts were ordered.—OVERBURY v. TEALE (1852), 20 L. T. O. S. 107; 1 W. R. 27.

4226. Liability for fraud.—Q. sells an estate under a power contained in a mtge. deed, & out of the proceeds of the sale prior incumbrances are paid off, & retaining the amount of his mtge. debt, hands the surplus of the moneys arising from the sale to S., one of the firm of R., S. & S. who acted for him as his solr., & who were also solrs. of H., the mtgor., with injunctions to apply it in payment of subsequent incumbrances, according to their priorities. At the time of the sale L. claimed as a creditor next in priority a lien on the estate by virtue of a judgment obtained against H. & duly registered. R., S. & S. were not only aware of L.'s judgment, but had taken proceedings on the part of H. to set it aside, in which they failed. They then obtained the opinions of two counsel on the question whether Q. could safely hand over the surplus to H. One of the counsel advised that he could, & the other that he could not, the latter opinion S. concealed from Q. & the money was paid to H. Q. shortly afterwards died, & after his death L. filed a bill against his representatives to make good to him the amount of his charge, & obtained a decree in his favour. S. died, & upon a bill by Q.'s representatives against R. & S., his surviving partners & his exors., to make good the amount so paid by them, on the ground of fraudulent concealment of the adverse opinion & improper conduct in the matter :—Held : R. & S. as surviving partners of S. were liable to make good the amount to Q.'s estate, together with costs, & fraud & misrepresentation of one partner entitled the client to relief in equity against the surviving partners, & that notwithstanding the case was one in which the client might have recovered in an action of law. —REW v. R. obtained the loan from some clients of the firm, but informed pltf. that the mtgees. required collateral security as well; & that pltf. accordingly deposited with R. certain share warrants payable to bearer. A mtge. deed of the freehold estate was then prepared by R., & executed by pltf. in which, however, no mention was made of the deposit of the share warrants or of any collateral security. The mtgees. had not in fact required collateral security, & neither they nor R.'s partners had any knowledge of the deposit of the share warrants. R. afterwards sold the shares & appropriated the proceeds to his own use & absconded. On two previous occasions pltf. had deposited the same securities with R. to enable him to raise temporary loans, notice of which transactions appeared in the books of the firm; & it appeared that the firm were in the habit of holding securities payable to bearer, & also sums of money, for their clients. Pltfs. appointed B. their solr., & instructed him to act for them in a mtge. transaction. While the business was pending, B. took deft. into partnership, & gave pltfs. notice in writing. Pltfs. paid no attention to the notice, continued to correspond with B. in his own name, & finally sent him the money to advance on the mtge. by cheque made payable to his order, & accepted his receipt in his own name. In 1875, P. fraudulently, & without the knowledge of his partners, gave a legal mtge. of the lease to a third party without notice of pltf.'s mtge. The security proved insufficient, & P. having absconded, pltf. sought to make P.'s firm liable for the loss sustained by him:—Held: since the transaction of 1869, was within the ordinary limits of the partnership business, the firm was liable for negligence in respect thereof, but the remedy against them was barred by Stat. Acts done in private capacity—Fraud as trustee.]—Under a will £2,910 stock was vested in testator's three unmarried nieces, who were his extrices., in trust for themselves for life, then for children, with ulterior trusts. Their confidential solrs. were a firm of two persons, of whom the senior, under his own advice, was associated as their co-trustee, & a declaration of trust, prepared by the firm, was executed by the four persons in 1822. Subsequently, on the advice of the senior solr., the fund was sold out, & paid to him alone; but he, on the same day, paid the precise amount to the credit of the banking account of the firm. In 1824 the senior partner untruly represented that the money had been laid out on specified freehold security; but, in 1825, a sufficient freehold mtge. was taken by the senior partner to himself alone, & was treated by him as the security for the trust fund, less a very small balance, which was divided among the three ladies. The transaction was carried through & the conveyance settled by the firm of J. & G. as the co.'s solrs. The conveyance, the only title deed handed over, was retained by G. G. fraudulently raised money by deposit of the conveyance, & afterwards executed a legal mtge. to the equitable mtgee. J. had no notice that the conveyance had been made to G. alone, or of any part of the transaction, except such notice as was implied by his firm having acted for the co. partnership as solrs., were employed by A. to lay out £500 on mtge. They lent the money to L. on the mtge. of certain premises, & retained possession of the mtge. deed. The premises were afterwards sold subject to the mtge., & the purchaser paid C. the £500 & interest, but without the knowledge of B., & the deed was given up to the purchaser by C., but no receipt was indorsed thereon, nor was any reconveyance or receipt executed or signed by A., who was not informed that the money had been paid. In Dec. 1832, C., without the knowledge of B., returned to the purchaser £300, & received back the mtge. deed, & no part of the £500 was paid to A. Interest, at first on the £500, & then upon the £300, was paid to C. by the purchaser; & entries were made in the books of defts., giving credit to A. for interest on the £500, & debiting him with interest paid to his agent. In July, 1838, defts. dissolved partnership. Up to the dissolution, interest on the £500 was regularly paid to the agent of A. by C., by cheques drawn by defts. on their bankers; & after the dissolution, it was paid by C., sometimes in cash & sometimes by cheques on his own banker. In some of the receipts the money was described as interest upon a mtge. A. died in May, 1840. In Dec. 1846, the purchaser paid C. the £300 & interest, & received from him the mtge. deed. B. was ignorant of the receipts & payments subsequent to the investment of the £500, until 1849. In 1848, pltf., the exors. of A., first discovered that the mtge. money had been repaid:—Held: no action would lie against B., inasmuch as the subsequent receipt of the mtge. money by C. was wholly unauthorised, & not within the scope of the partnership business.—*SIMS v. 4249. —.—.]—Pltf. a married woman, & her husband were clients of J. & W., a father & son, who carried on business together in partnership as solrs. In 1859 pltf. became possessed to her separate use of a sum of £3,000, which, in consequence of her husband's pecuniary difficulties, she was advised by the solrs. to invest without his concurrence. On the suggestion of J. & W. she advanced to them £1,300, part of the £3,000, which they required for another client to complete a purchase of an advowson, on the security of a written undertaking signed by both to execute a legal mtge. of the advowson to her when the transaction was completed. Pltf. subsequently handed the remaining £1,700 to W., on the representation by him alone that it would be invested on mtge. of the real estate of another client. In Jan. 1865, J. died, having retired from the business in 1862 & in May, 1865, pltf. was fraudulently induced by W. to execute a deed constituting him the sole trustee of the £3,000 & empowering him to invest it as he thought proper, without being answerable for any loss. No legal mtge. of the £1,300 was ever effected, & in 1868 it was paid off to W. under the authority of the deed of 1865, & it & the £1,700, which had never been invested were spent by W. He continued to pay pltf. interest on these funds till Nov. 1871, & died insolvent in Mar. 1872. On bill against the exors. of J. & W.:—Held: (1) J.'s estate was liable to make good the loss of the £1,300; (2) in consequence of the regular payment of interest by W., laches was not attributable to pltf. for not enforcing her rights sooner; (3) the dealing with the £1,700 was not part of the regular business of J. & W. as solrs., & the receipt of it by one partner alone did not make the other partner liable, & J.'s estate was not liable to replace this fund.

(1) During part of these transactions C. was also a partner with J. & W., but he was not a party to the frauds, & no guilty knowledge was attributed to him:—Held: pltf. might proceed against any or all of the parties jointly & severally liable, & C. was not a necessary party to the suit.—*PLUMER v. His partners had no knowledge of this, but letters referring to the bonds were copied in the letter book of the firm & were charged for in the bill of costs of the firm, & the bonds were included in a statement of account which the firm made out for the trustees. P. paid some of the interest of the bonds by cheques of the firm, but on each occasion recouped the firm by a cheque for the same amount on his private account. P. misappropriated the bonds:—Held: the cheques, letters, & entries were too ambiguous to affect the other partners with acquiescence in P., having the custody of the bonds as part of the partnership business, & they could not be held liable for their misappropriation.

We must inquire, first, whether they gave him express authority to take charge of the bonds; secondly, if not, whether they ratified what he did; & thirdly, if they neither expressly authorised nor ratified his act, whether they consented that he should have general authority to act without their knowing what he did (BOWEN, L.J.).—CLEATHER v. Between the years 1867 & 1874, pltf. deposited divers sums of money with M., G. & B., a firm of solrs., for the purpose of investment. Representations were from time to time made to pltf., on behalf of the firm, that her money had been duly invested, & interest was paid to her by M., G. & B. down to the death of G., in 1877, & by the surviving members of the firm down to 1886. In 1886 it was discovered that pltf.'s moneys had never, except as to one small sum, been invested, but had, in fact, been embezzled by a clerk of the firm.

In an action brought by pltf., after the death of all the partners, for the recovery of her money, G.'s exors. pleaded Stat. Limitations & Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 8; & contended that the Act of 1888 had rendered the decision in Blair v. Bromley, No. 4250, ante, no longer applicable:—Held: the decision in Blair v. Bromley No. 4250, ante, was unaffected by Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), & pltf. was entitled to be repaid the sums invested, with interest from 1886, out of the joint estate of the firm of M., G., & B.; & if such estate was not sufficient, then to recover the balance out of the separate estates of M., G., & B.—*MOORE v. D. Dealings with Trust Funds.

4260. General rule—One partner constructive trustee—Innocent partner not affected.]—It is not within the scope of the implied authority of a solr. carrying on business in partnership to constitute himself a constructive trustee, & thereby to subject his partner to liability in that character, the partner being ignorant of the dealings by which the constructive trust is established. It having been held by the judge that a solr. had constituted himself a constructive trustee, & that both he & his partner in business were liable to make good a loss which had resulted from improper investments of the trust funds:—Held: upon the evidence in the matters in question the solr. had acted only in the character of solr. to the trustees, & that consequently neither he nor his partner were liable as constructive trustees.—MARA v. BROWNE, [1896] 1 Ch. 199; 65 L. J. Ch. 225; 73 L. T. 638; 44 W. R. 330; 12 T. L. R. 111; 40 Sol. Jo. 131, C. A.

4261. Investment of trust moneys on mortgage of insufficient security—Liability of all partners.]

Funds, subject to the trusts of a settlement, were invested in Exchequer bills, on the sale of which the proceeds were paid to the account of a firm of solrs., F., S., & F., at their bankers. The funds were afterwards advanced on a mtge. of house property in a new neighbourhood, & of inadequate value. At that date there were no trustees of the settlement, & the mtge. was taken in the names of S. & two other persons who were then proposed, & shortly afterwards appointed new trustees, & never repudiated the transaction. S. was the member of his firm who acted for them in all the matters, & for the work which he did the firm, by arrangement, received, at the time when the money was advanced, payment for their bill of costs out of the funds. The mtge. proved to be an insufficient security, & in an action against the trustees it was held that they were jointly & severally liable to make good the loss sustained. The property not having been sold, or the trust funds replaced, beneficiaries sought to make the firm of solrs. liable for the loss of the funds on the ground of negligence, though S.'s partners had not had any personal knowledge of the property at the time when the mtge. transaction was completed:—Held: (1) in all that S. had done in the matter of the mtge., he acted within the scope of his authority as a partner, his firm must be taken to have had knowledge that the security was, for trustees, improper, & consequently, they were implicated in & jointly & severally liable for the breach of trust; & further, the judgment which had been recovered against S., as one of the trustees, had not discharged his partners from liability; (2) though there had not been an express retainer, the relation of solr. & client might be inferred from the acts of the parties; it subsisted between the firm & the trustees, & the firm were liable in damages for the negligence of S. for failure in discharge of the duty which had been undertaken to the clients; (3) the liability extended to the estate of a member of the firm since deceased.—BLYTH v. FLADGATE, MORGAN v. BLYTH, SMITH v. BLYTH, [1891] 1 Ch. 337; 60 L. J. Ch. 66; 63 L. T. 546; 39 W. R. 422; 7 T. L. R. 29.

Two days later, & after the account had been partially drawn upon, X. was told by B. that his name had been made use of for a formal party. X. reprimanded B. for this, but, without inquiring into the nature of the business, accompanied B. to the Paymaster General's Office, & received a cheque for £15 for costs; over £10 of this he paid to B. for out-of-pocket expenses, & the balance of £4 5s. 6d. he handed to his partner Y., who entered it to the credit of the firm in their books without knowing anything of the circumstances under which the money had been paid. A large portion of the fund formerly in ct. having been lost:—Held: (1) even if X. had previously authorised the use of his name for a formal party, he would not have been responsible for the acts of fraud & forgery committed by his supposed agent for that agent's own fraudulent purposes; (2) under the circumstances, X. had not condoned or ratified the use of his name by B., & was not liable for the whole of the loss sustained, but only for the amount of the £15 cheque which he took; (3) Y. was liable only for the £4 5s. 6d. received by him for the partnership.—*MARSH v. SECT. 5.—PROFITS OF OFFICES.

4277. Profits of offices held by individual partners—Whether treated as profits of partnership.—Primâ facie, the emoluments derived from offices of the character of a clerkship to the guardians of a union, do not fall within the ordinary description of profits of an attorney.

The profits of the offices of clerkship to poor law guardians, of superintendent registrar of births, etc., treasurer of turnpike trust, stewardship of a manor, treasurership of a charity & receivership of tithes, at a fixed salary, held to form part of a partnership between solrs.

In the absence of any evidence, the presumption is, that partners are equally entitled to the profits & equally liable to bear the losses of the business.—COLLINS v. JACKSON, JACKSON v. COLLINS (1862), 31 Beav. 645; 51 E. R. 1289.

4278. —.—.]—Metropolis Toll Bridge Act, 1877 (c. xcix), s. 20, provided that compensation should be paid to certain officers, including clerks, but not including solrs. of the private cos. or corpns. whose bridges were taken over by the Metropolitan Board of Works under the Act upon a scale to be calculated on the basis of the emoluments actually received by them in the two years previous to the passing of the Act. The Deptford Creek Bridge was taken over by the board, & thereby pltf., who was a partner in a firm of solrs. & clerk to the bridge company, lost his office. He had received a salary as clerk, & also payments for legal business done by him as solr. for the company, & commission on the rents of the co.'s property which he received. The bridge co. had by their Act power to appoint a solr. & receiver as well as a clerk; they had never appointed such officers, & the legal business of the co. had always been done, & the rents received, by the clerk who had always been a solr.:—Held: by the practice of the co. these duties had been attached to the office of clerk, & pltf. was entitled to compensation in respect of the payments received for discharging them as part of the emoluments of his office; but, as to the payments for legal business done by him, only in respect of his proportion as partner in the firm of solrs. of the net profits after deducting all office expenses necessarily incurred in earning the money.—DREW v. METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS (1883), 50 L. T. 138, C. A.

4279. —.— Office purchased with partnership funds.—Where a personal office or employment is purchased with the partnership funds for the benefit of the partnership, the partner in whose name it is purchased is not necessarily a trustee of the profits of the office for the other partners, after the term of the partnership has expired.—CLARKE v. RICHARDS (1835), 1 Y. & C. Ex. 351; 4 L. J. Ex. Eq. 49; 160 E. R. 143.

4280. —.— Provision in partnership articles—Legality of.—A., an attorney, holding the offices of clerk of the peace, clerk to the magistrates, clerk to the comrs. of land & assessed taxes, clerk to the comrs. of sewers, clerk to the deputy-lieutenants, steward of certain manors, coroner for a liberty, secretary to a Conservative Assocn., & secretary to a polling district assocn., entered into articles of partnership with B., by which, after reciting that A. carried on the business of an attorney at, etc., & held many offices, clerkships, & stewardships of manors & that it had been agreed that B. should enter into partnership with A. "in the said business, & in the emoluments of the offices, clerkships, & stewardships," upon the terms thereafter expressed, it was agreed that they should enter into partnership for twenty years & that "all the profits & emoluments arising from the offices, clerkships, & stewardships, held by A., as also all such offices, clerkships, & stewardships as should be held by either of them A. & B. during the partnership, should be considered as partnership property, & be distributable accordingly"; & the articles contained this further provision, "that if A. should die during the term, then, if & during such period or periods as, it should happen that no son of A. should be a partner in the business, B. should be interested in one moiety of the partnership business, & the exors. or administrators of A. should be entitled to the profits of the remaining moiety thereof, to be applied by them as part of his personal estate":—Held: the contract was not void, as being a contract for the sale of an office, either within Sale of Offices Acts, 1551 (c. 16), or 1809 (c. 126), & the latter clause was no violation of 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 11.—STERRY v. CLIFTON (1850), 9 C. B. 110; 4 New Mag. Cas. 114; 19 L. J. C. P. 237; 14 L. T. O. S. 375, 488; 14 J. P. 274; 14 Jur. 312; 137 E. R. 834.

4283. Office in nature personal.]

—Where one of two partners, holds an office personal in its nature, the emoluments of which are by the terms of the partnership to be equally divided between the partners, a debt incurred in respect of such office is not a partnership but a private debt.—ALSTON v. SIMS (1855), 3 Eq. Rep. 834; 24 L. J. Ch. 553; 25 L. T. O. S. 139; 1 Jur. N. S. 438; 3 W. R. 431.

4284. ——— Pay received by partner as army officer.]—A partnership deed made in 1909 between pltf. & deft., who were solrs., provided that “the salary or other benefit derived by either partner from any office which he may hold during the continuance of the partnership shall be treated as forming part of the profits,” & that after five years pltf. should not be obliged to attend to the business any further than he thought proper. In 1914 pltf. joined the Army with the rank of major, & in 1918 he was demobilised. The partnership was dissolved in 1921:—Held: the word “office” in the deed included the position of an officer in the Army, & on the taking of accounts the pay received by pltf. as an officer was to be treated as profits of the partnership.—CARLYON-BRITTON v. LUMB (1922), 38 T. L. R. 298.

SECT. 6.—GOODWILL.

4285. Whether goodwill in partnership business.]

—SPICER v. JAMES (1830), cited in 3 De G. & Sm. at p. 713; 64 E. R. 673.

4286. ——— Necessity for express contract.]

In 1877 the three partners in a firm of solrs. agreed that the partnership should be dissolved, that two of them should continue to carry on the partnership business, & should employ the third as a clerk at a salary, & that all the books, papers, & other property of the firm should vest in & be the property of the two continuing partners. The third partner died shortly afterwards, & in an action by his administratrix against the two continuing partners, an order was made directing the partnership accounts to be taken as from Jan. 1874. In taking the accounts, pltf. claimed that a sum should be allowed in respect of the interest of the deceased partner in the “goodwill” of the partnership business, which was put at £10,000, being five years’ purchase of the estimated annual profits of the business:—Held: under the circumstances no sums could be allowed in respect of the alleged “goodwill” of the business.

As a general rule, & in the absence of express contract, there is not, in a partnership between solrs., any partnership asset which is capable of being sold or valued as the “goodwill” of the partnership business.—ARUNDELL v. BELL (1883), 52 L. J. Ch. 537; 49 L. T. 345; 31 W. R. 477, C. A. Annotation:—Refd. Re Barfield, Goodman v. Child (1901), 84 L. T. 28.

4287. ——— Articles containing provision for goodwill on death or retirement—Subsequent articles containing no provision.]—F., II. & B. were in partnership as solrs. until 1839, when F. retired & A. was introduced into the business, & it was then agreed that F. should be at liberty at any future time to introduce T. into the firm. In 1846 the partners entered into new articles, by which it was agreed that the partnership should continue for seven years; that on the death or retirement of any partner his interest & goodwill in the business should be paid for; & it was also provided that these articles should be subject to the agreement as to the introduction of T. into the business as already stated. In 1848 H. died, & in accordance with the above agreement a sum of money was paid to his widow for his interest & goodwill in the business. In 1849 T. was admitted into the firm, & in the articles of partnership it was agreed that he should receive one fifth of the profits until Sept. 1, 1853, after which date he was to share equally with the other partners. In case of the death or retirement of either of the two senior partners in the meantime, his two-fifths were to be divided into thirds, the remaining senior partner to take two-thirds & T. one-third. On Aug. 29, 1853, two days before the expiration of the partnership of 1846, A. gave notice of his retirement & claimed to be paid for his share of the goodwill of the business according to the clause in the articles of 1846:—Held: pltf.’s share must be confined within the limits of the partnership which terminated two days after he gave notice, & he was not entitled to any supposed value beyond it.

The “goodwill” of a business is the sum of money which any person would be willing to give for the chance of being able to keep the trade connected with the place where it has been carried on. But the term “goodwill” is wholly inapplicable to the profession of a solr., which has no local existence, but is entirely personal.—AUSTEN v. BOYS (1858), 2 De G. & J. 626; 27 L. J. Ch. 714; 31 L. 4288. Use of firm name—Agreement by retiring partner to permit use—Validity of agreement.]

A contract entered into by a practising attorney to relinquish his business & recommend his clients to two other attorneys for a valuable consideration, & that he would not himself practise in such business within certain limits, & would permit them to make use of his name in their firm for a certain time, but without his interference, etc., was holden to be valid in law.—*BUNN v. 4289. ———.]—Notwithstanding the case of Bunn v. Guy, No. 4288, ante, from which I do not mean to express dissent, decided as it was by judges of high authority, I am not prepared to say that it is fit that a ct. of equity should enforce an agreement between two solrs., that one on retiring from the business shall permit the other to carry on the business in his name. Whether such agreement be or be not within the strict policy of the law it may be doubtful whether the ct. ought to assist it (KNIGHT BRUCE, V.-C.).—THORNBURY v. BEVILL (1842), 1 Y. & C. Ch. in the event of his dying in the lifetime of his mother, should pay to his widow an annuity of £100 during the remainder of his mother's life, & should indemnify him against all liability in respect of his name being used, & that the partnership should cease on the death of the mother of the retiring partner:—Held: not to be void as against public policy, but to be a valid & binding agreement; the agreement must be considered to mean, that an annuity was to be granted by deed, & that the retiring partner was entitled to enforce specific performance of such agreement; as incidental to such relief, the ct. would decree an account & payment of the arrears of the annuity, & would not direct the deed to be ante-dated, so as to cover them, & leave pltf. to recover at law upon the deed.—*AUBIN v. 4293. ——— Dissolution of partnership—Goodwill not disposed of—No risk of liability to other partners.—A firm of solrs., consisting of three partners, carried on business under the style of "Chappell, Son, & Griffith." The senior partner having died, the business was continued by the son & the junior partner under the same style for upwards of three years. The partnership was then dissolved, an agreement being executed providing for the dissolution, but containing no reference to the goodwill of the business or the sale or disposal thereof.

After the dissolution the business of a solr. was carried on by Chappell, the son, on the premises held by the original firm, under the style of "Chappell & Son." Griffith, having taken offices a few doors off, also carried on the business of a solr., under the style of "Chappell & Griffith." To this Chappell objected, & having commenced an action to restrain Griffith from carrying on business under the style referred to, moved for an interim injunction.

It was proved that, immediately before the dissolution of the partnership, Griffith had written to Chappell stating that he intended to carry on business under the style of "Chappell & Griffith" & making suggestions as to the style which Chappell should adopt.

Circulars were also forwarded by Griffith to all the clients of the old firm, informing them that he proposed to carry on the business of a solr. by himself, & stating the style he intended to adopt:—Held: the prima facie right of dejt. was to use the name of the old firm, no arrangement having been made as to goodwill of the business; from the nature of the business, & from the fact that the style of the original firm had been used with a variation, there was practically no risk that pltf. would be exposed to injury by what dejt. was doing; & therefore no case had been made for the intermediate interference of the ct.—CHAPPELL v. GRIFFITH (1885), 53 L. T. 459; 50 J. P. 86; 2 T. L. R. 58.

Annotation:—Appld. Burchell v. Wilde, [1900] 1 Ch. 551.

—].—Upon the dissolution of a partnership, without any sale or assignment of the goodwill of the business, & without any provision as to the use of the firm name, each of the partners is entitled to carry on business under that name, provided that he does not by so doing expose his former partners to any risk of liability.

Whether there will be any such risk is a matter to be determined, having regard to the circumstances of each case.

In 1882 a partnership of solrs. was constituted, the partners being William Burchell the elder, William Burchell the younger, dejt. W. G. Wilde, & pltf., J. W. Burchell & C. T. D. Burchell, & they carried on business under the style of "Burchell & co."

In June, 1893, William Burchell the elder having died & William Burchell the younger having retired, pltf. & dejt. W. G. Wilde agreed to continue in partnership under the style of "Burchell & co."

In the year 1899 the partnership was dissolved by consent, there being no sale of the goodwill or assets & no provision as to the use of the firm name.

Pltf. then proceeded to carry on business at the old office as "Burchells & co.," & dejt. W. G. Wilde & his son, whom he had taken into partnership, at new offices as "Burchell & co."

Pltf. claimed the exclusive right to use the name "Burchell" or "Burchells," & to restrain defts. from using either of those names in any way as part of the firm name. The judge held on motion for an injunction, that the right to the injunction depended upon pltf.' establishing that any use of the word "Burchell" as part of the name of defts.' firm would expose pltf. to risk of liability, & the ct. not being satisfied that either of pltf. would be under any tangible risk of liability if defts. were, as they said they were, willing to do to practise as "Burchell, Wilde & co.," especially if pltf. were to use a style carrying their initials, or were to take the name of "Burchells & Burchell," made no order on the motion:—Held: subject to the above limitation, defts. were entitled to use the name "Burchell & co.," though it would be more satisfactory if they would undertake to continue to use, as they had done since the hearing, the name "Burchell, Wilde & co."—BURCHELL v. WILDE, [1900] 1 Ch. 551; 69 L. J. Ch. 314; 82 L. T. 576; 48 W. R. 491; 16 T. L. R. 257, C. A.

Dissolution of partnership generally.—See PARTNERSHIP, Vol. XXXVI., pp. 497–520.

4295. Right to dissolve as against client.—Solrs. in partnership cannot dissolve their partnership, as against their client, without his consent, so as to enable the retiring partner, as discharged, to act against him.

Practice of solrs., partners, dividing their business, considering one only as agent to the other, disallowed; the client being entitled to their united exertions.—CHOLMONDELEY (MARQUIS) v. CLINTON (LORD) (1815), 19 Ves. 261; Coop. G. 80; 34 E. R. 515, L. C.

4296. Return of premium—Dissolution due to bankruptcy of partner paying premium—Petition by partner receiving premium.]—A., being an attorney, prevails upon B. to enter into partnership with him for the term of five years, for which he is to pay £1,050, but before fourteen months are expired A. sues out a commission of bkpt. against B. which puts an end to the partnership:—Held: a fraud on the part of A., & he was decreed to repay part of the premium which had already been advanced, & to deliver up a bond given by B. for securing the remainder.—*HAMIL v. Deft. before entering into the partnership, knew that pltf. was inexperienced & incompetent in his profession, & assigned that reason for requiring the amount of premium which was paid. After the expiration of two years deft. complained that pltf.'s incompetence was injurious to the business, & called on him to dissolve the partnership; & pltf. thereupon filed a bill praying for a dissolution, & for a return of a proportionate part of the premium:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the return of a part of the premium proportionate to the unexpired portion of the term.—*ATWOOD v. Pltf. paid the premium of £600. Afterwards deft. dissolved the partnership by giving a notice as provided by the articles:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the return of a proportionate part of the premium.—ROOKE v. NISBET (1881), 50 L. J. Ch. 588; sub nom. DAW v. ROOKE, ROOKE v. NISBET, 29 W. R. 842.

4299. — Grounds for refusing return—Incompetence of partner.]—(1) Mere delay by one partner in furnishing further capital according to articles of partnership is not a ground for rescinding the partnership contract, or, in case of dissolution, for depriving the partner of the right to a return of the premium paid by him on entering into partnership.

(2) Where one partner, who has paid a premium on entering into partnership, commenced an action for dissolution, & the other partner immediately afterwards commenced a cross-action for dissolution, & the first partner then filed affidavits in his action containing imputations of misconduct against the other partner, which he did not sustain, & one decree for dissolution was made in both actions, which were practically one litigation:—Held: the making of the imputations was not such misconduct as to disentitle the party making them to a return of his premium.

(3) Mere incompetence in a partner, however great, is not a bar to the return of any part of the premium paid by him, unless such incompetence has caused damage or injury, when it may be taken into account in determining how much of the premium shall be returned.

(4) Where a man with a business has taken a person into partnership with him, & has taken a less premium from him in the belief that he will be of material service in the partnership, & the new partner turns out utterly incompetent, such incompetence may possibly be a good reason for not allowing the return of the whole premium.

(5) Where an inquiry was directed to be made in chambers as to the amount of premium to be returned to one partner on a dissolution of partnership, & a certain amount was certified by the chief clerk, whose certificate was afterwards confirmed by the judge & the Ct. of Appeal, interest on the amount was directed to be paid from the date of the certificate.—*BREWER v. 4303. Winding up—Authority of partner to give credit in account—No direction to appropriate.]—P. & D., in the year 1814, commenced a partnership as solrs. W. was a client of the firm, & employed D. as his private agent to receive his rents. The partnership was dissolved in 1817, when W. was indebted to the firm for a bill of costs in a sum of £867; & D., upon a settlement of the partnership accounts between him & P., was found indebted to P. in a sum of £750, for which he gave security, & agreed to assign to P. the outstanding partnership debts. Of this settlement, debt, & agreement notice was given to W. in 1821. During the partnership & afterwards D. had received moneys on account of W. beyond the amount of the bill of costs: there was no evidence of any direction given by W. to D. to apply the moneys received by D. on his account to the payment of the bill of costs, nor of any settlement of accounts between W. & D., but it was in evidence, that upon one occasion W. said to D. that he had better keep some money of W. which he had in his hands, as he might want it.

A bill in equity filed by P., stating these facts, & that D. had possession of the partnership books, to which P. had no access; that D. had refused to concur with him in suing W. at law or to permit the use of his name for that purpose; & that by collusion between W. & D., the moneys of W. received by D. had, as they pretended, been applied to payment of the partnership debt, & praying an account & payment of the debt, was dismissed by the Master of the Rolls; but on appeal to the Lord Chancellor, this order was reversed, & a decree for account & payment made against the exors. of W., & this decree was affirmed on appeal.—*NOTTIDGE v. Order previously obtained by one partner—Petition for discharge by client & other partner—Misjoinder of parties.]—(1) Two solrs. in partnership: the one partner obtains an order in the name of a client; the partnership is then dissolved, & the client & the other partner come as co-petitioners to discharge the order, & for other relief:—Held: on the whole scope of the petition it was a misjoinder for such other partner to unite in it.

(2) Covenant on dissolution of partnership between solrs., that various debts & costs should only be received by them jointly. In a suit, in which costs the subject of such covenant are due, a stop order only may be obtained. Further relief against breach of the covenant as regards those costs must be sought by bill.—SANGAR v. GARDINER (1838), Coop. Pr. Cas. 119; 47 E. R. 428.

4306. Exclusion of partner—Restraint by injunction—Pending inquiry as to facts justifying exclusion.]—Where solrs. had entered into partnership upon the terms that either party might dissolve the partnership in the event of inattention to business or other misconduct on the part of the other partner, & one of them having availed himself of such provision, & excluded the other from the office:—Held: on a bill filed by the excluded partner, an issue was properly directed to try the fact of inattention to business, & in the meantime the continuing partner ought to be restrained by injunction from excluding his co-partner from the business.—MINGAYE v. WILKINS (1848), 11 L. T. O. S. 41, L. C.

4307. — Pending winding up.]—Where A. & B. have carried on business as solr. in partnership, the ct. will not allow A. to give notice of dissolution, & exclude B. from the office until the concern is finally wound up, even though it be a partnership at will, & the business is carried on in the offices belonging to A. with a right of user by the partnership only during the existence of the partnership.

There must be an injunction to restrain deft. from excluding pltf. from the law offices of the dissolved partnership, lately subsisting between pltf. & deft., & from preventing pltf. from having as free & unrestrained access thereto as deft. had, & from permitting deft.'s sole name to remain on the offices as carrying on business therein, or affixing thereon any name or inscription denoting that he was carrying on business in such offices on his sole account (WOOD, V.-C.).—ROBERTS v. EBERHARDT (1853), as reported in 2 Eq. Rep. 780; 23 L. J. Ch. 201; 22 L. T. O. S. 253; 2 W. R. 125; 69 E. R. 63.

4308. Notice of dissolution—Notice by one partner—Necessity for joining co-partner.]—By articles of partnership between three solrs., A., B., & C., it was provided that in case either of the partners should do or omit to do certain acts, or misconduct himself as there mentioned, or neglect diligently & faithfully to carry out the partnership practice, or if two of the partners, naming them, should unduly absent themselves, then the other partners or partner might give notice declaring the partnership dissolved. By another clause it was provided that each of the three partners was to employ all his time in the partnership business, & was to communicate to the others or other of them, on request, all instructions in anywise relating to the partnership practice. By another clause it was provided that C. should be a sub-partner only, should perform & attend to all the duties of certain offices held by the firm as partnership property, & should, in lieu of all his share in the profits of the partnership, take the emoluments of those offices. Shortly after the formation of the partnership, A., being in difficulties, absconded. Disputes arose between B. & C., & B. gave notice to C., & served it at A.'s place of residence, for a dissolution, in terms of the articles. The bill was taken pro confesso as against A.:—Held: (1) it was not a sufficient cause of dissolution to show that C. had neglected other parts of the partnership practice; it must be shown that he had neglected the part peculiarly confided to his charge; (2) neglect to communicate instructions, etc., was a cause of dissolution only if such neglect continued after a request to have the instructions, etc., communicated; (3) B. had no right, under the articles, to dissolve by himself alone against A., without joining C. in the notice of dissolution given to or served on A., but the notice operated as a general dissolution of partnership, but without the consequences following a dissolution under the articles.

Under the circumstances of the present case, the offices in question were directed to be valued by the master, & deft. C., in whose name they were granted, was to be charged with the value in taking the partnership accounts.—SMITH v. MULES (1852), 9 Harc. 556; 21 L. J. Ch. 803; 19 L. T. O. S. 26; 16 Jur. 261; 68 E. 4311. — Impossibility of carrying on partnership without mutual loss—By change of circumstances—Or conduct of parties.]—(1) This ct. will dissolve a partnership before the expiration of the term, where the circumstances have so changed, & the conduct of the parties is such, as to render it impossible to carry it on without injury to all the partners.

The ct. dissolved a partnership entered into for a term of years, when, without any breach of the partnership articles, circumstances had so altered that it could not be carried on upon the footing originally contemplated, & the confidence mutually reposed having ceased, & given place to mistrust, so that it was apparent that the partnership could not go on without mutual injury.

(2) A. & B., who had been partners for some time, entered into a new partnership with C. At the same time B. took all the assets of the old firm, & covenanted to indemnify A. from the liabilities. The ct. held, that the partnership between the three might be determined by the ct., for due cause, without setting aside the deed of indemnity, which might be the subject of another suit.—HARRISON v. TENNANT (1856), 21 Beav. 482; 52 E. R. 945.

Annotation.—Generally, Refd. Leary v. Shout (1864), 33 Beav. 582.

4312. — Slight breach of articles—Provision against giving guarantees without consent—One guarantee for small amount over long period.]—This ct. will not dissolve a partnership on the ground of a small infraction of the articles of co-partnership.

Articles of partnership provided, that if either of the partners should give guarantees without consent, the other might dissolve on giving notice. One of the partners, in the course of eight years, gave a guarantee for £52, & the other gave notice to dissolve:—Held: this alone was not, in equity, a sufficient ground for a dissolution.—ANDERSON v. ANDERSON (1857), 25 Beav. 190; 53 E. R. 609.

4313. — Partner misapplying trust funds.]—A partnership between two solrs. for their joint lives may be dissolved instantly, if one of the parties fraudulently sells out trust funds & applies the produce to his own use.—ESSELL v. HAYWARD (1860), 30 Beav. 158; 29 L. J. Ch. 806; 3 L. T. 500; 24 J. P. 819; 6 Jur. N. S. 690; 8 W. R. 593; 54 E. R. 849.

4315. Re-opening of settled accounts.]—Where an account is impeached, if a single important error is established, the ct. will not, except in the case of fraud, order the whole account to be opened, but will make a decree that pltf. may be at liberty to surcharge & falsify.

In a partnership action, where one error of £950 was established in an account long settled:—Held: on taking the accounts pltf. should be at liberty to surcharge & falsify, & such liberty should not be limited to errors appearing from the books.—GETTING v. KEIGHLEY (1878), 9 Ch. D. 547; 48 L. J. Ch. 45; 27 W. R. 283.

4316. Partner receiving assets on account of himself & partners—Not person acting in fiduciary capacity—Debtors Act, 1869 (c. 62), sect. 4 (3).]—One partner receiving assets of the partnership on account of himself & his co-partners, is not liable to imprisonment under above sub-sect. as a person acting in a fiduciary capacity.—PIDDOCKE v. BURT, [1894] 1 Ch. 343; 63 L. J. Ch. 246; 70 L. T. 553; 42 W. R. 248; 38 Sol. Jo. 141; 8 R. 104.

4317. Rights & duties of partners—No duty to assist in making out bills—Partnership books in hands of receiver.]—In an action for dissolution of partnership between solrs. a receiver was appointed to get in outstanding costs due from clients, & the books of the firm were placed in his hands. The entries of attendances made by R., one of the partners, were not sufficiently detailed to enable the receiver to make out proper bills. R. refused to settle the bills unless remunerated by 5 per cent. on the amount thereof. The other partner thereupon took out a summons for an order that R. should be directed to settle the bills within one week:—Held: the summons must be refused.—RAY v. FLOWER ELLIS (1912), 56 Sol. 4319. Creation of agency — Employment of country solicitor by solicitor of Government department.]—An attorney in the country employed by the solr. of one of the departments of the Govt. (e.g. the Post Office) in carrying on a Govt. prosecution, is an agent to such solr. & his bill of costs is not therefore taxable under Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 37.

If a prosecutor employs P. to conduct a prosecution, in the course of which work is done, & if P., residing in London, & doing himself such part of the work as could be performed in London, delegates to S., residing in the country, such part as could be performed there, because he does not choose to leave London to perform it himself. P. must be considered as the principal, & by consequence, becomes P.'s agent (COLERIDGE, J.).—SIMONS v. PEACOCK, Re SIMONS (1845), 3 Dow. & L. 156; 14 L. J. Q. B. 296; 5 L. T. O. 4320. Agreement to charge costs on agency terms—Solicitor executor appointing another—Suit for administration of estate—Solicitor executor beneficially interested.]—S., solrs., promised, by letter, to conduct the professional business in which F. might be concerned "personally or otherwise," upon the terms of receiving agency charges. F. was a solr., but he had omitted to take out his certificate; at that time he was interested in a suit which he had procured to be instituted against himself, for the purpose of administering the estate of testatrix, whose exor. he was, & in whose estate he was beneficially interested. Upon the completion of this business, S. obtained the whole of the money belonging to F. out of ct.; they repudiated the letter, & insisted upon their right to costs as between solr. & client; they also refused all accounts, & never delivered any bills of costs. Upon a bill by F.:—Held: the letter was a valid agreement; S. were not entitled to higher charges because F. was uncertificated; his being uncertificated was immaterial, as such an agreement was legal if made with any client; the transaction was such that it could not be taxed under the common order; & it was necessary to file a bill & abandon the common order which had been obtained for taxation; & a reference was directed to the taxing master to tax the bill of costs as between principal & agent.—*FOLEY v. 4322. — Solicitor conducting defence of another.]—A solr. agreed to undertake the defence of another solr. upon agency charges. On special petition, a taxation of his bill was ordered, "having regard to the agreement."

A solr. agreed to conduct the defence of another solr. upon agency terms, in case of the defence being unsuccessful. On entering into the agreement, the latter suppressed from the former the existence of a material correspondence, which was the principal ground of a decree being made against him. But the solr., after the discovery, still continued the defence without objection:—Held: he was not released from the contract.—Re GEDYE (1857), 23 Beav. 347; 53 E. R. 136.

4325. Agreement to share costs on agency terms.]—A. employed B., a writer to the signet, as his law agent in Scotland; & on the recommendation of B., he employed C. as his solr. in England. By a private agreement between B. & C., the latter arranged to allow the former half the profits of the business transacted by him for A. Before the expiration of the term, he obtained an order of course, in a suit, to change the agent, suppressing the existence of the special contract. The order was discharged for irregularity, with costs.—RICHARDS v. SCARBOROUGH MARKET CO. (1853), 17 Beav. 83; 22 L. J. Ch. 759; 21 L. T. O. S. 17; 17 Jur. 294; 1 W. R. 250; 51 E. R. 963.

4331. — London agents for country solicitors—Partners common to both firms—Fees on taxation.]—It is a settled rule in the taxing master's office that where a London firm of solrs. & a country firm have a common partner, the London firm cannot be treated as agent for the country firm so as to be entitled to agency fees, but will be considered as transacting the business on its own account.

Where, therefore, in winding-up proceedings, a London firm acted for a country firm, each firm consisting of three partners, two of whom were the same in both firms:—Held: close copies & term fees could not be allowed on taxation.

As regards close copies, held, that the rule in Appendix N. as to close copies did not give the taxing master a discretion as to allowing them, for that the rule only applied in cases of agency.—Re BOROUGH COMMERCIAL & BUILDING SOCIETY, [1894] 1 Ch. 289; 63 L. S. thereupon took the money out of ct. after taxation, which included this item of H.'s fees. Before he received this money it came to his knowledge that H. had not been paid. In an action by H. against S. to recover these fees as money had & received:—Held: there was no privity of contract between them, & the action therefore failed.—HANNAFORD v. SYMS (1898), 79 L. 4338. ——— On application of agent.]—In 1903 R., a solr., as clerk to the H. district council, instructed B. L. & co. to take certain proceedings in London in pursuance of a resolution of the council. The proceedings were accordingly taken, & conducted by B. L. & co., as the London agents of R. B. L. & co.'s bill of costs was taxed & paid on that footing. Upon a subsequent arbn. in the same matter B., as the successor of B. L. & co., acted as solrs. upon R.'s instructions without any fresh retainer. R. became financially embarrassed. B. sent in his bill direct to the council. They, by a letter dated Oct. 30, 1906, instructed B. to send in his bill to the clerk of the council to be taxed, but after nine months refused to pay the bill, on the ground that B.'s claim was against R., to whom the council were liable :—Held : the council were not estopped by their letter of Oct. 30, 1906, not did this letter amount to a contract, or ratification of any contract, to pay, & in the absence of any evidence of retainer by the council of B. as their solr., they were not liable to have his bill taxed as against themselves.—Re BAKER (1907), 52 Sol. M., with the consent as he alleged of C., instructed another firm of solrs., S. & T., to have S. & Son's bill taxed. S. & T. instructed their London agents to present the usual petition for taxation in the names of M. & C. On an objection of the registrar that the work had been done before M. was appointed, his name was struck out, & the petition presented in C.'s name alone. The London agents of S. & T. indorsed the petition with their own names as solrs. for C. instead of as agents for S. & T. his solrs. The usual order was made for taxation. C. moved to discharge it on the ground that he had never authorised the petition :—Held : C. had in fact authorised the presentation of the petition, but, on the authority of *Wray v. on the record, whether in London as agent for a country solr. or in a district registry as agent for a London solr., has a general authority to compromise an action on behalf of his client, provided he acts bond fide & reasonably, & not in defiance of his direct & positive instructions; & in either case the lay client will be bound although there is no privity between him & the agent on the record.

Trustees issued an originating summons in the Liverpool District Registry for directions in certain matters relating to the trust estate. An appearance was entered in the district registry by Liverpool solrs. as agents for London solrs., who were the principal solrs. of defts., the beneficiaries under the trust. Defts. objected to the application as unnecessary, & on their behalf a summons was taken out to transfer the proceedings to London. Prior to the hearing of the two summonses the London solrs. wrote their Liverpool agents, "Failing an order dismissing pl'tfs.' application with costs, & giving costs on our application, you will please adjourn the matter to the judge." When the two summonses were heard by the registrar, the Liverpool agents, after some discussion, agreed that no order should be made except that the costs of all parties should be paid out of the estate. On motion by defts. to discharge this order:—Held: on the evidence, it was a consent order; the letter did not prohibit a compromise; & defts. were bound by the act of the Liverpool agents.—*Re NEWEN, CAR-RUTHERS v. 4350. Whether privity of contract between agent & lay client.—ASQUITH v. ASQUITH, [1885] W. N. 31.

4351. ———.]—Where a country solr. employs a London agent he ought to incorporate in his bill of costs the details of the charges of the London agent, & until the details of such charges are stated, either in the original or a supplemental bill, there is no complete bill capable of taxation so as to entitle the solr. to rely upon its delivery for twelve months as a ground for refusing taxation.

It is well settled that between the client & the London agent of the county solr. there is no priority. The relationship of solr. & client does not exist between the client & the London agent (STIRLING, J.).—Re POMEROY & TANNER, [1897] 1 Ch. 284; 66 L. J. Ch. 158; 75 L. T. 525; 45 W. 4354. ———. For payment of money in hands of agent—Proceeds received without authority.—Where a country attorney, who is employed in a cause, employs a London agent, there is not, in general, such privity between the client & the London agent as entitles the client to recover, for money had & received, against the agent, in respect of proceeds of the cause which the agent has received in the ordinary course of his business. But, if it appear that such proceeds have been received by the agent without authority, either from the client or the country attorney, the ct. will, if the agent be an attorney of the ct. compel him, upon application, to pay over the proceeds to the client. Though the country attorney be indebted to the London agent in a greater sum on other accounts.—ROBBINS v. FENNEL, (1847), 11 Q. B. 248; 2 New Pract. Cas. 426; 17 L. J. Q. No directions were in fact given to the bailiff in possession to withdraw, & he continued in possession, holding both warrants. On May 3, the London agents of W., acting as attorneys for F., took out a summons for F.'s discharge from custody, on the ground that the ca. sa. had been irregularly issued; & an order was thereon made by consent, on May 4, that on payment of the debt & costs no ca. sa. should be issued, but that P. should be at liberty to proceed on the fi. fa. already issued, & "under which the sheriff of Hants is in possession." The moneys were so received & applied after J.'s death. J.'s estate was insolvent, & a summons was taken out by J.'s exor. for payment of these sums:—Held: as H. had received these moneys as solr. on the record & by express agreement with J., he was entitled to retain them, subject only to an account.—*JEYES v. SUB-SECT. 4.—REMUNERATION OF AGENT.

4403. Usual terms—Repayment of disbursements.]—W. was the country solr. of the Sittingbourne & Sheerness Railway co. L. agreed to act as his London agent in the co.'s business on the usual agency terms, except that L. should not call on W. to pay any of his agency bills until W. had obtained payment of his bill of costs from the co. There was difficulty in obtaining payment from the co., but ultimately, by means of a litigation which lasted eleven years, W. obtained payment from the co. of the amount of his bill of costs, with a considerable sum for interest:—Held: the usual agency terms being that the agent should be repaid his disbursements, & receive, not half the profits, but half the profit charges whether they were paid by the client or not, he was entitled to nothing more, & could not claim to participate in the interest; for although his suspending his right to payment would have made a stipulation for interest reasonable, the ct. could not import such a stipulation from the mere fact of his agreeing not to claim payment till W. had received the amount of his bill.—WARD v. LAWSON (1890), 43 Ch. D. 353; 62 L. T. 158; 6 T. L. R. 156; sub nom. WARD v. LAWSON, LAWSON v. WARD, 59 L. J. Ch. 323; 38 W. R. 300, C. A.

4404. ——— Interest on disbursements not allowed.]—Notwithstanding the definition of the word "client" in Attorneys & Solicitors Act, 1870 (c. 28), s. 3, that Act does not apply to accounts between country solrs. & their town agents. The Act is not retrospective, & therefore interest cannot be allowed under sect. 17 on disbursements made prior to the passing of the Act. In May, 1872, a country solr. commenced a suit against his London agent, claiming an account & taxation of the bills of costs between them. Deft. filed his answer in Oct. 1872, & thereby alleged a large balance due to him & claimed interest thereon. He had also, in 1869, furnished pltf. with an account which contained items for interest. In 1875, a copy of the account was inclosed in a letter which referred to the account, but made no formal demand of payment, & which was signed by a firm of solrs. as his agents:—Held: neither the answer nor the letter enclosing the account was a sufficient demand in writing or notice within Civil Procedure Act, 1833 (c. 42), s. 28.

t. Recovery of costs.]—The personal liability of an English solr., at whose instance an Irish solr. undertakes professional work in Ireland for an English client, depends in each case upon whether there is a contract express or implied that the Irish solr.

says that interest may be allowed on disbursements . . . seems to me to deal entirely with cases arising between solrs. & their clients, & not those between country solrs. & their London agents (JAMES, L.J.).

I think the relation between these parties was not the common relation of a solr. to an ordinary client, but the relation of a London agent & a country solr. (JAMES, L.J.).—WARD v. EYRE (1880), 15 Ch. D. 130; 49 L. J. Ch. 657; 43 L. T. 525; 28 W. R. 712, C. A.

Personal liability of agent—Filing of irregular document—Scandalous affidavit—Costs of taking off file.—Where an affidavit is reported to be scandalous, the agent in London who files the affidavit, is responsible for the costs as between attorney & client, notwithstanding the country attorney may himself have drawn the affidavit.

It would be very hard that the injured party should be made to pay the costs of taking the affidavit off the file, which is found to be irrelevant & scandalous (ERSKINE, J.).—Re BOOTH, Ex p. WAKE (1833), 3 Deac. & Ch. 246; Mont. & B. 259; 2 L. J. Rey. 38, C. of R.

The office of the London agents was deft.'s address for service. The affidavits in support of the notice of motion were not served therewith, but were served on the same day on deft.'s country solr. Deft. did not appear at the hearing of the motion & an order for attachment was made in his absence:—Held: according to R. S. C., Ord. 52, r. 4, the affidavits ought to have been served together with & in the same way as the notice of motion, & ought not to have been served on the country solr.; the order made on the motion was consequently voidable under R. SUB-SECT. 2.—STRIKING SOLICITOR OFF THE ROLL.

A. In General.

4418. Duty of court.]—Solr. struck off the rolls for fraudulently abusing the confidence of his client.

It is the duty of the ct. to protect solrs. in the fair discharge of their difficult & delicate duties, but when a solr. is found to have availed himself of his honourable & confidential position, for the purpose of taking advantage of & defrauding his clients, it is not less the duty of the ct. to withdraw from him those privileges, & that certificate of character, which are afforded by his being permitted to remain on the roll of solrs.—Re MARTIN (1843), 6 Beav. 337; 1 L. T. O. S. 227; 49 E. R. 856.

4419. Solicitor guilty of indictable offence—Effect on proceedings for striking off.]—The Ct. of K. B. will not grant a rule calling on an attorney to show cause why he should not be struck off the roll, if the affidavits in support of the rule state an offence for which he would be liable to indictment.—Re — (1834), 5 B. & Ad. 1088; 110 E. R. 1095.

Annotations.—Consd. Stephens v. Hill (1842), 10 M. & W. 28; Ex p. Hine (1864), 3 New Rep. 502.

4420. ———.]—(1) Where an attorney has been guilty of misconduct in the course of a cause, the ct. will grant a rule calling on him to show cause why his name should not be struck off the roll, even, although the matter complained of may amount to an indictable offence; but the ct. will not under such circumstances call upon him to answer the matters of an affidavit.

(2) The affidavits to ground an application to strike an attorney off the roll for misconduct in a cause may be entitled in the cause, though judgment has been obtained in it.

(3) It is a sufficient ground for striking an attorney off the roll that he procured a witness of the adverse party to keep out of the way at the trial.—STEPHENS v. HILL (1842), 10 M. & W. 28; 1 Dowl. N. S. 669; 11 L. J. Ex. 329; 6 Jur. 585; 152 E. R. 368.

4424. ———.]—On a motion upon affidavit impeaching the conduct of an attorney, & imputing perjury & matter involving a criminal charge, the form of the rule is to call on him to show cause “why he should not be struck off the roll, or be suspended from practice for such time as the ct. shall think fit.”

Qu. : whether, if such rule be discharged, the party on whose application it was granted would be liable to pay the costs of it, where his application was made fairly, honestly, & without malice.—Re AN ATTORNEY (1863), 7 L. T. 716; 11 W. R. 268.

4425. ———.]—Upon a motion for a rule calling on an attorney to show cause why he should not answer the matters in certain affidavits, which affidavits in fact charge the attorney with the commission of an indictable offence, the ct. will not grant the rule prayed for, but will grant a rule calling on the attorney to show cause why he should not be struck off the rolls.—Ex p. HINE (1864), 3 New Rep. 502; sub nom. Re AN ATTORNEY, 12 W. R. 311.

4426. Solicitor in contempt—Necessity for attachment before striking off.]—Where an attorney is in contempt by disobeying a rule of ct., the proper course of proceeding against him is by moving for an attachment, & not by applying to strike him off the roll.—Ex p. TOWNLEY (1834), 3 Dowl. 39.

Annotation.—Expld. Ex p. Grant (1835), 3 Dowl. 320.

4427. ———.]—Where an attorney disobeys a rule of ct. requiring him to do a particular act, an application cannot in the first instance be made to strike him off the roll, but a rule nisi for an attachment may be obtained.—Ex p. GRANT (1835), 3 Dowl. 320.

4428. Whether taking out certificate condition precedent to striking off.]—In an application to strike an attorney off the rolls, it is no answer to say, that he has not taken out his certificate for the current year, & therefore, that it is unnecessary.—Ex p. CHAMP (1843), 2 L. T. O. S. 168.

4439. ——— Failure to pay proper fee.—Under 9 Geo. 4, c. 49, s. 1, & Stamp Act, 1811 (c. 184), Sched., Part I., Title Articles of Clerkship, an attorney who has paid £60 stamp duty on his articles in order to be admitted to the Ct. of Common Pleas at Lancaster must, in order to his admission to the Cts. at Westminster, pay an additional duty of £120. When an attorney, under such circumstances, had been admitted to this ct. on payment of an additional £60 only, the ct. on motion made within a year of such admission, but more than a year after his admission to the Ct. of Common Pleas at Lancaster, ordered him to be struck off the roll unless he paid an additional £60 in a month: though, before paying the second duty, he had been informed at the Stamp Office that £60 was sufficient.—Re MYERS

The ct. has a discretion in granting a rule under the foregoing section.

Liability of solicitor to be struck off—Whether power of court discretionary.—(1) Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 32, enacts that, if a solr. shall wilfully & knowingly act as agent in any action or suit for an unqualified person, or permit his name to be used in any action or suit for the profit of an unqualified person, then such solr. "shall & may be struck off the roll, & for ever after disabled from practising as an attorney or solr.":—Held: the ct., instead of striking off the rolls a solr. who has brought himself within this sect., has a discretion, under its general authority over solrs., to inflict a minor punishment, such as suspension from practice, notwithstanding the words in the sect., that such solr. "shall & may be struck off the roll."

(2) A solr. made a verbal agreement with a debt collector, who had started a trade protection society for the recovery of debts, to act for the debt collector as his solr. in all county ct. matters, upon the terms that when the solr. recovered a debt & costs he should bring the debt collector the whole amount, & the debt collector should return half the costs to the solr., retaining one-half of the costs for himself, but taking the solr.'s receipts for the whole, & when no costs were recovered no division of costs should take place. This bargain was acted upon in many cases, & wherever the full debt & costs were recovered the solr. divided the costs with the debt collector, but when no costs were recovered no division of costs took place, & the solr. received no costs:—Held: the solr. had brought himself within Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 32, as constituting himself, within that sect., the agent of the debt collector, an unqualified person, & in the circumstances of the case, he ought to be suspended from practice for one year.—Re A SOLICITOR, Ex p.

i. In General.

4469. In respect of what proceedings—Offence not committed qua solicitor.—Upon an application by the Incorporated Law Society to strike the name of a solr. off the roll, it appeared that he had been summarily convicted of allowing houses, of which he was the landlord, to be used by the tenants as brothels:—Held: a solr. may be struck off the roll for an offence which has no relation to his character as a solr., the question being whether it is such an offence as makes a person guilty of it unfit to remain a member of the profession. Conviction for a criminal offence prima facie makes a solr. unfit to continue on the roll; but the ct. has a discretion, & will inquire into the nature of the crime, & will not as a matter of course strike him off because he has been convicted: & the ct. considered that in the present case the nature of the offence was such that the solr. ought to be struck off the roll.—Re WEARE, [1893] 2 Q. B. 439; 62 L. J. Q. B. 596; 58 J. P. 6; sub nom. Re A SOLICITOR, Ex p. INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY, 69 L. T. 522; 9 T. L. R. 595; 37 Sol. Jo. 671, C. A.

4470. Offence not of pecuniary character.—Where a solr. has been convicted of a crime which is not in itself a pecuniary offence, the ct. will, if the crime is of such a character that it is expedient for the protection of the public & the profession that the solr. should be struck off the roll, order that he be struck off accordingly. Therefore, where a solr. had lent large sums of money belonging to clients to a third person for speculative purposes, & in consequence of the money having been lost became so depressed that he attempted to murder his wife & afterwards to commit suicide, & he had been sentenced to penal servitude, the ct. ordered him to be struck off the roll.—Re COOPER (1898), 67 L. J. Q. B. 276, D. C.

4471. Felony.—An attorney convicted of felony was struck off the roll, though he had been burnt in the hand & suffered imprisonment pursuant to his sentence, five years before, & no misconduct imputed to him since. He is an unfit person to practise as an attorney.—Ex p. BROWN-SALL (1778), 2 Cowp. 829; 98 E. R. 1385.

Particular offences.—See Sub-sect. 2, C. (c), post.

4472. When liability arises—On conviction—Although reversed on technical grounds.—An attorney of this ct. was convicted & received judgment on an indictment charging a conspiracy to defraud parties of goods, & that, in pursuance thereof, one conspirator obtained the goods on credit, & the attorney seized them by a collusive execution which he sued out against such conspirator. Judgment was reversed for insufficiency of the indictment:—Held: a sufficient ground for striking him off the roll, though no affidavit was made that he had committed the offence, but only that he had been convicted; & though he deposed that the money produced by the execution was justly due to him from such alleged conspirator, & denied that he had been "a party or privy to such criminal conduct," as was stated in the indictment, or that it contained any offence punishable by law; the affidavit not specifically denying the conspiracy, or that the act charged was done in pursuance of it.—Re KING (1845), 8 Q. B. 129; 1 New Pract. Cas. 331; 15 L. J. Q. B. 2; 6 L. T. O. S. 149; 10 Jur. 7; 115 E. R. 823.

4473. Discretion of court—Solicitor previously suspended for same offence.—It is not an inflexible rule that a solr. who has been convicted of felony will as a matter of course be struck off the rolls. Therefore, where a solr., having been employed as clerk by a firm of solrs., & having embezzled money belonging to them, for which he was suspended by the ct. from practice for eighteen months, was subsequently convicted, on precisely the same facts, of embezzlement, & sentenced to imprisonment:—Held: as all the facts which were now before the ct. were before the ct. when the solr. was suspended, except

4509. —.]—A client agreed with a solr. to conduct legal proceedings on his behalf for the lump sum of £70. On Nov. 12, 1907, counsel was instructed to appear in the matter, & his brief was marked three guineas & one guinea. The client paid the solr. £50 on Apr. 19, 1907, & the remaining £20 on Nov. 15, 1907. The barrister's clerk applied on a number of occasions for the payment of the fees marked on the brief, but on May 1, 1910, the fees had not been paid. The matter having been brought before the Law Society by the Bar Council, the solr. on May 25, 1910, paid the fees in full, stating in a letter by the solr. to the Bar Council that he had distinguished the case from one in which a payment had been received from a client on account of counsel's fees, or where the fees had been set out in a bill of costs, & the bill paid, & also pleading poverty. It appeared that the matter in respect of which the lump sum had been paid was an action in the High Ct., in which the client was a party :—Held : the solr. had committed professional misconduct within Solicitors' Act, 1888 (c. 65), & the order was made that the solr. should pay the costs of the inquiry before the Law Society, & of the application to the ct.—*Re A SOLICITOR, Ex p. 4514. Restraint of renewal of certificate—Without leave.—From the evidence given by a solr. in an action in the Ct. of the County Palatine of Lancaster he appeared to have been guilty of gross misconduct in his character of solr. as to one of the mtges. to which the action related. Pltfs. in the action having appealed, the conduct of the solr. came under the consideration of the Ct. of Appeal, who directed the official solr. to take proceedings. The official solr. accordingly moved in the Ct. of Appeal for an order calling on the solr. to explain his conduct or that he might be struck off the roll. The solr. had not taken out his certificate for several years & did not take any notice of the application. The ct., under the special circumstances of the case, did not think fit to strike him off the roll or suspend him, but made an order restraining him from applying to renew his certificate without the leave of the ct.—Re WHITEHEAD (1885), 28 Ch. Sect. 2.—What amounts to professional misconduct: Sub-sects. 1 & 2, A. & B.]

4516. Whether misconduct must be in relation to professional business.]—A verdict having been obtained against an attorney in an action for publishing a libel of a very aggravated nature, but in which the jury only gave 1s. damages, the ct. refused to strike him off the roll on the mere ground of the publication of the libel. Semble: the ct. will not strike an attorney off the roll, unless for some misconduct in his business of attorney, or when criminal proceedings have been taken against him.—Ex p. — (1833), 2 Dowl. 110; sub nom. Re DICAS, 2 L. J. Ex. 267.

4517. —.]—The ct. will not entertain a motion to strike an attorney off the rolls, on the application of a party who has been his client, on the suggestion of gambling frauds committed since the termination of the business which the attorney conducted for him; there being also proceedings pending in equity in respect of the same frauds.—Re — (1843), 12 L. J. Q. B. 331; sub nom. Re COOK, Ex p. STRATFORD, 1 L. T. O. S. 311; 7 Jur. 512.

4518. —.]—An attorney cannot be called upon to answer an affidavit, the effect of which is to charge him with fraud or conspiracy in matters in which he has been engaged wholly unconnected with his business as an attorney. For such misconduct he should be indicted.—Re — (1855), 24 L. T. O. S. 237; 3 W. R. 181 (b).

4519. —.]—The summary jurisdiction of the ct. over its attorneys is not limited to cases in which they have been guilty of misconduct such as amounts to an indictable offence, or arises in the ordinary course of their professional practice; but extends to all cases of gross misconduct, on their part, in any matter in which they may, from its nature, fairly be presumed to have been employed in consequence of their professional character. B. lent money to an attorney, whom he had previously known & employed as such, on the security of the attorney's promissory note for the amount, & of the deposit by the attorney of a deed of assignment to him of a mtge. on an estate in Ireland, by which a greater amount than B.'s loan was secured to the attorney. The estate getting into the Irish Incumbered Estates Ct., the attorney borrowed the deed of B. for the purpose, as he alleged to B., of supporting his claim in that ct., but in reality in order to obtain from that ct. payment of the amount secured to him by the deed. Having, by production of the deed to the ct., established his right to that payment, he returned the deed to B., & afterwards received out of ct. the whole of the amount which he claimed. He never informed B. of this, but appropriated the whole amount to his own purposes, & continued for several years afterwards to pay B. interest on his loan. He then became insolvent, & B. in consequence lost the whole of the money advanced by him. Upon these facts the ct., holding that the attorney had been guilty of gross misconduct, suspended him from practising for two years.—Re BLAKE (1860), 3 E. & E. 34; 30 L. J. Q. B. 32; 2 L. 4521. —.]—Misconduct sufficient to constitute bar to admission.]—Misconduct which would form an absolute or temporary bar to the admission of appct. to practise as an attorney, is a sufficient ground for the exercise, after admission, by the ct. of its summary jurisdiction in striking him off the rolls or suspending him for a time.

H., an admitted attorney, being engaged in the employ of a firm of attorneys as managing clerk, embezzled two sums of money, one amounting to £85, & the other to about £8, having received the former from a client of the firm for the settlement of a purchase, & the latter for costs in a county ct. action. The embezzlement was not discovered until upwards of three years after it had been committed. On the fraud being discovered, H. confessed the facts & repaid the money. On motion to strike H. off the roll of attorneys:—Held: it was not necessary, in order to render him answerable to the summary jurisdiction of the ct., that the misconduct of which he had been guilty should be misconduct in his character of attorney.—Re HILL (1868), L. 4558. Obtaining money from illiterate client—By misrepresentation.]—In a country which is only partially civilised it is necessary to induce the inhabitants to resort to the cts. for the settlement of their disputes rather than to personal violence; with that object it is essential that they should be brought to feel the greatest respect not only for the impartiality & independence of the tribunals, but also for the honesty & fairness of those who practise before them.

Applt., an enrolled barrister & solr. of the Supreme Ct. of Sierra Leone, obtained by way of professional remuneration from a native chief, who was entirely illiterate & unfamiliar with legal proceedings, the sum of £135 by professionally irregular conduct & £50, part of a larger demand, by misrepresentation. The Chief Justice, who by Ordinance had power, for reasonable cause, temporarily to suspend any barrister or solr., or to order his name to be struck off the roll of the ct., ordered applt.'s name to be struck off:—Held: the order should be affirmed, a mitigation of the penalty to a suspension from practice being refused, upon the ground that the authority of the Chief Justice in the matter should not be interfered with, having regard to the considerations above stated.—MACAULEY v. 4562. Advising breach of trust—Improper sale of trust fund—Fund replaced pursuant to order of court.]—On a bill filed by parties interested under a will against the sole acting trustee & exor., & against his solr. under whose advice the trust property had been improperly sold out by the trustee & applied principally to the solr.'s use, praying that the stock might be replaced, the ct. at the hearing, after directing certain inquiries, ordered that the solr. should show cause why, having regard to his answer & the evidence in the cause, his name should not be struck off the roll of solrs. of the Ct. of Ch.

A solr. having advised his client, a person in an humble station of life, to commit a breach of trust by selling out stock of which the client was a trustee & having himself profited by the breach of trust, was ordered to be struck off the roll, unless he showed good cause to the contrary; but having in obedience to the decree in the cause replaced the stock & paid the costs of the suit the ct., taking into consideration his youth & other circumstances, abstained from further proceedings in the matter, upon his undertaking to pay to the other parties to the suit their costs, charges & expenses.—*GOODWIN v. 4564. Committing breach of trust—Failure to invest trust fund.]—A reversionary fund was assigned to trustees upon the trusts of a settlement for a wife, husband, & children. One of the trustees died, & a solr. was appointed in his place. The fund fell into possession, & was paid to the trustees, who both joined in a receipt. The solr. trustee did not invest the money according to the trusts of the settlement, but lent it upon security, which was insufficient, & the fund was lost. The solr. trustee was discharged, under the Act for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors, & in his schedule the amount of the trust fund was inserted. The cestui que trust for life from time to time received small interest for the lost money from the solr. trustee both before & after the insolvency. She filed a bill against both the trustees, & the Master of the Rolls made a decree against the solvent trustee to replace the fund:—Held: the decree was correct, for the discharge under the insolvency was a complete discharge from the debt, though the co-trustee had liberty to go in under the insolvency & prove against the estate of the solr. trustee. Such order, on appeal, discharged, the Judicial Committee being of opinion, that although the preparation of such a deed, & the knowledge of such facts, would be circumstances of great weight against an attorney cognisant of them in the event of such a deed, upon or soon after its execution, being used as an instrument of fraud, yet, as the circumstances of its preparation were capable of being explained, & no fraudulent use of the instrument had been made or attempted, no fraudulent motive alleged, & no injury directly or indirectly occasioned by it, the misstatement upon the face of such a deed could not be considered sufficient in itself to warrant the striking an attorney off the Rolls of the Ct.—Re STEWART (1868), L. C., Ord. 5, r. 7, & the address for service given upon the writ was the address of S.

After the writ was served, & after the summons had been taken out to stay proceedings on the ground that Ord. 5, r. 7, had not been complied with, S. telegraphed to Smale, who was in London, asking for a reply that the writ was issued with his authority & privity. c. Notice of action given by unauthorised person—Whether acts may be ratified.]—A notice of action given by an unauthorised solr. is not ratified by an authority to the solr. to sue, nor by commencing the action.—SHAW, SAVILL, & ALBION CO., LTD. v. TIMARU HARBOUR BOARD (1888), 6 N. Z. L. R. 456.—N.Z.

d. Validity of execution of trust-disposition & settlement.]—A trust disposition & settlement was signed on 4777. —.]—A motion to set aside an interlocutory judgment for irregularity, which was signed because a plea was pleaded in the name of a person who was not an attorney:—Held: in time, on May 23, the day of executing the writ of inquiry, though the notice of executing the inquiry was served on May 15. Pltf. cannot treat such a plea as nullity.—HILL v. MILLS (1834), 2 Dowl. 696.

4778. —.]—Proceedings taken by an uncertificated attorney, are not, as affects his client, deemed void or irregular.

If an unprofessional man undertake to conduct legal proceedings for another, he is liable to that other for negligence, although he may have employed an attorney to do part of the work.

B., being in difficulties, employed deft. to take him through the county ct. in bkpey. for reward. A petition for liquidation, signed by an uncertificated attorney, was filed, & pltf. was appointed trustee; deft. partly employing an attorney in the matter.

The necessary notices for the meeting of creditors not having been inserted in the Gazette, the registrar refused to register the proceedings, which became inoperative, so that B. was forced to pay debts which would otherwise have been barred:—Held: deft. was liable to pltf.—BROWN v. TOLLEY (1874), 31 L. T. 485; 39 J. P. 214.

See, now, Solicitors Act, 1928 (c. 22).

4779. Bond given by solicitor—To secure part profits of suits for benefit of unqualified person.]—A bond given by an attorney, conditioned for securing a part of the profits from suits, for the benefit of an unqualified person, is illegal. But where the condition is composed, partly of such illegal provision, & partly of another, for securing to the same unqualified person a share of profits in the business, besides those to be derived from suits, the condition may stand good for the latter; & the bond may be enforced.—CUSSE v. CORFEE (1828), 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 140.

4780. Solicitor permitting unqualified person to use his name.]—SCOTT v. MILLER, No. 4460, ante.

4781. —.]—There is nothing illegal in the employment by a solr. of an unqualified person upon the terms that he shall receive a share of the profits of business introduced by him to the solr.

By the first clause of an agreement entered into behalf of grantor, who was unable to write, by a law agent, who had passed the necessary examination, paid the duty of £55, & been duly enrolled as a law agent, but who had not taken out the annual certificate authorising him to practise. In an action for reduction of the deed on the ground of invalidity of execution:—Held: the deed had been validly executed, in respect that the person signing for the grantor possessed the qualification & status of a law agent within Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1924, s. 18 (1).—STEPHEN v. SCOTT, [1927] S. C. 85.—SCOT.

PART XV. SECT. 4.

e. Sharing of fees.]—An attorney agreed with a clerk to take him into partnership at the expiration of his articles, & that his share in the profits should commence from the date of between a solr. & an unqualified person the solr. agreed to engage the unqualified person as his managing clerk, & to pay him a salary of £3 10s. per week, & in addition a bonus of 25 per cent. on all gross costs & other profits, exclusive of all disbursements, received by the solr. on all business introduced by the unqualified person either directly or indirectly.

Clause 3 provided that in the event of the determination of the engagement the bonus of 25 per cent. was to be continued to be paid, notwithstanding such determination, less £3 10s. per week:—Held: although the agreement would have been valid if it had contained the first clause only, it was rendered invalid by reason of the third clause inasmuch as that clause showed that the business which was the subject of the agreement was the business of the clerk which was to be carried on in the name of the solr. for the clerk's profit, & the agreement was therefore illegal under the words in Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 32, which prohibit a solr. from permitting his name to be used in any matter for the profit of an unqualified person.—HARPER v. EYJOLFSSON, [1914] 2 K. B. 411; 83 L. J. K. B. 774; 110 L. T. 540; 30 T. L. R. 246, C. A.

4782. Agreement between client & solicitor—Solicitor to be paid salary—Surplus of receipts to be paid to employer—Solicitor not to transact professional business for any other client.]—An agreement between a client & a solr. that the solr. shall be paid a fixed yearly salary, to be clear of all expenses of his office, & to include all emoluments, he paying to the client any surplus which may arise of receipts over payments, is not opposed to the provisions of the Attorneys & Solicitors Acts, nor to the policy of the law, where it is also a term of the agreement that the solr. is not to transact professional business for any other client.—*GALLOWAY v. 4788. Duration of commission—Until revoked by Lord Chancellor.]—In 1875, prior to the coming into operation of Jud. Acts, a solr., whilst in practice as such, was appointed a comr. to administer oaths by the Ct. of Exch. under 22 Vict. c. 16. In 1883 he was struck off the rolls, but continued to act as a comr. Upon an application to remove an affidavit sworn before him in 1891, upon the ground that it was not sworn before a comr. or a person duly appointed to administer oaths:—Held: the period of duration of the commission was the pleasure of the Ct. of Exch.; in order to put an end to the commission, it must be revoked by the Lord Chancellor, in whom the power of revocation formerly possessed by that ct. is now vested by Commissioners for Oaths Act, 1889 (c. 10), s. 1; & as that had not been done, the application must be refused.—*WARD v. The usual charges of an attorney or solr. were alone made upon the transactions:—Held: this did not amount to trading as a scrivener.

PART XVII. SECT. 1.

g. Who is "Commissioner appointed by the court."]—A comr. for taking affidavits, etc., who is in practice, & lawfully recognised by the ct. as an officer legally exercising a function so important, is within 1869 Act, c. 16, s. 123, "a comr. appointed by the ct."—*LANG v. 5. —.—]—Specific performance of an agreement the subject of discretion; refused therefore, in the case of mistake; though no fraud.—MASON v. ARMITAGE (1806), 13 Ves. 25; 33 E. R. 204, L. C.

Annotations:—Appld. Day v. Wells (1861), 30 Beav. 220. Mentd. Hughes v. Chester & Holyhead Ry. (1861), 1 Drew. & Sm. 524.

6. —.—]—WEDGWOOD v. ADAMS, No. 364, post.

7. —.—]—(1) A party contending for specific performance must show that his conduct has been fair. If he has made material misrepresentations to deft. it is no answer to say that deft. might have found out that there were misrepresentations.

(2) Specific performance is not of course because there is a contract, but a relief in the nature of indulgence peculiar to the jurisdiction of equity.—COX v. MIDDLETON (1854), 2 Drew 209; 2 Eq. Rep. 631; 23 L. J. Ch. 618; 23 L. T. O. S. 6; 2 W. R. 284; 61 E. R. 699.

Annotation:—Generally, Mentd. Dolling v. Evans (1867), 31 J. P. 375.

8. —.—]—Where pltf. proved by unquestionable evidence that there was a mistake in essential parts of a written agreement:—Held: he was entitled to have it set aside.

To sanction the right to set aside an agreement on the grounds of fraud, mistake or surprise, parol evidence is in most cases essential; but where specific performance is asked the ct. has a discretion which is not permitted when it is called to set aside an instrument on any of those grounds.—PRICE v. LEY (1863), 4 Giff. 235; 32 L. J. Ch. 530; 7 L. T. 845; 9 Jur. N. S. 295; 11 W. R. 399; 66 E. R. 692; affd., 32 L. J. Ch. p. 534; 11 W. R. 475, L. JJ.

9. —.—]—(1) A decree for specific performance of a contract cannot be accompanied by directing an inquiry whether a matter which was a consideration for entering into the contract has been, or can be, properly performed. Where a suit is instituted for specific performance of a contract, & the defence set up is, that the contract was made in consideration of certain promises which pltf. had not fulfilled, a delay to defeat that defence must be such as amounts to an acquiescence in the non-fulfilment of the alleged promises. Where the subject of the contract was an agreement to take the lease of a house, & the proposed tenant went into possession at once, & occupied for two years but, while continuing in occupation, from time to time called on the landlord to fulfil promises which the tenant alleged to have been the inducement for the contract, & paid rent, but always paid it under protest:—Held: these circumstances did not amount to such acquiescence as to prevent the tenant from ultimately refusing to perform the contract, but that the payments were to be treated as merely made in respect of the actual use & occupation, & in no other character.

(2) The exercise of the jurisdiction of equity as to enforcing specific performance of agreements,

PART I.

1 i. General rule.—The origin both of the action for specific performance & of the action for relief against re-entry for non-payment of rent is in the equitable jurisdiction of the ct.; the compelling performance in the one & the granting relief in the other is in the judicial discretion of the ct.; & in each the ct. has regard to the conduct of the party seeking to compel such performance or to obtain such relief.—COVENTRY v. McLEAN

1 ii. —.—]—The exercise of the jurisdiction of Equity as to enforcing specific performance of agreements is not a matter of right in the party seeking relief, but of discretion in the ct. to be exercised in accordance with fixed rules & principles.—CALHOUN v. BREWSTER (1898), 1 N. B. Eq. Rep. 529.—CAN.

1 iii. —.—]—FRITH v. ALLIANCE INVESTMENT CO. (1913), 23 W. L. R. 830; 10 D. L. R. 765; 4 W. W. R. 88.—CAN.

1 v. —.—]—The jurisdiction to decree specific performance of a contract is discretionary, & the ct. is not bound to grant such relief.—KAR-KALIDAS GHIA v. CHHOTALAL

1 vi. —.—]—The discretion of the ct. in granting or refusing a specific execution, is regulated by established principles.—REVELL v. HUSSEY (1813), 2 Ball & B. 280, 287.—IR.

1 vii. —.—]—A ct. of equity in the exercise of an enlarged discretion may decree, or refuse to decree specific performance of a contract, but it possesses no power to make one, or to add to the terms & conditions of that made.—BRIDGMAN v. ELLIS (1859), 4 Nfld. L. R. 325.—NFLD.

a. When exercised—Agreement by member to deliver produce to company.—By the arts. of assocn. of a co. whose business was, among other things, to

10. — Foundation of doctrine.—A purchaser bought property under a strict condition of sale that he should not make any objection as to the intermediate title between a certain lease & the assignment of it, but should assume that the assignment vested a good title in the assignees. It was afterwards discovered by the purchaser that there was a vital defect in the intermediate title, & that the assignees had no title to the property:—Held: (1) as the vendor could not give a holding title to the purchaser, the ct. would, in the exercise of its discretion, refuse to decree specific performance of the contract, & would leave the parties to their remedies at law.

(2) The extraordinary remedy by specific performance is always more or less open to discretion (LINDLEY, L.J.).

From the very first, when specific performance was introduced it has been treated as a question of discretion whether it is better to interfere & give a remedy which the common law knows nothing at all about, or to leave the parties to their rights in a ct. of law. The foundation of the doctrine of specific performance was this, that land has quite a character of its own, that the real meaning between the parties to a contract for sale of land was not that there should be a contract with legal remedies only, & that the purchaser should get the land, & should not be put off in an ordinary case by offering him damages (RIGBY, L.J.).—Re SCOTT & ALVAREZ'S CONTRACT, SCOTT v. ALVAREZ, [1895] 2 Ch. 603; 64 L. J. Ch. 821; 73 L. T. 43; 43 W. R. 694; 11 T. L. R. 471; 39 Sol. Jo. 621; 12 R. 474, C. A.

11. How exercised—Not arbitrarily.—Though discretionary in the ct. whether they will decree a specific execution, yet it is so on certain grounds, & not arbitrary, but governed by rules of equity.—GORING v. NASH (1744), 3 Atk. 186; 26 E. R. 909, L. C.

those terms was imposed on each member of the co., it was not one in respect of which the ct. should, in the exercise of its discretion, at the instance of the co. grant specific performance or an injunction.—*PAKENHAM UPPER FRUIT CO., LTD. v. 13. — — — — ——It is true that equity does not in every case, lend its aid to carry a contract for a purchase into execution; but it does not arbitrarily execute any contract, & refuse to execute another. Some ground must be laid to prevent the party from obtaining in his case, the assistance which the ct. usually gives to cases of the same general description (GRANT, M.R.).—*BUCKLE v. 14. — — — — ——BENNETT v. SMITH, No. 996, post.

15. — — — — ——(1) A person contracting for the lease of a mine cannot resist its performance, on the ground of his ignorance of mining matters, & of the mine turning out worthless.

Pltf. had worked the coal under his estate, but abandoned it as unprofitable.

Twenty years afterwards deft. cleared the pit & examined the coal in the shaft with other persons, & subsequently contracted for a lease. The colliery turned out to be worthless:—Held: deft. could not resist a specific performance, on the ground of pltf. not having communicated the fact of his having worked the mine & found it unprofitable.

(2) Specific performance is a matter of discretion, to be exercised, however, according to fixed & settled rules, & the mere inadequacy of consideration is not a ground for exercising such discretion by refusing a specific performance.

The ct. cannot exercise its discretion as to granting or refusing specific performance of an agreement, by the consideration whether it has turned out favourably or unfavourably to the party against whom specific performance is sought. HAYWOOD v. COPE (1858), 25 Beav. 140; 27 L. J. Ch. 468; 31 L. T. O. S. 48; 4 Jur. N. S. 227; 6 W. R. 304; 53 E. R. 589.

16. — To accomplish justice.—POWELL v. LLOYD, No. 734, post.

17. — Not according to principles applicable to construction of contracts.—Certain hereditaments were put up for sale in lots by auction subject to certain conditions of sale. The following conditions of sale were material:—

“(a) Each lot is believed & shall be taken to be correctly described as to quantity and otherwise . . . and the respective purchasers . . . shall be deemed to buy with full knowledge of the state and condition of the property as to repairs & otherwise, & no error, misstatement or misdescription shall annul the sale, nor shall any compensation be allowed in respect thereof.

“(b) Each purchaser shall send his objections & requisitions, if any, to or in respect of the title, & of all matters appearing upon the abstract or the particulars or conditions of sale, to . . . the vendor's solrs.” within a limited time.

“(c) If any purchaser shall insist upon any objection or requisition which the respective vendors shall be unable, or on the ground of

b. — Agreement not clear & unambiguous.—STEWART v. LEES, Cass. Dig. 2nd ed. 93.—CAN.

c. — — — — —.—GERTZBEIN v. BELL (1913), 23 O. W. R. 958; 4 O. W. N. 715; 9 D. L. R. 833.—CAN.

d. — Vendor selling land to third party after agreement to sell.—The fact expense or otherwise unwilling to answer, comply with, or remove, the respective vendors may . . . at any time, & notwithstanding any intermediate or pending negotiations, proceedings, or litigation, annul the sale."

Lot 3 consisted of buildings & land, & was stated in the particulars of sale to contain 4 acres 3 roods 37 poles, & to be let at annual rents amounting to £27. At the auction lot 3 was sold, & a deposit was paid. The abstract of title having been delivered, the purchaser by his requisitions objected that lot 3 was much smaller in extent than was stated in the particulars, the deficiency amounting to an acre & a half, & the true acreage being 3 acres 1 rood 37 poles. The misstatement in the particulars of sale as to the acreage was inserted innocently, & the rentals of the property comprised in lot 3 were correctly stated. The purchaser claimed that the contract should be carried out with compensation; the vendor refused any compensation, but offered to annul the sale. The purchaser having refused to withdraw his requisition or to consent to the annulment of the sale, the vendor gave notice that in pursuance of condition (c) she annulled the sale. The purchaser having taken out a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), for specific performance with compensation:—Held: (1) the vendor might lawfully annul the sale by virtue of condition (c) for the requisition as the deficiency in the quantity was a requisition as to a matter appearing upon the particulars or conditions of sale within the meaning of condition (b); (2) even without conditions (b) & (c) the purchaser would have been prevented by condition (a) from obtaining specific performance with compensation.

(3) Now in all actions for specific performance, & in all applications to the ct. involving the exercise of that discretion which the ct. invariably does exercise in ordering or refusing specific performance, it is necessary not to confound the principles or rules by which contracts are interpreted with the principles or rules which guide the ct. in enforcing or declining to enforce specific performance. . . .

"It was contended that such conditions as condition (a) in this case only applied to comparatively trivial & unimportant errors, misstatements & misdescriptions, & several cases were referred to in support of that proposition. But when those cases are carefully looked at they will not be found to warrant so general a statement. The proposition is only true in certain classes of cases. It certainly would be surprising if any authorities were found which required the ct. to construe conditions of sale differently from other contracts, or to hold that they do not mean what their words, taken in their ordinary sense, would convey to the mind of an intelligent person. Conditions of sale like all other contracts, must be construed with reference to the subject-matter to which they relate, & upon the assumption that the parties to them are dealing fairly with each other (LINDLEY, L.J.).—Re TERRY & WHITE'S

19. —.]—(1) The ct. is not bound to decree a specific performance in every case, where it will not set aside the contract; nor to set aside every contract, that it will not specifically perform. Under circumstances, that would have amounted to a breach of trust, inadequacy of consideration, arising from gross negligence of the agent, & a want of due authority, the bill was dismissed; though pltf. was unimpeached; without prejudice to his remedy at law.

(2) If the vendee chooses to take as much as he can have, he has a right to that, & to an abatement; & the ct. will not hear the objection by the vendor, that the purchaser cannot have the whole. But that always turns upon this; that it is, & is intended to be, the contract of the vendor (LORD ELDON, C.).—MORTLOCK v. BULLER (1804), 10 Ves. 292; 32 E. R. 857, L. C.

(2) There is a considerable class of contracts, such as ordinary agreements for work & labour to be performed, hiring, & service . . . which are not in the proper sense of the words cases for "specific performance" (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—*WOLVERHAMPTON & WALSAIL RY. 28. —.]—Pltf., one of the shareholders of the Southampton & Dorchester Ry. co., filed his bill on behalf of himself & all other shareholders, etc., against the L. & S. W. Ry. co. & the Southampton & Dorchester Ry. co., on the ground that, in violation of the agreement, the L. & S. W. Ry. co. had purchased additional shares in the Southampton & Dorchester Ry. co., to assign them to nominees for the purpose of giving the former co. an undue influence in the election of the directors of the Southampton & Dorchester Ry. co., whereby the independence of the Southampton & Dorchester Ry. co. would be ruined; & prayed, among other things, for an injunction to restrain the L. & S. W. Ry. co., their officers & trustees, from applying for the registration of the transfer or assignment of any shares purchased by the L. & S. W. Ry. co., & from voting in the election of any director, etc.:—Held: (1) as the bill ought to have gone to the relief upon the agreement which bound all the three cos., the G. W. Ry. co. ought to have been made parties; (2) the London shareholders who had agreed to sell to the L. & S. W. Ry. co. were also necessary parties.

As to the question whether part, only, of an agreement can be enforced without seeking relief in respect of the whole.

The bill was filed, not for the direct & avowed purpose of having the agreement which comprehended the three cos. specifically performed; but to have the auxiliary agreement as between the Southampton & Dorchester Ry. co., & the L. & S. W. Ry. co. carried into effect. As this was to be considered a part only, of the principal agreement, which bound all the three cos., it could not be carried into effect; for unless the bill sought to have relief in respect of the whole agreement, it could not have the aid of the ct. as to part only (per CUR.).—*GREATHED v. poses of the co. His name had been placed on the register of shareholders, & a call had been made upon him which he refused to pay. Contemporaneously with the agreement to take the shares, the board of directors had agreed with deft. to pay him £4,000 in consideration of services rendered by him to the co. This sum was to have been paid twelve months after the shares should have been paid for in full. The directors afterwards called on deft. to pay up the full amount of 1,000 of his shares, which he refused to do. Deft. alleged that the two agreements formed really only one contract for the issue of the shares at a discount; that he had not rendered any services to the co., & that the contract was divided into two parts for the express purpose of evading a provision of the co.'s arts. of assocn., which prohibited the directors from issuing shares at a price below par without the consent of a general meeting. A person about to purchase land stipulated orally with another, who had been accustomed to use a road over it, that in the event of the purchase he would be allowed to continue the use thereof, but afterwards refused to carry out such agreement:—Held: this promise was merely voluntary, & as such, insufficient to found a bill for specific performance.—*BARR v. SECT. 4.—CONTRACTS REQUIRING SUPERVISION.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

46. *Whether agreement specifically enforceable.]—An agreement between a railway co. & railway contractors, who were also landowners, for the construction of a branch railway, provided that the co. should find the land within a reasonable time & build the stations; that the contractors should give a bond to the amount of £50,000 to secure the performance of the contract, & undertake to execute the works for a double line of railway, & the ballasting & permanent way for a single line, according to the terms of a specification, to be prepared by the engineer for the time being of the co.; that the co. should work the branch in a reasonable & proper manner as compared to the remainder of the main railway; & that in case of difference as to working, the same should be settled by arbn.; & that any of the details of the arrangement, in case of difference, should be determined by a referee to be appointed by the S.-G. for the time being:—Held: this agreement was too vague, obscure & uncertain to be enforced in a specific performance suit, & the stipulation as to the execution of a bond could not be enforced apart from the rest, being merely an incidental & subsidiary part of the agreement, & not within the principle of Lumley v. Wagner, No. 567, post, where the negative stipulation was a distinct & substantive part of the contract.*

Though the ct. may execute an agreement framed in general terms where the law will supply the details, yet if those details are to be supplied, in modes which cannot be adopted by the ct., there is no concluded agreement which can be enforced in equity.—SOUTH WALES RY. CO. v. WYTHES (1854), 5 De G. M. & G. 880; 3 Eq. Rep. 153; 24 L. J. Ch. 87; 24 L. T. O. S. 165; 3 W. R. 133; 43 E. R. 1112, L. JJ.

46 i. Whether agreement specifically enforceable.]—The ct. will not decree

the specific performance of work which the ct. is unable to superintend.—JOHNSON v. MONTREAL & OTTAWA JUNCTION RY. CO. (1875), 22 Gr. 290.—CAN.

47. ———.]—The ct. cannot enforce specific performance of the works; it cannot look after the acts & conduct of pltf., nor say how far he does or does not depart from what is right in executing the works or professing to execute them. If he is or shall be wronged by his exclusion from the works, & by the act of the co. in executing the works themselves, that will be a case for damages to be assessed & given either in this ct. or in a ct. of law; but it is not a case for specific performance, or relief analogous to specific performance, which, to proceed to grant an injunction on this part of the prayer of the bill, would necessarily amount to (KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J.)—MUNRO v. WIVENHOE & BRIGHTLINGSEA RY. CO. (1865), 4 De G. J. & Sm. 723; 12 L. T. 655; 11 Jur. N. S. 612; 13 W. R. 880; 46 E. R. 1100, L. JJ.

Where the directors of a railway co. entered into a written agreement to give pltf. "a contract for the construction of the line for the sum of £55,000, subject to a specification of the works on the line included in the said sum to be agreed upon between pltf. & the engineer of the co., in case of dispute the matter to be referred" to an arbitrator, & a bill was filed for specific performance:—Held: the terms of this agreement were too indefinite to be enforced in a specific performance suit; but even had the terms been sufficiently definite, the agreement was of such a nature that specific performance could not have been decreed.—GREENHILL v. ISLE OF WIGHT (NEWPORT JUNCTION) RY. CO. (1871), 23 L. T. 885; 19 W. R. 345.

50. ——— Damages inadequate compensation to plaintiff—& plaintiff having material interest in performance.]—This ct. has jurisdiction to enforce the specific performance of a contract by a deft. to do defined work upon his property, in the performance of which pltf. has a material interest, & which is not capable of adequate compensation in damages.

If the thing be reasonably possible it must be done. The difficulty & expense of performing the contract do not necessarily form an objection (KNIGHT BRUCE, V.-C.)—*STORER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 52. Common covenants in husbandry.] —

Demurrer to a bill by a landlord for a specific performance of covenants, contained in a lease which had expired, to repair hedges & mansion house, & also for an account of loppings & dung, cut or removed, by the tenant; allowed; common covenants in husbandry not being the subject of equitable jurisdiction.—RAYNER v. 53. —.]—It appears to me that what in reality is being asked for is judgment for specific performance of a stipulation in a farming lease; & it has been well settled ever since the case of Rayner v. Stone, No. 52, ante, reported more than a hundred years ago that such an action cannot be maintained (STIRLING, J.).—PHIPPS v. JACKSON (1887), 56 L. J. Ch. 550; 35 W. R. 378; 3 T. L. R. 387.

54. Preservation of secret of invention—Expired patent.]—The ct. will not interfere by injunction to prevent the violation of an agreement, of which, from the nature of the subject, there could be no decree for a specific performance; as, for instance, to restrain deft. from imparting the secret of an invention which had been the subject of a patent long since expired.

The difficulty in such a case is, how to decree the specific performance of the agreement. Either it is a secret, or it is none. If a secret, what means does the ct. possess of interfering so as to enforce its own orders? (LORD ELDON, C.).—NEWBURY v. JAMES (1817), 2 Mer. 416; 1 Carp. Pat. Cas. 367; 35 E. R. 1011, L. C.

55. Construction of railway works.]—Although a ct. of equity has jurisdiction in a proper case, to prevent an application to Parliament for a private Act, or an Act respecting property, it will not interfere on the ground that such an application, if successful would interfere with pre-existing rights, whether such rights exist by tenure of property, or by virtue of contract.

A railway co. applied to Parliament for an Act to form their line, & their application was opposed by a landowner through whose land the line would pass. He afterwards withdrew his opposition on the faith of an agreement which provided for the formation of a branch line to his iron works. The co. obtained an Act for this purpose, but afterwards determined to abandon their intention of making the branch railway, & were about to apply to Parliament for an Act to enable them to do so; when pltf. filed his bill for an injunction. The Vice-Chancellor of England granted the injunction, but the Lord-Chancellor, on appeal, reversed his decision, & dissolved the injunction:—Held: a contract to make a railway is not one of which a ct. of equity will compel the specific performance, but will leave the parties to their legal remedies.—HEATHCOTE v. NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RY. CO. (1850), 2 Mac. & G. 100; 6 Ry. & Can. Cas. 358; 2 H. & Tw. 332; 20 L. J. Ch. 82; 14 Jur. 859; 42 E. R. 39.

About six years after the date of the agreement pltf. filed their bill for the specific performance of this agreement, alleging that the co. had been released from their obligations, & the land mentioned in the agreement had been conveyed to them, but they had only commenced, & never finished, the road, & had not commenced the wharf:—Held: the ct. would enforce the performance of this agreement, & since the co. had obtained the benefit of it, they would not be suffered to evade it by any difficulties there might be in the way of the ct. superintending the work. If necessary, the ct. might permit pltf. themselves to do the work at the co.'s expense.—WILSON v. FURNESS RY. CO. (1869), L. R. 9 Eq. 28; 39 L. J. Ch. 19; 21 L. T. 416; 18 W. R. 89.

60. Covenant to work coal in specified mode.]—Pltfs. granted a lease of a coal mine to defts., reserving a minimum rent of £720, to be increased to £1,000 in case there should be pits sunk upon the estate, with a royalty upon all coal gotten beyond a certain quantity; & the lessees covenanted to work the mine uninterruptedly, efficiently, & regularly, according to the usual or most improved practice. The lessees paid the minimum rent, but only raised a small quantity of coal by working through an adjoining mine without sinking pits on pltfs.' property. Pltfs. being desirous of enforcing a larger amount of working, whereby an increased rent would be payable, filed a bill for specific performance of the covenant in the lease:—Held: there was no obligation upon defts. to sink pits although that might be the most efficient mode of working; & so long as the minimum rent was paid, defts. could not be compelled to work the mine at all; the lessees had committed no breach of contract; but if they had done so, the remedy was at law & not in equity; & this ct. could not, by a reference to chambers, give effect to the covenant by directions as to the management of a coal mine.

For this ct. to undertake the working of a colliery, for this ct. to superintend workings of this description, is entirely out of the question (MALINS, V.-C.).—WHEATLEY v. WESTMINSTER BRYMBO COAL CO. (1869), L. R. 9 Eq. 538; 39 L. J. Ch. 175; 22 L. T. 7; 18 W. R. 162.

63. — Housekeeper for offices.]—Offices in a large building were let by defts. & their predecessors in title at a yearly rent & an additional smaller rent for "cleaning the rooms by the housekeeper appointed for the time being by the landlord." There were other agreements with other tenants in this large building in similar form. With another set of offices the co. agreed "to appoint & pay a housekeeper to be in attendance" for certain hours, "who shall act as the servant of the lessees in cleaning the rooms." The agreement added, "the lessors are to remove such housekeeper & substitute another if called upon to do so by at least two-thirds of the tenants." After all these terms had been subsisting for some time the resident housekeeper without any notice to the tenants left the building, which was placed in charge of a housekeeper who resided on the top floor of another building about 60 yards away & had charge of that other building & a third building. He attended at irregular times in the morning & in the evening, & only for short periods, & if needed at other times had to be sought in the other buildings:—Held: there was a correlative obligation to supply the services of a housekeeper, which corresponded with the obligation to pay the additional rent for those services; the landlord's obligation as to the housekeeper was one "with reference to the subject matter of the lease" under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 11; there was no obligation to provide a resident housekeeper, but there was an obligation to provide the housekeeper's attendance between certain hours under that agreement, which so provided, & that obligation had been broken; the remedy was in damages & not by way of specific performance.—BARNES v. CITY OF LONDON REAL PROPERTY CO., ETC., [1918] 2 Ch. 18; 87 L. J. Ch. 601; 119 L. T. 203; 34 T. L. R. 361.

64. Erection & maintenance of telephone apparatus—Involving supervision of maintenance.]—Under an agreement in 1889 defts., a telephone co., supplied to pltfs the use of a telephone wire & apparatus for three years at a rent payable quarterly. Upon the expiration of the term the parties continued the agreement by mutual consent. On Dec. 30, 1893, being the last day of a quarter, defts. gave pltfs. a notice determining the agreement forthwith, & stating their intention to disconnect the wire & remove the apparatus, & at the same time they demanded rent "up to Dec. 31" being one day beyond the quarter. This rent was duly paid to & accepted by defts. Upon a motion by pltfs. for an injunction to restrain defts. from interfering with the wire & apparatus:—Held: the agreement created the relation of landlord & tenant, & therefore that the acceptance by defts. of rent for a day beyond that on which the notice determining the contract was given operated as a waiver of the notice. Accordingly, an injunction was granted restraining defts. from acting their notice.

The co. agreed in the first paragraph of the agreement, to erect & maintain in working order, subject to provisions, a certain wire & the telephone apparatus relating thereto. It would be impossible for the ct. to supervise a complete performance of that clause of the agreement, & to see to the maintenance of the wire & telephonic apparatus during the period of the agreement (KEKEWICH, J.).—*KEITH, PROWSE & CO. v. 68. ———.]—(1) By an apprenticeship deed between an infant, her parent, & pltf. the infant was bound apprentice to pltf. for seven years, to be taught stage dancing, upon certain terms, by one of which the infant contracted that she would not accept any professional engagement or contract matrimony during the term without the consent of her master. The deed also contained mutual covenants by the master & the parent that the master would properly instruct the infant, & make certain payments to her for all dancing engagements in this country & in foreign or colonial countries; in return for which the infant's services were to be entirely at the disposal of the master. But there was no stipulation that the master should provide engagements for the infant or maintain her while unemployed. There was also a provision that the master might put an end to the apprenticeship, if the infant should be found after fair trial unfit for the work of stage dancing, or should break any of the engagements of the deed, or in any way misconduct herself. The infant having made a professional engagement with deft. B., pltf. brought an action against B., the infant, & her parent, to enforce the provisions of the deed & for damages for breach of it:—Held: the provisions of the deed were unreasonable, & could not be enforced against the infant or her parent.

(2) I should be very unwilling to extend decisions the effect of which is to compel persons who are not desirous of maintaining continuous personal relations with one another to continue those personal relations. I have a strong impression & a strong feeling, that it is not in the interest of mankind that the rule of specific performance should be extended to such cases (FRY, L.J.).—DE FRANCESCO v. specific performance because under it pltf. was bound to render personal services & that this was not affected by the fact that a co. had been formed to which the patent had been sold: so that the services were no longer necessary in as much as the time at which the materiality must be determined was the time at which the contract was made.—WOODS v. 77. Employment as manager.—The partners in certain brass works enter into articles with A., that he shall serve them as their manager & overseer, during his life; &, besides a stipulated yearly salary, he was to have 3s. 6d. for every hundredweight of brass wire made by him, or any other person during his life. A. was afterwards discharged by the partners from their service; & on a bill brought for a specific performance of these articles, it was decreed that pltf. was entitled to all the advantages thereby stipulated for him, except the 3s. 6d. payable to him for every hundredweight of brass wire made at the mills; which the Lord Chancellor conceived was intended as a reward, attending the produce of the works, during such time only as pltf. supervised same. But this part of the decree was reversed, & he was held to be entitled to this allowance, during his life.—BALL v. COGGS (1710), 1 Bro. Parl. Cas. 140; 1 E. R. 471.

78. —.—By a contract between the vendors of a brewery & a trustee for a limited co. which was to be formed for the purchase & carrying on of the brewery, it was agreed, among other things, that B., one of the vendors, should be a managing director for a specified time, & that on his retirement or death his son, pltf., should be managing director for a term therein mentioned, & that B. should provide a qualification for his son as managing director. By the arts. of assocn., which adopted the contract it was provided that a director should vacate his office if he did not acquire a qualification within a month of his appointment or election, & that the qualification of a managing director should be the holding in his own right shares of the nominal value of £25,000. B. provided for pltf. shares to the amount of £5,000, & died in Aug. 1888. Pltf., who was one of his exors., & his co-exors. in Oct. 1888, transferred shares to the amount of £20,000 into pltf.'s name to complete his qualification as a managing director but the estate had not been administered, & there was no evidence under what circumstances the shares were transferred to him or whether he was beneficially entitled to them. The board of directors refused to recognise pltf. as a director on the ground that he had not sufficient qualification, & he brought an action to restrain them from excluding him, & moved for an interim injunction :—

approved of by the bishop & his successors, for his life. The office of receiver was an ancient office & had been exercised before the restraining statute of 1 Eliz. c. 19. P. held the office under three successive bishops, during the whole of which time he not only received the rents but negotiated the renewals of leases, & prepared the leases of the see & likewise attended all searches for records in the bishop's muniment room, of which he kept a key; for the performance of which acts he received fees & emoluments. It appeared also that his predecessor in office who had held the office since 1785 had done the same. Upon the accession of A. to the bishopric in 1836, he refused to admit P.'s claim of right to perform these last-mentioned acts; upon which P. filed his bill against the bishop praying a declaration of the rights in question in his favour, that he might be quieted in the possession of the office, & that the bishop might be restrained by injunction from obstructing pltf. in the exercise of such rights & from doing acts in contravention of them:—Held: the relief sought being analogous to the specific performance of an agreement, the bill must fail, on the ground of want of mutuality; the nature of the duties & services asserted by pltf. being such as to preclude the possibility of a decree in this ct. against him, compelling their specific performance.—*PICKERING v. 84. Revision of book for re-publication.—An author agreed with a bookseller for the publication of his work upon certain terms, under which the latter was to pay the expenses of publication, & to divide the net profits, if any, equally with the author. If all the copies should be sold, & a second edition should be required, the author was to make the necessary alterations, & the bookseller was to publish the second & every subsequent edition upon the same conditions. If all the copies of any edition should not be sold within five years of its publication, the bookseller might dispose of the remaining copies as he thought fit, so that the account might be closed. Two editions were accordingly published. The bookseller became bkpt., & pltf. purchased from his assignees all his copyrights, including nominally the work in question, & the unsold copies of the second edition. Two hundred copies being still in pltf.'s hands unsold, deft. published, with the author's concurrence, a third edition. 88. Doctor's assistant—Provision for occupation of house rent free.—Pltf. entered into a contract with deft., a doctor, to become his assistant, the contract being one which was to last for more than a year. According to pltf., the contract was made partly in writing by a letter written to him by deft. & partly at an interview held on the following day. The letter set out the terms of the arrangement with regard to the salary pltf. was to receive, & also the services which he was to render. It further set out that pltf. was to be allowed the use of a house rent free whilst acting as deft.'s assistant, but it did not mention the date from which the services were to commence. Pltf. having been dismissed by deft. brought an action to recover damages for the breach by deft. of the agreement. Deft. pleaded that the agreement was one which was not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof, & that there was no sufficient memorandum of the agreement to satisfy Stat. Frauds. It was contended on his behalf that in order to constitute a sufficient memorandum it was essential that the date of the commencement of the services should appear in the document. For pltf. it was contended that the term in the agreement that he was to occupy the house rent free made the contract one relating to the acquisition of an interest in land, & there having been a part performance by him of the services which he had to render, he was entitled to give evidence of the terms of the agreement under which he was in occupation of the premises:—Held: the term of the contract that pltf. was to occupy a house rent free did not constitute it an agreement of which a ct. of equity would entertain a suit for specific performance.—*ELLIOTT v. because the lien or remedy was not mutual or reciprocal.

If a man comes for a specific performance as to the land itself, a ct. of equity ought to carry it into execution because there is no remedy at law; but if it is to have a performance in payment of the money, they may have remedy for that at law.—ARMIGER v. CLARKE (1722), Bunb. 111; 145 E. R. 614.

92. —.].—Specific performance of an agreement refused on the ground of the want of specific mutuality, of laches, misapprehensions in the party or parties of its nature & effect, inequality, improvidence, & other circumstances appearing in the case.

Here arose another objection, length of time, which was generally a very good reason for refusing to interfere in the case of a transaction of which, if the matter had been prosecuted at an earlier period, a different view might be given. The Statutes of Limitations were not a bar in equity, but cts. of equity looked to them as guides (LORD REDESDALE).—HAMILTON v. GRANT (1815), 3 Dow. 33; 3 E. R. 980, H. L.

97. —.].—A railway co. agreed with contractors that the latter should work the line, keep the engines & rolling plant in repair, & do certain other acts for seven years, at stipulated amounts of remuneration; if the contractors did not repair, within forty-eight hours after notice, the co. might by another notice determine the contract, & resume possession of the plant, sheds, buildings, etc.; & it was agreed that the contractors should make good all damages done by collisions, etc., but they were not to be answerable for loss in respect of death of, or injury to passengers, etc., by accident, unless arising from their neglect, & then only for £100, in respect of all deaths, injuries, etc., caused by each accident. The co. gave a notice to repair, & the repairs could not be completed within the forty-eight hours. The contractors filed a bill, praying a declaration that the true construction of the agreement was that only such repairs were to be done within forty-eight hours as could reasonably be completed in that time, & for an injunction against giving the second notice to determine the contract. One of the Vice-Chancellors refused a motion for the injunction, & the contractors appealed:—Held: although not in form, the suit was in effect for specific performance, & must be so treated; & assuming pltf.'s case to be true, as it did not fall within any of the classes in which the interference of the ct. had been accustomed to be exercised, there being no mutuality, for if the contractors failed to perform their duty, the ct. could not compel them, & as for any breach of the contract by the co. the contractors had a right to sue at law, if the agreement were legal, the motion must be refused.

Before the ct. can act in the exercise of its peculiar jurisdiction to enforce specific performance of an agreement, it must first of all be satisfied that there is not a reasonable ground for contending that the agreement is illegal or against the policy of the law. . . . I apprehend that there may be objections to the ct. interfering by way of specific performance. . . . We are asked to compel one person to employ against his will another as his confidential servant, for duties with respect to the due performance of which the utmost confidence is required. 98. —.].—The ct. only grants relief by decreeing specific performance where compensation by way of damages would be inadequate, where the stipulations of a contract are such as can be specifically performed, or, at least, where its main subject is such as to call for the exercise of the jurisdiction of the ct., & where there is reasonable mutuality in the stipulations. Therefore, where a bill prayed specific performance of an agreement to let a certain spot at a certain rent, but the main relief sought was not in respect of the main subject of the agreement, but in respect of certain vague stipulations contained in it, & there had been a departure from the original terms of the agreement, & non-performance by defts. had been dealt with by pltf's. as matter of compensation:—Held: the ct. could not decree specific performance, & motion for an injunction by pltf's. to restrain certain acts alleged to be in violation of the agreement, refused.

105. —.]—By a letter dated Apr. 17, 1889, deft. offered £800 for the freehold of a house "with possession at Midsummer, assuming that the title is satisfactory," which offer was accepted by pltf. by a letter of Apr. 18. Pltf.'s solr. then sent deft.'s solr. a formal contract for his approval & signature containing special conditions which deft.'s solr. struck out. Pltf.'s solr. then wrote saying he would not consent to the alterations, & deft.'s solr. sent back the draft saying he would not go on with the negotiations. On May 18, pltf.'s solr. sent back the contract with some alterations & an abstract of the title, by which it appeared that the property was enfranchised copyhold, & that the minerals were reserved to the lord of the manor. Deft.'s solr. on May 20 wrote to pltf.'s solr. saying that this was a fatal objection, & that he could not advise his client to go on with the matter. Pltf. then entered into negotiations with the lord of the manor to obtain the minerals, but did not obtain a conveyance of them until the following Sept.:—Held: assuming the existence of a concluded contract, pltf. did not possess what he had contracted to sell, & deft., upon discovering it, on May 20, had rescinded the contract, & had power to do so although the time for completion had not expired; & therefore no order for specific performance of the contract ought to be made.—*BELLAMY v. Deft. withdrew his offer, & after the withdrawal pltfs. ratified the acceptance of the offer by S. I do not know that the remainderman could on his part enforce the contract of such a tenant for life (LORD DE GREY, C.).—CAMPBELL v. LEACH, LEACH & THOMAS v. CAMPBELL (1775), Amb. 740; 27 E. R. 478, L. C.

111. ———.]—Lessees of way leaves under a lease granted by a copyhold tenant in fee of the land entered into a negotiation for a new lease with the tenant for life under the lessor's will, which gave the tenant for life power of leasing. A correspondence ensued, in the course of which the tenant for life offered to grant a new lease at a certain rent, which offer was accepted by the lessees. The original lease contained a clause usual, if not universal, in the leases in the neighbourhood, giving the lessees the option of determining the lease on notice. The correspondence respecting the new lease was silent as to the insertion of such a clause, but one of the earliest letters alluded to the proposed lease as a renewal of the former:—Held: (1) the lessees might have understood that such a clause was intended to be inserted in the new lease without putting a perverse or absurd construction on the correspondence, & whether such understanding was correct or incorrect, or was confined or not confined to the lessees they ought not to be ordered to accept the lease without such a clause; (2) the tenant for life had not, under the will or otherwise, power to grant such a lease, & the reversioner, though able to fulfil the agreement, was not entitled to demand a specific performance of it.—RICKETTS v. BELL (1847), 1 De G. & Sm. 335; 10 L. T. O. S. 105; 11 Jur. 918; 63 E. R. 1093.

112. Damages sufficient remedy for vendor—Insufficient to purchaser—Action by vendor to enforce contract.]—(1) Where damages in an action at law for breach of a contract to sell a chattel would be an insufficient remedy for the purchaser, although a sufficient remedy for the vendor, a demurrer to a bill by the vendor for a specific performance was overruled, because the remedy in this ct. must be mutual for purchaser & vendor.

(2) Deft. who is the purchaser of this annuity, might have filed a bill for the specific performance of the agreement for sale to him, because a Court of Law could not give him the subject of his contract (LEACH, V.-C.).—*WITHEY v. 116. ——— Release of jointure—Incomplete agreement.]—A married woman was entitled by an ante-nuptial settlement to a jointure rentcharge after her husband's death secured upon his real estates in Ireland. The wife having left him the husband commenced a suit for restitution of conjugal rights; with a view to a compromise by an agreement for separation a document was drawn up & signed by the husband, which stipulated that the wife should release part of her jointure. The wife signed this document with a qualification & no further steps were taken in the matrimonial suit, but it was not stayed or dismissed. A deed was prepared to carry out the terms of the compromise & was executed by the husband, but the wife refused to execute it or to return to her husband, & the husband afterwards died:—Held: the wife was not, when she signed the document, in all respects in the same position as a feme sole, & even if any final agreement had been come to she would not have been bound by it, there having been no acknowledgment as required by 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, ss. 68, 71; & specific performance of the agreement to release her jointure could not be decreed against her.—*CAHILL v. A. In General.

117. Conditional contract.]—A proposal had been made that two pltfs. should buy a triangular field of about 3 acres, & that deft. should buy half an acre of it from them. One of pltfs. & deft. met on the field; deft. wished to have a place in one of the angles, & pltf. stepped so as to mark out where a base line would cut off half an acre. Some days afterwards same pltf. wrote to deft. asking her to let them have a letter agreeing to purchase the half acre she had selected for £350. She wrote back, not expressly referring to the other letter, that she was willing to take half an acre of the land as agreed upon for £350. Pltfs. did not obtain a contract with the owner of the land for the purchase until Nov. 4, which was three months afterwards. On Nov. 13, deft. threatened to withdraw, & on Nov. 20 her solrs. wrote that she did withdraw from the contract:—Held: the doctrine of non-mutuality being a bar to specific performance, does not apply to a contract which to the knowledge of both parties cannot be enforced by either until the occurrence of a contingent event, & therefore, though deft. might have withdrawn at any time before Nov. 4, when pltfs. first became able to perform their part, she could not withdraw afterwards.—WYLLSON v. DUNN (1887), 34 Ch. D. 569; 56 L. J. Ch. 855; 56 L. T. 192; 51 J. P. 452; 35 W. R. 405.

B. Waiver of Objection by Conduct of Party.

119. General rule.]—By a will, certain hereditaments were devised to trustees, on trust, if necessary, to sell for payment of debts, & subject thereto, in trust for A for life, with remainders over; & A. was appointed extrix. A. entered into a contract with B. for the sale of this property, as if she had been solely entitled thereto in her own right. Abstracts of title were, however, delivered immediately after to B.'s solrs., in which the state of the title appeared; & during the space of a year after the agreement, various communications passed between the solrs. of A. & B., & various requisitions as to the title were given & complied with, but, previously to the filing of the bill, no objection was ever made to the agreement on the ground of want of mutuality, & no doubt ever suggested that the proper parties would not join in the conveyance:—Held: in this state of things the purchaser could not resist specific performance, on the ground of want of mutuality.

The conduct of a purchaser may amount to a waiver of the objection of want of mutuality.—SALISBURY v. HATCHER (1842), 2 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 54; 12 L. J. Ch. 68; 6 Jur. 1051; 63 E. R. 24.

sequently cured.]—Houses & lands were devised to trustees in fee, upon trust for sale. The surviving trustee appointed pltfs. his exors., but did not make any devise which comprehended trust estates. On the death of the surviving trustee, his exors. sold the property in lots. Deft. became the purchaser of four of them, just as his purchase was about to be completed, it was discovered that the legal estate was in an infant, the heir-at-law of the surviving trustee. Pltfs. thereupon presented a petition to the ct., that the infant might be directed to convey. Pltfs. apprised deft. of this proceeding, to which he made no objection. Twelve months elapsed before the master's report could be obtained, & a short time previously deft. commenced his action for the deposit, & subsequently recovered it; in the meantime the dilapidations of the houses purchased had increased:—Held: although deft. might have retired from the contract on the discovery of the defect in the vendor's title yet as he did not do so & acquiesced in the proceedings which were necessary to clothe pltfs. with the legal title, & there being no evidence that reasonable diligence was not used in the master's office, pltfs. were entitled to a decree for specific performance.—*HOGGART v. action for specific performance:—Held: deft. could not withdraw on the ground that pltf. had no title, at any rate before the time fixed for the completion of the exchange; & pltf., having tendered a conveyance from his wife before action, was entitled to succeed; for deft., having entered into the contract knowing that it did not bind the estate, but only the person, of pltf., must be taken to have relied from the beginning upon the promise of pltf. to procure the concurrence of the owner, & could not set up that pltf. was not the owner.—ST. DENIS v. HIGGINS (1893), 24 O. R. 230.—CAN.

to the payee; & on payment of the £200 all claim on the notes to cease, & the same to be given up. The brother not having paid the £6 10s. to the payee, for two quarters, but having paid these sums to E., the cestui que trust, as the latter admitted, the payee brought his action upon the notes against the maker:—Held: the brother was entitled to the specific performance of the agreement in equity, not on the ground of the circuitry of cross actions which the rule of law occasioned, but on the ground that this ct., by modifying its decree, could give to all parties the benefit of the agreement, whilst a ct. of law, being unable so to modify its judgment, could not give to one party the benefit of the agreement without depriving another party altogether of such benefit.

I apprehend that where an agreement is made the direct substance of which can be had in this ct., it is not necessarily an answer to a bill for the performance of such an agreement to say that the parties may have compensation in damages equivalent in value to what this ct. can give by its decree. A ct. of law in this case cannot give the parties the direct benefit of the agreement. . . . But if this ct. can preserve to all the parties the benefit of the agreement the case may be proper for its interposition (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—BEECH v. FORD (1848), 7 Hare, 208; 68 E. R. 85.

The lease contained a clause, by which it was agreed & declared that the premises were taken by the lessee subject to the regulations made by the lessors with respect to the duties of the resident porter, the regulations being set forth in the schedule thereunder written & to be considered as forming part of the indenture. By the regulations the rooms in the building were to be, with the entrance & staircase, in charge of a resident porter appointed by the lessors who was to act as servant to the tenants of the rooms in the block. The tenants were to have the right to the general services of the porter as thereafter defined & to special services under certain conditions. The general services of the porter were to be in constant attendance in the building either by himself or in his temporary absence by some trustworthy assistant, to cleanse the stairs & passages every morning, & to receive for, & deliver to, the tenants all letters, parcels, & messages. The lessors appointed a porter who was away for four hours every day acting as cook in a neighbouring building, & during his absence his duties were attended to by a charwoman or some boys :—Held : a decree for specific performance could not be granted & for two reasons ; (a) that part of the agreement which provided for the appointment by the lessors of a porter, was not divisible from so much of it as provided for the various duties of the porter, & as such a contract would require the constant supervision of the ct. during the existence of the lease, it was not one for which a decree of specific performance could be granted ; (b) damages were a sufficient compensation for the breach. — *RYAN v. The agent of a railway co. made a verbal agreement with the contractor for the line, that if he would build on land of the co. certain cottages more substantially than would be required for his own purposes, & would leave them for the use of the co., then the co. would pay him £5,000. The cottages were accordingly built, & when the railway was completed the contractor left them on the land, & the agent of the co. made an agreement with the contractor that he should be paid £500 a year for the cottages by way of rent, with an option to the co. to purchase them for £5,000. This agreement was confirmed by a resolution of the board of directors. The co. paid the £500 a year for some years, & then refused to pay :—Held : the claim of the contractor being simply for payment of money, could not be enforced in the ct. of chancery ; & though the contractor was unable to sue at law because the agreement was not under seal, he did not thereby obtain an equity to enforce a claim for money.—*CRAMPTON v. 148. ———.]—Cts. of equity will not lend their assistance to enforce the specific performance of ordinary contracts for the sale & purchase of chattels, unless there be something very special in the nature of the contract. On the other hand, if a trust be created, the circumstance that the subject-matter is a personal chattel will not prevent this ct. from enforcing the due execution of that trust.

Trusts may be constituted not merely by direct declaration of trust, but also by the constructive operation of the consequences flowing from the acts of parties. Thus equity will enforce the execution of a trust, not only against the trustees themselves, but against all persons who obtain possession of the property affected by the trust, provided they had notice of it.

149. ———.]—Litigation of a complicated character was being carried on both in this country & in Peru, in South America, between pltf. & deft., & also two sons of pltf., who had acted as his agents. On Nov. 8, 1856, an agreement was signed in England between pltf. & deft., whereby it was agreed that a patent standing in the name of pltf., but the right to which was claimed by deft., "should be held for their mutual benefit, deft. to pay £100 towards the expenses of taking out the patent. Pltf. agreed to "rase" all proceedings here & in Peru by pltf. & his said two sons, each party paying his own costs, it being hereby agreed that all claims between deft. & pltf. & his said two sons are settled up to this date; the eight pianofortes in litigation in Peru to be delivered up by deft. to pltf. or his representatives." The difference still continuing, deft. was suing pltf. at law. Pltf. filed the present bill for specific performance of the above agreement. By a letter of pltf.'s solr., set forth in the bill it appeared that pltf. intended that a release should be executed by deft. & himself, & also by his two sons. Deft. demurred:—Held: the agreement was such an one as the ct. would decree the performance of; & it was not bad on any of the grounds urged, viz. neither for uncertainty, nor for want of mutuality, nor for that the ct. could not enforce some of the stipulations, nor for that adequate remedy & compensation could be had at law.

No doubt a bill for the specific performance of an agreement simply for the delivery up of specific chattels will not in general be entertained; but it does not follow that specific performance of an agreement, one of the clauses of which stipulates for the delivery up of specific chattels, will be refused (PAGE-WOOD, V.-C.).—MARSH v. the suit of the vendor, of a contract for the sale of debts proved under a commission of bkpt.

Cts. of equity decree the specific performance of contracts, not upon any distinction between realty & personalty, but because damages at law may not, in the particular case, afford a complete remedy. Thus a ct. of equity decrees performance of a contract for land, not because of the real nature of the land, but because damages at law, which must be calculated upon the general money value of land, may not be a complete remedy to the purchaser, to whom the land may have a peculiar & special value. So a ct. of equity will not, generally, decree performance of a contract for the sale of stock or goods, not because of their personal nature, but because damages at law calculated upon the market price of the stock or goods, are as complete a remedy to the purchaser as the delivery of the stock or goods contracted for ; inasmuch as, with the damages, he may purchase the same quantity of the like stock or goods (LEACH, V.-C.).—*ADDERLEY v. 173. ——— Life interest in public funds.]—On a sale by auction of a life interest in certain funds, the life was described in the particulars of sale to be that of a very healthy gentleman, aged forty-eight. In a subsequent part of the particulars, the life was described as that of a healthy gentleman, aged forty-eight, whose life was insurable. At the sale, an insurance was guaranteed at five guineas per cent. On a bill by the vendors for a specific performance of the contract, it was proved, that, shortly before the sale, the vendors had insured the life at a premium of £4 17s. 10d. per cent., though, according to the evidence of the actuary of the office where the life was so insured, the highest rate per cent. charged in London for a healthy life of that age was £4 6s.:—Held: with the knowledge of this fact, the vendors were not justified in describing the life as a healthy life, & the guarantee did not do away with the effect of this description, though the purchaser admitted he knew five guineas to be more than the premium usually charged.

I think, upon the whole of the circumstances, I should not be justified in decreeing a specific performance; & I feel the less reluctance in refusing it, because plffs. can, if they think fit, go to a ct. of law, where they will obtain damages if they succeed in making out their case. In fact, the bill, in this suit, merely seeks a pecuniary payment in the shape of a specific performance (LORD LYNDHURST, C.B.).—BREALEY v. COLLINS (1831), You. 317; 159 E. R. 1014.

180. General rule.]—A proviso in articles for the purchase of an estate, that if either should break the agreement, he should pay £100 to the other; deft., on being offered two years' purchase more, accepted it, notwithstanding his agreement.

The offering to pay the stipulated sum will not vacate the agreement, for it is no more than the common case of a penalty.

A penalty has never been held to release parties from their agreement, for though incurred, they must perform it notwithstanding.

If there had been evidence which had proved a misrepresentation of the farm by pltf. [purchaser] to a gentleman who had a desire of purchasing it, that would have been a reason for setting aside the agreement, & would have rebutted the equity pltf. has of a specific performance of the agreement (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—*HOWARD v. 182. Provision for penalty — Whether relief limited to penalty.]—Obligees in a bond :—Held : entitled to be paid out of the assets of a deceased obligor, a sum exceeding the penalty of the bond.

The doctrine of this ct. is that, wherever there is a distinct agreement that a thing shall be done, whether it be the conveyance of an estate, the relinquishment of a right, the payment of an annual sum, or the payment of a sum indefinite in amount . . . there, notwithstanding the agreement appears in the form of a bond with a penalty, the ct. will consider that the recital in the condition of the bond, is evidence of the agreement, & will not limit, the relief it gives, to the amount of the penalty (SHADWELL, V.-C.)—JEUDWINE v. AGATE (1829), 3 Sim. 129 ; 57 E. R. 948.

183. Alternative remedies available—Necessity for election.]—A. having filed a bill for specific performance of an agreement to assign him the lease of a house, obtained an interlocutory order for delivery up to him of possession & of the assignment. The assignment which was thus obtained was dated as of the time when possession was first claimed by pltf. A. had subsequently to this order brought an action of trespass against deft., alleging in other counts of the declaration special damage arising from breach of the agreement :—Held : A. who had obtained the benefit of the assignment by the interlocutory order, could not avail himself of it to bring an action of trespass at the same time that he was suing deft. in equity, & he must elect : pltf. not being allowed to sue in equity for specific performance of an agreement for the breach of which he was brought an action at law.—*GEDGE v. Admitting it to be clear in this case, that there must be a covenant against underletting, & that deft. must recover for a breach of that covenant, it would be nugatory to decree the execution of a lease (GRANT, M.R.)—*JONES v. B. was about to marry, & A. being informed of that fact, told him & others, "I will not distress you about the bond, I have given it up, I shall never enforce it"; but on being requested to give up the bond in fact, she said, "No, I will be trusted, but he may rely on my word." B. married. A. afterwards married & her husband & herself put the bond in suit. B. filed a bill for an injunction to restrain them from proceeding, alleging that he had married on the faith of the promises made by B.:—Held: he was not entitled to an injunction, for what passed between the parties was neither a legal contract nor a misrepresentation of facts, but only an expression of intention, the performance of which could not be enforced.—JORDEN v. MONEY (1854), 5 H. Some negotiations took place between them, which resulted, as the principal said, in a concluded agreement, according to which a sum of money was to be paid by the agent to the principal, & the charges of fraud were to be withdrawn, & no further proceedings were to be taken. The agent having declined to carry out the alleged agreement, a bill was filed against him by the principal to compel specific performance of it. In this bill the charges of fraud were repeated & substantively alleged by plaintiff. Deft. denied that any agreement had been finally concluded, & he adduced evidence to rebut the charges of fraud. The Vice-Chancellor made a decree for specific performance of the agreement:—Held: (1) the evidence did not prove any concluded agreement between the parties, & the bill must be dismissed; (2) the charges of fraud being matters which the ct. could not try in this suit, their introduction into the bill was improper, but the charges having been made, deft. was entitled to adduce evidence to disprove them, & pltf. must pay all the costs incurred by reason of the making of those charges as between solr. & client.—*FORESTER v. 205. ———.]—Upon complaint that a railway co. did not afford at their station at R. all reasonable facilities for receiving & forwarding & delivering coal & coke traffic upon & from their railway, it was proved that the railway co. refused to carry or convey on their railway coal or coke to or from their station at R. except coal or coke which had been raised from collieries or manufactured at coke ovens situated on the "Petre Estate." The ground of such refusal was the fact that a former owner of the "Petre Estate" would not sell the land to the railway co. on which the R. station was subsequently erected, except under & subject to the condition & stipulation that the railway co. should not allow any coal or coke to be received or deposited at or sent from the intended station, either by railway or otherwise, which had not been raised from or manufactured at the collieries or coke ovens upon the "Petre Estate."

If the matter had rested upon an uncompleted agreement required to be carried out by virtue of a suit for specific performance, I cannot myself believe that specific performance would have been decreed in the face of that clause (WILLS, J.).—*RISHTON LOCAL BOARD v. Trustees under this Act put up tolls subject to other conditions, one of which was, that unless there should be three biddings there should be no letting, unless the trustees thought proper to take less than three biddings, & that the trustees should have a reserved bidding. There was one bidding only, which was made by pltf.; whereupon the trustees declared, that if there was no advance, they should be obliged to make a reserved bidding. The minute glass was turned thrice, & there was no further bidding. Pltf. insisted that, under the express terms of the Act, he was the purchaser, & he filed his bill for a specific performance:—Held: he was not entitled to relief, & the bill was dismissed, but without costs.—LEVY v. 217. Agreement to guarantee composition to creditors—Conditional on signing release within specified time—Failure to sign due to mistake of law.]—An agreement to guarantee a composition to all the creditors of a third person who should, before a day specified, sign a release to the debtor of their respective claims, is an agreement entered unto with such creditors only as actually signed before that day, & cannot be enforced in favour of a creditor who, in consequence of a misapprehension by both parties of their respective rights, failed to sign the release before the day specified.

Where such an agreement contained no stipulation for giving up securities, a creditor declined to sign the release till the result of an action, brought by him against the acceptor of certain bills which he had discounted for the debtor, should be known; the guarantee insisting on the delivery of the bills, the settlement was postponed, & the release was not signed within the time specified by the agreement:—Held: upon a bill filed by the creditor for specific performance of the agreement, although both parties were under a misapprehension, the creditor being entitled to retain the bills, & although his failure to sign the release arose from such misapprehension, the creditor was not entitled to relief.—EMMET v. Agreement entered into in pursuance of directions in statute—When not completed.]—Bill by a canal co. for specific performance by a railway co. of an agreement to purchase the canal for £12,000 entered into by the projectors of the railway, with a view of obviating bonâ fide opposition on the part of pltf's. to defts.' Act.

By the Act authorising the sale & purchase of the canal defts. were "authorised & required" with consent of three-fifths of the proprietors present at a special meeting "to purchase the canal upon such terms & conditions as shall be or may have been agreed upon between the said cos." The proprietors present at a special meeting, duly held, & called in every respect as required by the Act, passed a unanimous resolution, afterwards communicated to pltf's., authorising the directors to purchase the canal for £12,000 upon such terms & conditions as to them should seem meet:—Held: the Act, not referring to the previous imperfect agreement, did not give validity thereto. Besides, where there is not already an agreement under the co.'s seal, or signed by two of the directors, or where there is any question left open as to the terms or conditions of the agreement, the proper mode of enforcing such a direction in an Act of Parliament is by mandamus, & not by suit for specific performance.—LEOMINSTER CANAL NAVIGATION CO. v. A preliminary meeting was held in Feb. 1857, & shortly after a written agreement of sale, dated Feb. 12, was signed. The purchase-money, as pltf. alleged, was paid by him at another meeting in Oct. 1857. Deft.'s solr. sent the abstract of title to pltf.'s solrs. & the latter were preparing the conveyance, but before they could do so they were told it was useless, as two of defts., E. & M., did not concur & would not execute the deed.

At the preliminary meeting neither of the two was present. Pltf. alleged, but defts. E. & M. denied, that it was then & there stated that those who were present acted on behalf of all the rest. The agreement was not signed by either E. or M. At the meeting of Oct., M. was present but not E. Both E. & M. by their answers denied that pltf. ever paid to deft. any sum of money with the privity of them or either of them :—Held : upon the evidence there was nothing to show that E. was bound, & he must be decreed to redeem pltf. or be foreclosed, M. having been present at the meeting of Oct., was bound by the contract for sale.

Any person who is present upon the occasion of a transaction where money is paid in his presence, on the faith of a representation made with his privity, is bound to fulfil the purpose for which that representation was made.—DAVIES v. DAVIES (1860), 3 L. T. 233 ; 6 Jur. N. S. 1320.

221. Mutual contract between joint tenants—Where prior conditional contract by one to sell whole property.]—It is no objection to a mutual contract between A. & B., for the one to buy or sell from or to the other of them his interest in certain property, that at the time of that contract there existed a conditional agreement by one of them with a third party to sell the whole property to him.

Where, therefore, A. & B., who were interested in equal moieties in certain land, mutually contracted to buy from or sell to the other of them his interest, & at the time of that contract A. had conditionally agreed to sell the whole of the property to F. for a larger sum than the originally estimated value of half the property :—Held : A. & B. were not partners in the increased amount to be paid for the whole property, & A. was entitled, on a bill duly filed, to a decree for the specific performance of his mutual contract with B.—CARTWRIGHT v. INSOLE (1867), 16 L. T. 445.

222. Agreement for compromise of suit—Some parties not consenting.]—By his will made in Oct.

1861, F. gave the bulk of his property to the six children of his two sisters of the whole blood. By a subsequent will, made in Jan. 1862, he gave the bulk of his property to his half sister E.

The will of Jan. 1862, was propounded by the husband of E. & the proof of it was opposed by two of the children of F.'s sisters of the whole blood. Two suits were then instituted in the Ct. of Probate by the husband of E. to establish the will of 1862. These suits were consolidated & a trial took place, in the course of which a compromise was come to, the effect of which was that there should be a verdict for pltf. in that suit, he agreeing to charge the property passing under the will with six several sums of £500 in favour of the six children of F.'s two sisters of the whole blood. The terms of the compromise were indorsed on the brief of counsel for one of the two children, & were signed by him & by pltf.'s counsel, & verbally assented to by all the six children, two of whom alone were parties to the suit.

Certain of the six children who were not parties to the suit, afterwards entered caveats against the probate, & suits were instituted against them by E. & her husband to establish the will, which in the result they succeeded in doing.

On a bill by one of the six children, who was a party to the compromised suit, for specific performance of the compromise :—Held : the agreement for a compromise was to be binding only in the event of the six children consenting to be bound by it ; but as certain of the children had repudiated it, & E. & her husband had been put to the expense of establishing the will, to avoid which expense they had agreed to the compromise, the agreement was null & void.—PLUMLEY v. HORRELL (1869), 20 L. T. 473.

223. Negotiations for compulsory purchase of land—Notice to apply for appointment of surveyor.]

—A notice by defts., a railway co., to treat for a part of pltf.'s manufactory, was met by a counter-notice by pltf's., requiring them to take the whole. Defts. then gave pltf's. notice of their intention to apply to the Board of Trade for the appointment of a surveyor to determine the value of the premises comprised in the notice to treat, & of the further lands & hereditaments which pltf's. could lawfully require & had required defts. to purchase & take. Pltf's. then filed their bill, praying for a declaration that defts. could not take a part of the manufactory without taking the whole ; whereupon defts. gave notice of their intention to withdraw from their notice to treat, offering to pay pltf.'s costs of suit up to that date ; but pltf's. declined the offer & insisted on an answer which was filed. The bill was then amended, & as amended, prayed for a declaration that defts. were bound to take the whole manufactory :—Held : defts.' notice of their intention to apply for the appointment of a surveyor did not amount to a binding contract by them to take the property ; hence they were at liberty to withdraw their notice to treat ; & specific performance as prayed by the amended bill refused.—GRIERSON v.

Contract for purchase of bankrupt's property—Scheme not accepted by creditors—Though approved by court.]—The trustee in a bkpcy. entered into a written agreement with defts. whereby it was agreed that defts. should purchase the assets of the bkpt. for such a sum as would pay the expenses of the bkpcy. & the preferential debts in full within fourteen days after the approval of the scheme by the ct. & a certain composition to the unsecured creditors, & that on the approval of the scheme by the ct. the bkpcy. should be annulled. The creditors by a requisite majority passed a resolution agreeing to the scheme of arrangement as proposed, but adding a clause that a bond should be given by defts. for payment of the money. The ct. afterwards approved the agreement signed by defts., & annulled the bkpcy. : —Held : in an action by the trustees against defts. for specific performance of their agreement, the creditors not having accepted the scheme proposed in the form in which defts. had agreed to it, there had been no approval of the scheme by the ct. & the agreement could not be enforced against defts.—*LUCAS v. 232. Circumstances affecting defence of uncertainty—Conduct of parties—Between agreement & action.]—In a suit for specific performance of an agreement, vague in its language, a ct. of equity, having regard to the terms of such agreement, will consider the surrounding circumstances & conduct of the parties in dealing with the property comprised in it, in the interval between the making of the agreement & the commencement of the suit for its enforcement.

P. & co. entered into an agreement in writing with O. & co. for the transfer to them of the unexpired term of a lease held by P. & co. of land leading to difficulty in its working out, but intelligible, is not too uncertain for specific performance.—FORBES v. CLARTON (1878), 4 V. L. R. (Eq.) 22.—AUS.

& houses at Shanghai, & to build or finish certain houses thereon; to proceed with the building at once; to consult O. & co.'s wishes in building the houses then in progress, & in building other houses not then commenced. O. & co., on their part, agreed to take the term so to be transferred, & to pay a certain rent divided into three portions, the liability for each portion to begin from the time when the house to which that portion related was finished by P. & co., & possession delivered over by them to O. & co. Both parties further agreed that a proper contract should be drawn for their mutual execution by a solr. named by them. No such contract, however, was executed. Possession was given, & the buildings altered by P. & co. at O. & co.'s instance:—Held: decreeing specific performance of such agreement, (1) the terms of the agreement expressed with sufficient clearness the intentions of the parties to bind them, from the time it was made, to do the several acts stipulated for each to perform; (2) the stipulation that a proper contract should be made by a legal adviser was so isolated from the other stipulations in point of sequence that it might be performed either directly after the signing of the memorandum of agreement or when possession was given of the first house specified, or at any subsequent time, either before or after the completion of all or any of the houses to be erected; (3) that part of the agreement which provided that the wishes of O. & co. should be consulted in erecting the buildings was not so vague or indefinite as to render the contract impossible to be enforced, having regard (a) to the surrounding circumstances, & (b) to the fact of a part performance by O. & co. in respect of the buildings & alterations of the houses.—*OXFORD v. 233. Plaintiff insisting on particular construction of obscure contract—Specific performance of different construction refused.—Pltf. offered to take a lease of furnaces from deft., conditionally upon his being able to make arrangements with other persons as to ore. A loosely drawn memorandum was shortly afterwards signed by the parties, substituting certain other rents for the rents mentioned in the letter, which in other respects was to form the basis of the agreement. Deft., understanding that the lease was to begin immediately, offered possession to pltf. at once, but pltf. refused to take it, as he had not yet made arrangements for ores, & continued to treat the agreement as conditional on his making those arrangements. Ultimately the parties differed as to the covenants to be inserted in the lease, & pltf. commenced his action for specific performance:—Held: although where an agreement is clear the ct. must act upon its own view of the construction without regard to the view entertained by the parties, yet where a party has throughout insisted on one construction of an obscure agreement, he cannot get specific performance on the footing of the opposite construction.—MARSHALL v. BERRIDGE (1881), 19 Ch. D. 233; 51 L. J. Ch. 329; 45 L. T. 599; 46 J. P. 279; 30 W. R. 93, C. A.

236. — — —.]—One of two tenants in common in fee of lands containing mines of coal & iron entered into a negotiation for a lease of minerals, & wrote a letter stating his willingness to grant a lease on the terms of a paper referred to in the letter. There were two papers, each of which in some respects answered the description in the letter. One of these purported to be terms for letting & taking "coals, etc." under the lands in question, but contained no more definite description of the minerals which were the subject of it. In a suit by the proposed lessee for specific performance as to the moiety belonging to the tenant in common who had written the letter:—Held: even if, as pltf. contended, it was shown to be the above paper, its terms were too indefinite to be capable of being enforced specifically.—*PRICE v. That arrangement continued down to 1849, when pltf., at the request of debts., to prevent the annoyance to them of constant applications for free passes, consented to pay £5 as a nominal consideration for such free passes. This arrangement continued down to 1857, when, after a long correspondence on the subject, arising out of pltf.'s application for a renewal of the pass, the debts. refused to renew it. The alleged agreement of 1845 was not executed by or on behalf of debts. A bill was filed by pltf. for the specific performance of the agreement, & on demurrer for want of equity, the ct. held that the agreement, being unilateral in its nature, & uncertain in its terms, could not be specifically enforced, & therefore the demurrer must be allowed.—*STURGE v. It must be admitted that debt. who sets up such a defence undertakes a task of difficulty, but that difficulty is diminished where the meaning of the writing is itself in any respect doubtful, & it is still further diminished where, as in this case, a conveyance has been executed, for the purpose of completing the agreement, & that conveyance not only accords with the construction of the agreement for which the vendor contends but has been accepted by the purchaser (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—*HUMPHRIES v. (2) Objection was raised to the specific performance of this alleged contract, which was founded upon the uncertainty introduced by the memorandum of Nov. 15, which provided for the payment of the rent "henceforward," although the proposal of Nov. 11 accepted without qualification on Nov. 15 provided that no rent should be paid during the life of pltf. (2) Specific performance of an agreement to purchase one-third of a foundry refused, on the ground of uncertainty; the contract not specifying what portion of the purchase-money was to be left in the business, but only a "large portion," & not stating when it was to be paid, or how to be secured, & what interest was to be allowed in the meanwhile.—*COOPER v. 255. — Reasonable description necessary.—In order to form a contract by letter, of which the ct. will decree a specific performance, nothing more is necessary than that the amount & nature of the consideration to be paid on one side, & received on the other, should be ascertained, together with a reasonable description of the subject matter of the contract. It is the clearly established doctrine that the ct. will carry into execution an agreement so constituted. It is not necessary to be satisfied that the parties actually meant the same thing, provided a clear assent be given to a certain proposition arising de facto out of the terms of the correspondence.—*KENNEDY v. Agreement for sale of land—Partly freehold & partly leasehold—Boundary not distinctly defined.] (1) A party having agreed to purchase premises stated to be partly freehold & partly leasehold cannot, in the absence of fraud, concealment or misrepresentation on the part of the vendor, resist a specific performance of his contract merely on the ground that the exact position of the boundary line between the freehold & leasehold portions cannot be ascertained, & this would be so, even assuming for the purpose of argument that a vendor who contracts to sell property partly freehold & partly leasehold is, in the absence of specific stipulations, to be considered as bound to show what part is freehold & what leasehold.

264. Sum agreed indefinite—Increase on specific sum to be realised at auction.]—A. agreed to sell an estate to B. for £3,000, " & the further sum of 20 per cent. on any sum the property might realise above that sum at the sale by auction advertised to take place" the next day. B. withdrew the estate from the sale:—Held: the contract was sufficiently certain, & might be enforced.—LANGSTAFF v. NICHOLSON (1858), 25 Beav. 160; 53 E. R. 597.

265. — Payment in shares—Value of shares unascertainable.]—Held: specific performance could not be decreed of a contract between pltf. & deft. by which the latter agreed to transfer to the former a farm in the Transvaal on which deposits of tin ore had been found in consideration of 3,700 shares of £5 each in a syndicate to be formed for the "purpose of developing" the same as a mining property, the 3,700 shares to represent applt.'s holding in a syndicate of 12,000 shares.

The price to be paid by pltf. was wholly uncertain. It was to consist of shares in a syndicate whose purpose of development there was no evidence to define, either as to the nature & extent of the operations contemplated or as to what the parties meant by it, the value of the shares depending upon the adequacy of working capital

266. — Price which the public will be asked to pay.]—By an agreement made between applt. & resps., applt. was to have the right of purchasing certain lots of land to be selected by him, with the concurrence of resps., at prices to “be decided by our officials as soon as the surveys are completed . . . our prices . . . will be at least no higher than the price which the public will be asked to pay.” The lots were selected, & were offered to applt. at the prices which similar lots had fetched at a sale by auction. Applt. refused to accept the lots at these prices, contending that “the price which the public was asked to pay” within the meaning of the agreement was the reserve price at which the lots were actually sold, & brought an action for specific performance or in the alternative for damages:—Held: he was not entitled either to specific performance of the contract or to damages for a breach of it.—FREWEN v. HAYS (1912), 106 L. T. 516, P. C.

267. Method of ascertaining price provided—Settlement by third party.]—(1) Specific performance of a contract by a competent party, & its nature & circumstances unobjectionable, as much, of course, as damages at law.

(2) Under a bill for specific performance of a contract, overreached by a commission of lunacy, pltf. not having traversed, the inquisition, an issue was directed, whether deft. was a lunatic at the execution: if so, whether he had lucid intervals; & whether the contract was executed during a lucid interval; the difficulties in executing the contract, which was for the sale of an estate vested in the lunatic, viz. that the price was to be fixed by persons to be nominated, not appearing strong enough to preclude the previous inquiry, with a view to performance: pltf. being willing to take the title.

Upon the face of it nothing appears to prevent execution. There is nothing unreasonable, as between the parties, upon the face of it. It fixes no value upon the estate; but it provides a mode, in which the value is to be ascertained, that is perfectly fair & equal between them. It must be supposed that, if competent, they had taken the proper means of getting at the real value, by employing persons of skill to value the advowsons & the farms (GRANT, M.R.).—*HALL v. 277. — Terms contained in parol agreement.]—It is not a valid ground of non-performance of a written agreement, that the other party has not performed a secret agreement of parol, alleged to be part of the written agreement, but which is not referred to in it.

An agreement was made for the sale of the goodwill of a milliner's business, & lease of the house & furniture, including the services of pltf., the vendor, as his agent, buyer & artiste, "as agreed upon," for which the purchaser was to pay £1,500, & £200 per annum to pltf. for eight years. Pltf. was milliner to the Queen, & it was one of the terms of the agreement entered into verbally between the parties, that pltf. should endeavour to procure the transfer of the appointment to deft., & it was alleged by deft. that this was part of the services to be rendered by pltf., & for which he was to be paid the £200 per annum. Pltf. was unable to procure the appointment for deft. & deft. refused to pay the £200:—Held: this secret agreement, if proved, was not referred to in the written agreement, was not incorporated with it, & therefore, the payment of the £200 per annum could not be resisted on the ground that the appointment had not been obtained for deft., especially as, the rest of the agreement having been performed on both sides, the ct. could not restore the parties to their original position.—*VOUILLON v. Pltf. afterwards took leases of the unfinished houses & executed two successive mtges. thereof to enable deft. to raise money on them as a security for the same purposes. Deft. failed to supply pltf. with the required funds as stipulated under the parol agreement, which, however, had been successively departed from:—Held: in a bill praying specific performance of the parol understanding together with damages, or at all events damages that pltf. was entitled to neither but, deft. submitting to it, pltf. might have the ordinary redemption decree.—THORPE v. HOSFORD (1872), 20 W. R. 922.

280. Material term left for future agreement—Effect of user.]—Pltf., in 1855, submitted to the directors of a railway co. a project for a private branch line, to be constructed at pltf.'s cost, & for his accommodation; to which the directors expressed their assent & agreement generally, but the terms & details were left for future arrangement. In the year 1856 pltf., at considerable cost, constructed the branch, & the co. prohibited the user until a definite understanding should be come to: semble, at this time the co. were bound to assent to reasonable terms, & the ct., if possible, would have decreed specific performance.

After some discussion, terms as to tolls & other matters were proposed by pltf., & the traffic was continued on the basis of pltf.'s memorandum of terms, & payments made by pltf. for the carriage of goods during two & a half years, but no agreement was ever signed by two directors. The directors ultimately insisted on terms originally suggested by them before the user commenced, & then objected to by pltf.; & on pltf. declining to make an agreement at variance with the terms on which the user had been enjoyed, the co. proceeded to obstruct the traffic:—Held: on demurrer to bill for specific performance & injunction, there was an indefinite agreement in 1855 for a user on reasonable terms, the actual user had removed all difficulty about what terms were reasonable, & pltf. was entitled to specific performance on the basis of the unsigned memorandum, on the terms of which the user had been permitted.—*LAIRD v. n. Other terms contemplated — Inference from improvidence of contract.]

—Specific performance of an agreement which is clearly worded cannot be resisted on the ground that other terms must have been in contemplation of the parties from the improvidence of the express contract. Such performance decreed notwithstanding the act upon which the right depended, appeared under the circumstances to have been done with different intent.—SULLIVAN v. JACOB (1828), 1 Mol. 472.—IR.

281. — Decision of third party—No decision given.]—The ct. refused to decree specific performance of an agreement, where an essential particular was left, in case the parties differed, to the absolute decision of two persons named in the agreement, or their nominee, & where no such decision had been given.—TILLET v. CHARING (CROSS BRIDGE CO. (1859), 26 Beav. 419; 28 L. J. Ch. 863; 34 L. T. O. S. 42; 5 Jur. N. S. 994; 7 W. R. 391; 53 E. R. 959.

282. — Agreement subject to "approval of terms of contract."]—Deft. offered in a letter to sell an estate for a certain sum. The letter stated that the offer was "subject of course to approval of the title & the terms of the contract." Pltf. accepted the offer, & the solrs. for the two parties agreed upon a draft contract. The vendor subsequently refused to proceed & an action was brought for specific performance:—Held: the letters might have made a good contract but for the statement that the offer was subject to approval of the terms of the contract, which left a material term uncertain, & the contract, therefore, was one which could not be enforced.—(HATTERLEY v. NICHOLLS (1884), 1 T. L. R. 14, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 8.—EFFECT OF PART PERFORMANCE.

283. General rule.]—Where terms for letting farms provided that all materials required for buildings proposed to be built, or that might thereafter be built, should be led at the expense of the tenant; that the landlord should drain the tenant leading tiles; that "gates, buildings, etc.," should be left in repair by the tenant, the landlord finding new gates when required; that the landlord reserved to himself all customary rights & reservations, such as liberty to cut & plant timber, search for & work "mines or minerals, etc.," allowing the tenant for any reasonable damage:—Held: these stipulations did not render the agreement uncertain, so as to be incapable of being enforced specifically.

The second objection which is made to a decree for specific performance is uncertainty in the terms of the agreement, & it is urged, that having regard to the principles on which a ct. of equity acts, it is impossible to decree specific performance of such an agreement. . . . It must be borne in mind that this agreement has been partly executed by possession having been taken under it; & there are many authorities to show that in such a case the ct. will strain its power to enforce a complete performance. . . . It is further alleged on the part of deft. that there has been such a breach of the agreement by pltf. as disentitles him to claim specific performance. . . . the ct. will not refuse its aid unless the breaches of the agreement are gross & wilful (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.).—PARKER v. TASWELL (1858), 2 De G. & J. 559; 27 L. J. Ch. 812; 31 L. T. O. S. 226; 22 J. P. 432; 4 Jur. N. S. 1006; 6 W. R. 608; 44 E. R. 1106, L. C.

284. —.]—It is no answer to a suit for specific performance, for deft. to say that though he understood what the words of the agreement were, he was under a mistake as to their legal effect.

Although there may be considerable vagueness in the terms, & although it may be such an agreement as the ct. would hesitate to decree specific performance of, if there had not been part performance, yet when, there has been part performance the ct. is bound to struggle against the difficulty arising from the vagueness (KAY, J.).—*HART v. 285. Part performance as evidence of terms.]—A contract which is void for uncertainty is not rendered certain by part performance, but where a contract is complete in itself, in that a defined act is to be done upon reasonable terms, evidence is admissible as to what terms are reasonable, & the conduct of the parties may be the best evidence upon this point.—*WARING & GILLOW, LTD. v. SUB-SECT. 9.—EFFECT OF FRAUD.

286. Fraud of defendant—Whether objection of uncertainty upheld.]—Deft. purchased an estate, having agreed with pltf. that, if he made the purchase, he would cede part thereof to pltf. There was some uncertainty in the memorandum of agreement between pltf. & deft. as to the exact portion which was to be ceded to pltf. In an action by pltf. for specific performance of the agreement, the ct. directed a reference to chambers to ascertain what portion pltf. was entitled to, & decreed that deft. should convey such portion to pltf.

In a case like this where deft. has acquired the estate or part of it by fraud on pltf. I think that the ct. would be bound, if possible, to overcome all technical difficulties in order to defeat the unfair course of dealing of deft. & I should not, in my opinion, be going too far, if I compelled deft. to give the whole estate to pltf. at the price given for it, rather than that he should succeed in retaining it on account of any uncertainty as to the part which pltf. is entitled to have (MALINS, V.-C.).—*CHATTOCK v. PART III. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 8.

285 1. Part performance as evidence of terms.]—Though some terms of a contract appear uncertain, if there has been part performance by the party relying on the contract, & the ct. is satisfied there was a contract intended, it will strive to overcome the difficulty arising from the vagueness. As to the uncertain terms the ct. may give the party seeking specific performance the option of accepting them as understood by the other party.—KELLY v. WATSON (Alta.), [1920] 1 W. W. R. 939.—CAN.

o. Contracts not under corporate seal.]—Contracts not under the corporate seal, made with trading cos., relating to purposes for which they are incorporated, if partly performed, & of such a nature as would induce the ct. to decree specific performance if made between ordinary individuals will be enforced against them.—*ONTARIO & WESTERN LUMBER CO. v. agreement to grant a lease enforced against the intended landlord on the ground of part performance, & on evidence consisting of a memorandum by the landlord, the parol testimony of a witness present, & the draft of a lease prepared by the landlord's steward, though the draft of the lease provided that the tenant should do an act for the landlord's benefit, which was not mentioned in the landlord's memorandum or the witness's testimony.

Cts. of equity exercise their jurisdiction in decreeing specific performance of verbal agreements where there has been part performance, for the purpose of preventing the great injustice that would arise from permitting a party to escape from the engagements he has entered into, upon the ground of Stat. Frauds, after the other party to the contract has, upon the faith of such engagement, expended his money or otherwise acted in execution of the agreement (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).

(2) Deft. has endeavoured to set up, as a defence, acts of the tenant which would have been breaches of the covenant, if a lease had been executed. In this I think he has wholly failed; for instance, he charges the tenant with having grubbed up a hedge, & it is proved to have been done with the approbation of his own steward. This ground of defence assumes the existence of the agreement; & if, upon that supposition, the landlord never complained of the conduct of his tenant, but permitted him to act upon the faith of the contract, it would require a strong case to enable the landlord to raise such objection, for the first time, when the tenant claimed the benefit of it (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—MUNDY v. 298. ———.]—The principle of part performance was based upon the idea that a statute designed to prevent fraud would be misapplied in cases where the existence of a contract was so plainly to be inferred that to allow a deft. to ride off upon the statute would be to enable him to commit a fraud under cover of the very act which was designed to prevent it (NEVILLE, J.).—HOARE v. KINGSBURY URBAN COUNCIL, [1912] 2 Ch. 452; 81 L. J. Ch. 666; 107 L. T. 492; 76 J. P. 401; 58 Sol. Jo. 704; 10 L. G. R. 829.

part performance is the comprehensive power vested in them to prevent fraud. If the part performance be such that the parties can easily be replaced in the same position as if the agreement were never made, the ct. will not interfere with the express provision of Stat. Frauds. In any case, a final & concluded agreement must be conclusively proved.—MORLEY v. BOLAN (1852), 3 Nfld. L. R. 277.—NFLD.

300 vii. ———.]—An oral agreement for an easement may be enforced where there has been part-performance, though the ct. would interfere in favour of a purchaser against an owner in fee, it would also interfere against a party entitled in remainder. . . . I think there is a great deal of force in the doubt, to put it no stronger, which has on several occasions been expressed upon the point, because when the principle upon which the ct. interferes in such cases is considered, namely, that it would be a fraud on the part of the person who might insist upon Stat. Frauds to insist upon it, I think it is extremely doubtful whether that principle is applicable to the case of enforcing such a parol contract against remaindermen (LORD CRANWORTH, C.).—MORGAN v. 307. Act of party to contract.]—"The doctrine of part performance is founded on a change of possession, which is assented to by that party to the contract who is sought to be charged. It cannot be alleged by him that he is a trespasser. You refer his possession, if you can, to a legal origin, & you can do that by implying a contract. But you cannot make a contract by the act of a third party, who is no party to the contract itself. For instance, if A. & B. contract that A. shall sell an estate to B. & B. takes possession of it, that is evidence against B. of a contract by him to buy the estate, for otherwise he would be a wrongdoer. But if A. & B. agree that an estate shall be settled on C. for life, with remainder to B., & B. gives possession to C., that is not evidence against A. That is really what took place here. The bargain was that the property should be conveyed to C. But how can the fact of C. being put into possession by B. be evidence that A. gave up his debt? It is plain that A. is not a party to the taking possession; & he is not a trespasser, & consequently, as against him, the giving of possession to the persons who are to be trustees is no evidence whatever of a contract on his part, & is not part performance by him. That puts an end to the notion that there is anything to take this case out of Stat. Frauds" (JESSEL, M.R.).—Re FOSTER, Ex p. FOSTER (1883), 22 Ch. D. 797; 52 L. J. Ch. 577; 48 L. T. 497; 31 W. all liability in respect of his name being used, & that the partnership should cease on the death of the mother of the retiring partner:—Held: (1) not to be void as against public policy, but to be a valid & binding agreement; (2) the agreement must be considered to mean that an annuity was to be granted by deed, & the retiring partner was entitled to enforce specific performance of such agreement.

It is not within the discretion of the ct. to refuse specific performance, because an agreement savours of illegality. It must be shown to be illegal (WOOD, V.-C.).—AUBIN v. HOIT (1855), 2 K. & J. 66; 25 L. J. Ch. 36; 4 W. R. 112; 69 E. R. 696.

316. —.]—An agreement by trustees of a will, to grant an underlease of their testator's leasehold property, is, prima facie, inconsistent with a trust for sale of it. There may be, however, circumstances to justify the agreement; but the ct. cannot enter into the consideration of those circumstances in a suit for specific performance between the trustees & the underlessee, the cestuis que trust not being parties to it.—EVANS v. JACKSON (1836), 8 Sim. 217; Donnelly, 147; 6 L. J. Ch. 8; 59 E. R. 87.

318. —.]—Trustees for sale of a manor described it in advertisements, & particulars & conditions of sale, as a manor in which the fines were arbitrary; adding that the clear profits, on an average of the last eight years, had been £150 a year; & it was one of the conditions of sale, that if there should be any error of mis-statement in the particulars, the vendors or purchaser, as the case might happen, should pay or allow a proportionate value, according to the average of the whole purchase-money, as a compensation either way. After the sale it was found that by the custom of the manor arbitrary fines were payable only on alienation, & that on the death of a tenant, his customary heir paid, upon admittance, a small fixed sum, & the widow was admitted to her free bench without any payment. It was also found that the clear profits exceeded £200 a year:—Held: there was no such misdescription of the property as would entitle the purchaser to compensation, inasmuch as the annual profits, which constituted the substantial value, far exceeded the amount stated.

Seemle: if there was a substantial misdescription, a ct. of equity would not enforce against trustees specific performance with compensation, as being prejudicial to the cestui que trust, & incapable of being ascertained.

In the present case the contract which we are called upon to enforce is one which the vendors, as trustees, had no right whatever to make, & which, if performed, would cast upon their cestui que trust, the consequences of their own negligence. This a ct. of equity never can do (LORD BROUGHAM).—WHITE v. CUDDON (1842), 8 Cl. & Fin. 766; 6 Jur. 471; 8 E. R. 300, H. L.; reversg. S. C. sub nom. CUDDON v. CARTWRIGHT (1840), 4 Y. & C. 319. —.]—A trustee entered into a contract for the sale of trust property, & it was agreed that the purchaser should, out of the purchase-money, retain a private debt due to him from the trustee. On a bill by the trustee:—Held: that this ct. would not decree the specific performance of such a contract.—THOMPSON v. BLACKSTONE (1843), 6 Beav. 470; 49 E. R. 908.

320. —.]—(1) With regard to the condition of sale, if it were calculated to mislead a purchaser, the ct. would not enforce it (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).

325. — Breach of trust by company directors—Agreement for forfeiture of shares.—Directors had power, on non-payment of calls, to sue for them or forfeit & sell the shares. They proposed to a shareholder to relieve him from further liability, on his consenting to an absolute forfeiture. He assented, but the directors, having afterwards discovered that he was in good circumstances refused to complete. The ct. declined to compel the directors specifically to perform the contract.—HARRIS v. NORTH DEVON RY. CO. (1855), 20 Beav. 384; 52 E. R. 651.

326. — Legality of contract doubtful.—Trustees for the sale of certain lands joined with the trustees for the sale of other lands, & with the absolute owner of other lands, in selling all the lands together. After entering into a contract for sale, they agreed as to the proportions in which they were to be entitled to the purchase-money. The conditions for sale stated, that as to a part of the lands the title was to commence in 1845 only. It appeared on investigation that this only related to a very small part:—Held: so joining in the sale, & so apportioning the purchase-money, was a breach of trust, & the condition was depreciatory; & specific performance at the suit of the vendors refused.

The doctrines & principles applicable to this case are opposed granting specific performance in the present instance; & if it is not clear that the contract . . . was a breach of trust, it must be held at least to be exceedingly doubtful whether it is not so (KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J.).—*REDE v. A private Act of Parliament authorised one railway co. to accept a lease of another railway: the directors of the first co. then entered into an agreement with the directors of a third co., the stipulations of which were to be performed "during the continuance" of such lease. Absence of legal advice—Where plaintiff solicitor.—An agreement for a reversionary lease having been obtained by an attorney from the son of his employer, who was remainderman in a settlement under which his father who had granted the existing lease was tenant for life. On a bill for specific performance, the ct. refused under the circumstances to enforce the agreement.

F. under a settlement executed in 1716 was tenant for life of certain lands, with a power to lease for any term not exceeding thirty-one years, the owner of land to accept an offer for the purchase of it, which probably would not otherwise have been accepted without independent investigation, specific performance of an agreement for sale thus procured will not be enforced.—HENDERSON v. remainder to his first & other sons successively in tail male. In 1745 F. granted to S., who was then acting as his attorney, a lease of lands, comprising two hundred acres of good land, Irish plantation measure, for three lives or thirty-one years, whichever should last the longest. M. was the only son of F. In 1749 M. by a writing indorsed upon that part of the lease of 1745, which was in the possession of S. in consideration of £20, agreed to ratify that lease, & on the expiration of the term, to grant a renewal for a further term of lives, a blank being left in the agreement as to the number of lives. The agreement was not indorsed on the counterpart of the lease in the possession of F. & was not registered till June, 1760. In May, 1760, F. died, leaving M. surviving, who by deed in 1760, settled the lands in trust for himself for life; remainder to his two daughters as tenants in common. Resp. became entitled to one moiety of the lands, as the only son of one of the daughters; & at a sale under a decree in Chancery in 1814, purchased the other moiety. At the time of the sale, it was mentioned that the lands were sold subject to the lease of 1745. S. died in 1780, leaving L., who was the last surviving life in the lease of 1745, & held the lands under the lease till his death, which took place in 1817. Appls. claimed as devisees of L. In 1820 appls. filed a bill in Chancery, stating the facts above-mentioned, & praying a specific performance of the agreement to grant a renewal of the lease:—Held: appls. were not entitled to such relief.—BLAKENEY v. BAGOTT (1829), 3 Bl. N. S. 237; 1 Dow. & Cl. 105; 4 E. R. 1326, H. L.

I cannot help thinking . . . that pltf. should not have sufficient defts. to sign, without previously consulting their solr. (ALDERSON, B.).—DEARDON v. BAMFORD (1841), 10 L. J. Ex. Eq. 54.

352. ——— Where no fraud proved.]—Specific performance decreed in favour of a purchaser, though no solr. acted for the vendor; & though the contract was executed under circumstances which might easily have led to fraud; no fraud being proved in the vendor or his agent.—*LIGHT-FOOT v. 353. Signature induced by promise of plaintiff.]—A farm was put up to auction on certain conditions of sale, but was bought in by the vendor. Subsequently the vendor entered into an agreement for sale thereof, with a purchaser who had not then seen the conditions of sale, but who represented to the vendor that, if the agreement entered into were not in accordance with the conditions of sale already prepared, he would alter & adapt it thereto. The vendor was a decrepit old man, but not incompetent to transact business; but in entering into the agreement he had no solr. nor agent. The purchaser having declined to adapt the agreement to the conditions of sale, in the particulars in which it differed, & having filed a bill for specific performance:—Held: specific performance could not be enforced, because the promise to adapt the agreement to the conditions of sale might have operated as an inducement to the vendor to sign it, but as imbecility & fraud were set up as a defence, & not proved, no costs were given.—MICKLETHWAIT v. NIGHTINGALE (1848), 12 L. T. O. S. 82; 12 Jur. 638.

354. ——— Agreement for building lease.]—In the year 1852, deft. was entitled to the residue of a term of years of some lands of which pltfs. were seised in fee. After much negotiation, drawing up of agreements, & alterations & modifications of these agreements, deft. signed in Apr. 1854, an agreement to surrender his existing interest, & to take a new lease, by which he was to covenant to build a large number of houses, & to lay out the premises & roads, & to build drains in the manner therein stated. He agreed further to covenant not to underlet or assign the premises without permission from pltfs., & in case of any breach of any of these covenants pltfs. were to be at liberty to re-enter on the whole of the premises. During the earlier part of this negotiation deft. had been assisted by his own solr., but for some time previously to the execution of the agreement of Apr. 1854, he appeared not to have consulted any professional man, except his own surveyor. At the execution of the agreement deft. had had no assistance whatever, & in fact no one was present on his behalf, deft. observing at that time that he was sure the solr. for pltfs. "would not allow him to do anything wrong." The permission of the Charity Comrs. was obtained, but upon pltfs. delivering to deft. an abstract of their title, deft. handed the matter over to his original solr. who requested that some minor alterations might be made in the terms of the agreement, to many of which pltfs. yielded. Ultimately, however, deft. demanded that the clause against underletting should be omitted in preparing the lease, & on pltfs. declining to accede to this demand, deft. refused to complete his contract on the ground of surprise & undue influence over him. Pltfs. then instituted this suit, praying by their bill a specific performance of the agreement:—Held: there existed no reason whatever for releasing deft. from the contract into which he had thus entered.—HABERDASHERS CO. v. ISAAC (1857), 29 L. T. O. S. 350; 5 W. R. 855, L. J.J.

355. ——— Vendor's knowledge of disapproval of purchaser's solicitor—Exorbitant price.]—An estate was put up to sale by auction. The conditions of sale were drawn out in manuscript, but were not printed or circulated. They were shown in this state to B., a solr. for a person who was likely to be a purchaser. He objected at once to one of the conditions of sale, as one to which the contemplated purchaser could not be advised to assent. The auction took place, & the objection to this condition was publicly noticed by an indifferent attendant at the sale. The property was bought in.

On the following day the proprietor of the estate called upon the contemplated purchaser, & persuaded him to sign an agreement for the purchase of the estate, as it was alleged at a most exorbitant price, & containing, by reference to, the objected condition of sale:—Held: under such a state of circumstances, specific performance of the agreement could not be enforced.—LEE v. DAWSON (1861), 4 L. T. 464.

356. Signature by illiterate person—Agent of defendant—Contract drawn up by plaintiff.]—On a bill for the specific performance of an agreement by which A., as agent for B., contracted to let to C. a piece of ground for a term of years at a yearly rent; it appearing from the evidence that B. intended to let the ground for the building of houses of a particular class, & that if he had authorised A. to act as agent in the letting of the ground, which was disputed, he had told him the purposes for which it was to be let:—Held: as the agreement did not contain any reference to building, nor any covenant to build, it was not under the circumstances such an agreement as ought to be performed; & a decree for a specific performance was refused.

Supposing the authority to B. to enter into the agreement with pltf. to be clearly proved it does not follow that it is such an agreement as a Ct. of Equity will decree to be specifically performed. The agreement appears to have been signed by an illiterate person, as agent for deft. L., & to have been drawn by one of the pltf. (per CUR.).—HELISHAM v. LANGLEY (1841), 1 Y. & C. Ch. They were considerable incumbrances, & it did not appear whether the purchase-money would be sufficient to discharge them, or what would be the extent of the deficiency. 375. Risk of opening foreclosure—Purported sale by mortgagee under power of sale.]—A mtgee, with power of sale, obtained a foreclosure decree, & then entered into an agreement to sell the estate, with a clause providing that as the vendor was mtgee., with power of sale, she would only enter into the usual covenant that she had not incumbered. The purchaser objected to the validity of the foreclosure decree, & insisted upon having the conveyance under the power of sale; & on the vendor declining to convey in that form, instituted a suit for specific performance, in which the vendor adduced evidence, showing that the above-mentioned clause was inserted by inadvertence, & that she never intended to incur the risk of opening the foreclosure by conveying under the power:—Held: the misapprehension was a sufficient defence to the enforcement of a conveyance under the power.—*WATSON v. 376. Sale of land without means of access.]—In the absence of special circumstances, a ct. of equity will not enforce specific performance of a contract for the purchase of land which is silent as to the means of access to it, when it is reasonably uncertain whether any means of entering on the land at all times can be conferred on the purchaser; & where the circumstances of such a case did not appear to the ct. sufficient to constitute a waiver of the objection, a bill for specific performance was dismissed with a fixed amount of costs.—*DENNE v. 377. Solicitor contracting in own name—For purchase of land on behalf of client.]—A solr. contracted, in his own name, to purchase a freehold; he resisted the performance of it on the ground that he had acted as the mere agent of a client, & that, it being a case of hardship, damages at law would be an adequate remedy to the vendor:—Held: he was bound to perform the contract.—SAXON v. BLAKE (1861), 29 Beav. 438; 54 E. R. 697.

378. Where performance would expose defendant to criminal proceedings.]—Property sold by auction under the description of an eligible freehold property for investment, comprising a house & shop let on a quarterly tenancy, was discovered before completion to be used by the tenant as a disorderly house. Neither the vendors nor the purchaser knew previously that the house was being improperly used. The agreement of tenancy contained a covenant by the tenant not to use the house as a disorderly house, & a proviso for re-entry in case of breach of covenants:—Held: specific performance ought not to be granted, inasmuch as the purchaser, unless he took steps to prevent the improper use of the property by the tenant, would become liable as lessor to criminal proceedings under Criminal Law Amendment Act,

p. Mistake in description of title by agent of vendor.]—Deft.'s agent for sale agreed to sell to pltf. certain lands with a title under Real Property Act.

The lands were not under the Act, but, by a mistake of the agent, were so described in the contract. Deft. refused to bring the lands under the Act & purported to rescind:—Held: the contract should be specifically enforced, there being no such hardship arising from the agent's mistake as would be a defence in equity to deft.—FISCHER v. BENNETT (1911), 11 S. R. N. S. W. 399; 28 N. S. W. N. 113.—AUS.

But where something different from what is claimed by the purchaser was intended to be sold by the vendor, this ct. will not compel the latter specifically to perform the contract, which, in substance, though not in terms, is really different from that which was entered into.

(2) Where the terms of a contract are ambiguous, & by adopting the construction of the purchaser, would compel the vendor to convey property not intended or believed by him to be included in the contract, this ct. will not decree a specific per-

The title was accepted by the purchaser on July 16, but owing to disputes as to the value of the fixtures the meeting for completion did not take place till Aug. 26. The purchaser then discovered that the vendors had renewed the insurance, which expired on June 24, for one month only, so that the property became uninsured on July 24, & thereupon became forfeited to the lessors. On Sept. 7, the purchaser absolutely repudiated the contract. The vendors subsequently renewed the insurance, & obtained a waiver of the forfeiture from the lessors, & the purchaser refusing to complete, they filed a bill for specific performance:—Held: although the vendors were not bound to renew the insurance, yet having done so in so unusual a manner, the ct. would not decree specific performance, & the bill was dismissed, but without costs.—*DOWSON v. It was proposed by a co. to carry a railway through two contiguous estates belonging to A. & B. A., who had been previously in treaty with B. for his property, opposed the line, but eventually withdrew his opposition on an agreement between himself & the co.'s solr., that if the co. purchased a certain part of B.'s property they would sell it to A. This agreement was subsequently executed by the co., but pending its execution, the co.'s solr. purchased B.'s property, as he alleged, on his own account, & after selling a part of it to the co., for their purposes, retained the residue. On the completion of the line, the co. agreed to sell a portion of that residue to a second railway co. Thereupon A. filed a bill against the first co. & their solr. for specific performance of his agreement:—Held: he was entitled to a decree & to the execution of a proper conveyance of the property.—HENDERSON v. 398. — Prior contract—Covenant not to assign.]—The ct. will not compel deft. specifically to perform an agreement when the result would be to compel him to commit a breach of a prior agreement with another person. The lessee of three acres of land agreed in Jan. 1874, to let 1 acre to pltf. for the whole of the residue to his term, & he agreed also to sell to pltf. his interest in the whole three acres at any time within five years from the date of the agreement. The lease contained a covenant by the lessee not to assign the property, or to part with the possession of it, or any part of it, without the written consent of the lessor. Pltf. was not, in fact, aware of this covenant. He was let into possession of the 1 acre & he laid out money upon it, & also upon adjoining property of his own, with the view of occupying the two together. The lessor was aware of this expenditure. In Oct. 1877, the lessee, without pltf.'s knowledge, surrendered the lease to the lessor, in exchange for a new lease for a longer term of the 3 acres, together with other property. The new lease contained a similar covenant by the lessee not to assign, etc., without licence. In Nov. 1877, pltf. gave the lessee notice of his desire to exercise his option to purchase his interest under the original lease in the 3 acres. The lessee declined to perform his agreement, on the ground that the lessor refused to give his licence to an assignment. Pltf. brought the action against the lessee & the lessor, claiming specific performance of the agreement by the lessee, & to compel the lessor to give his licence, on the ground, (inter alia), that he had acquiesced in pltf.'s expenditure, knowing that he was acting in the mistaken belief that the lessee was able to assign the property to him. It appeared that the lessor was not, when pltf.'s expenditure was incurred, aware of the existence of the lessee's covenant not to assign without licence:—Held: the lessee could not be compelled to perform his agreement, inasmuch as his doing so would involve a breach of his prior covenant not to assign without licence, for that, as pltf. was seeking to treat the original lease as still subsisting for one purpose he must treat the covenant not to assign contained in it as still subsisting.—WILLMOTT v. BARBER (1880), 15 Ch. D. 96; 49 L. J. Ch. 792; 43 L. T. 95; 28 W. R. 911; on appeal, 17 Ch. D. 772, C. A.

399. — Right of first refusal.]—An agreement between a racecourse co. & a canal co. contained a clause that if the racecourse should be at any time proposed to be used for dock purposes, the racecourse co. should give the canal co. the "first refusal" thereof:—Held: (1) "first refusal" imported either a fair & reasonable offer to sell to the canal co., or that the price at which the racecourse co. were to give the canal co., the "first refusal" was a price which the racecourse co. would accept from other wouldbe buyers in the event of the refusal of the canal co. to buy at that price: i.e., that the canal co. had a "right of pre-emption"; & an offer to the canal co. at an extravagant price which the racecourse co. did not reasonably expect would be given either by the canal co. or any other wouldbe buyer was not giving a "first refusal" within the meaning of the clause; (2) the clause did not create an interest in land so as to entitle the canal co., on that ground to enforce their right of pre-emption as against an intending purchaser with notice of the right; but that the canal co. were entitled to enforce their right as against the racecourse co. & the intending purchaser, on the ground that the contract to give the canal co. the "first refusal" involved a negative not to part with the racecourse to any one else without giving them that "first refusal."

It seems however, from the decision in Willmott v. Barber, No. 398, ante, that the Trafford Park co., [the racecourse co.] could not obtain a decree for specific performance of a contract for sale & purchase of land, if that sale would be a breach of a prior contract with a third person (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.).—MANCHESTER SHIP CANAL CO. v. 400. — Inconvenience to public—Interference with traffic.—Pltf., a landowner, had withdrawn his opposition to a railway bill in consideration of the co. agreeing to make a road & an approach in a particular manner. The co. altered the level of their line, & varied the course & inclination of the road. The bill was filed pending the works, & a motion for injunction had been ordered to stand to the hearing, on the co. undertaking to abide by the direction of the ct. as to altering their works. The railway had since been opened for traffic:—Held: pltf. was entitled to specific performance & the co. could not set up the inconvenience to the public by the interference with the traffic as a reason for not performing their agreement.—RAPHAEL v. THAMES VALLEY RY. CO. (1867), 2 Ch. App. 147 36 L. J. Ch. 209; 16 L. T. 1; 31 J. P. 343; 15 W. R. 322, L. C.

401. — Injury to public interest—Contract by Improvement Commissioners.—These [Statutory Improvement] Comrs. are not invested with judicial or even quasi-judicial authority. They are to act according to the best of their judgment for the promotion of the objects prescribed; & in the performance of their duty they may enter into reasonable negotiations & contracts, which will bind them, & hold good permanently, unless subsequently displaced under the statutory provisions.

Where the Comrs. had accepted an offer made to arrest litigation; where the acceptance was carried by only fourteen votes against thirteen; & where they afterwards repudiated the contract as likely to prove injurious to the public interest, the House decreed a specific performance, on the ground that the party with whom the agreement was made had relied & had acted upon it, & that they were bound by it.—SMEATON v. ST. ANDREWS MAGISTRATES (1871), L. R. 2 Sc. & Div. 107, H. L.

402. — Injury to creditors—Giving secret advantage to one.—A banker holding bills & acceptances as a security for advances made to a customer, took a guarantee from the brother of the customer that the loss of the bank should not exceed £2,000. This transaction took place after the customer had commenced proceedings for the liquidation of his affairs, & unknown to his other creditors, with a view to prevent the bank from opposing a composition:—Held: upon a bill filed by the banker to enforce performance of the agreement, the arrangement which would have the effect of giving one creditor a secret advantage over the others, could not be sustained, & the bill was dismissed with costs.—MCKEWAN v. SANDERSON (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 65; 44 L. J. Ch. 447; 32 L. T. 385; 23 W. R. 607.

403. — Inconvenience to co-tenant in common.—An agreement by one of two tenants in common of land to make a lease of the minerals contained in his share can be enforced by specific performance.

Inconvenience caused by the other tenant in common having granted a lease of the minerals contained in his share to another person is not sufficient ground for the ct. to refuse specific performance in such a case.—HEXTER v. PEARCE, [1900] 1 Ch. 341; 69 L. J. Ch. 146; 82 L. T. 109; 48 W. R. 330; 16 T. L. R. 94; 41 Sol. Jo. 133.

405. ——Inadequacy of value is not in itself sufficient to set aside a contract.

I never can agree that inadequacy of consideration is in itself a principle upon which a party may be relieved from a contract which he has wittingly & willingly entered into. It may, indeed, be strong evidence of fraud, when the transaction is such as to be inconsistent with the sober manner of a man's conducting his affairs (EYRE, C.B.).—GRIFFITH v. 1 — — Parties alleged to be in pari delicto.]--In an action for money had compel the performance by deft. of a contract in writing for the purchase of a house. During the negotiations deft. asked expressly as to the drainage which pltf. assured him was perfect, but which in fact was seriously defective. It appeared that the representations had been made by pltf. in good faith & in ignorance of the facts, & the house being occupied deft. could not inspect it for himself. Nothing was said about the matter in the written contract:—Held: in the suit for specific performance the verbal representations made previous to the written contract must be taken into consideration & that, being material representations, on the faith of which deft. entered into the contract, they constituted a defence, although pltf. did not know them to be untrue.—

Sect. 7.—Misrepresentation, fraud and mistake:
Sub-sect. 1, A.]

439. —.]—(1) Contract for the sale of an existing & a reversionary lease not specifically performed without a production of the title of the lessors.

The proposition, that the vendor of a leasehold interest cannot produce his lessor's title, is not to be represented as universally true. I know instances to the contrary. The vendor ought, therefore, where he sells with that restriction, to describe that it is the interest he has that is to be sold (LORD ELDON, C.).

(2) Purchaser under a particular, giving a false description, not bound at law or in equity.—DEVERELL v. BOLTON (LORD) (1812), 18 Ves. 505; 34 E. R. 409, L. C.

440. —.]—The ct. may not decree specific performance of a contract for the sale of a reversion if the vendor had misled the purchaser by stating that it was subject to a lease containing all the usual covenants for repairs, etc., the vendor knowing at the same time that there was no person against whom the covenants could be enforced.—FLINT v. WOODIN (1852), 9 Hare, 618; 22 L. J. Ch. 92; 19 L. T. O. S. 240; 16 Jur. 719; 68 E. R. 660.

441. —.]—On a sale by auction of property, described in the particulars as freehold, one of the conditions contained the following words: "The vendors derived their title under the will of J. R. B. In 1861 the said J. R. B. contracted to purchase the houses described in the particulars from E. T., & a document under seal, dated Dec. 27, 1861, was executed by the parties. From 1861 to the present time quiet & undisturbed possession has been held of the said freehold houses by the said J. R. B. & the vendors. . . . The said document can be seen at the office of the vendors' solrs. at any time previous to the sale, & the purchaser shall be deemed to have knowledge of the contents. The title shall commence with the said document of Dec. 1861. The purchaser shall assume that the said J. R. B. by the said document, & by his undisturbed possession, was at the time of his death seized in fee of the said freehold houses." From the abstract of title, which consisted merely of the document referred to in the condition, & the will of J. R. B., it did not appear that the vendors had more than a prima facie possessory title to the property at the time of the sale.

Upon an action by the purchaser for rescission, & upon counterclaim by the vendors for specific performance:—Held: the condition amounted neither to an express or implied suggestio falsi, nor to a suppressio veri; & the contract must be specifically performed.—BLENKHORN v. PENROSE (1880), 43 L. T. 668; 29 W. R. 237.

Annotation:—Refd. Dougherty v. Oates (1900), 45 Sol. Jo. 119.

442. Misrepresentation as to value.]—Wilful misrepresentation of the yearly value of an estate is a good reason for a ct. of equity to refuse decreeing a specific performance of a contract for

& received debt. pleaded, by way of set-off, a promissory note given by pltf. to deft. From the evidence it was apparent that the transactions between the parties, out of which the present cause of action arose, were intended to defraud the creditors of pltf., & that pltf. & deft. were in pari delicto:—Held: such being the case, pltf. should not be aided by the ct. in enforcing his contract, & the verdict for him must be set aside.—BLAKE v. STEWART (1870), 8 N. S. R. (2 G. & O.), 70.—CAN.

444. Agreement in part performed.]—If an agreement is in part performed by one of the parties, it is too late for the other to complain of fraud, surprise, etc., or attempt to set the agreement aside on that account; for a ct. of equity will decree a specific performance of the remaining part of it.—ANGLESEY (EARL) v. ANNESLEY (1741), 1 Bro. Parl. Cas. 289; 1 E. R. 573, H. L.

Annotation:—Refd. Penn v. Baltimore (1750), 1 Ves. Sen. 444.

445. Vague & indefinite misrepresentation.]—Effect of an indefinite representation by a vendor; as that a leasehold estate was nearly equal to freehold being renewable upon a small fine; putting the purchaser upon inquiry; though, connected with certain circumstances, such representation may be fraudulent, & form a ground for rescinding the contract. Vendor, resisting an application by the purchaser for payment into ct. of the deposit in the hands of the vendor's agent, charged with a loss by the agent's failure. Specific performance prayed both by original & cross bill, after considerable delay upon the title: the rents to be received, & interest paid, from the time stipulated.—*FENTON v. one lot was taken after the prescribed time, that it was of copyhold tenure. It however appeared that, under a composition with the lord, the rights of the copyhold were such as to render the tenure hardly different from that of freehold:—Held: the misdescription did not form a ground for resisting a specific performance, although the decision might have been otherwise had the misdescription been wilful.

(2) Another lot was described in the advertisements as being sold with a certain reservoir & waterworks, yielding a yearly rental of £60, exclusively of the land & buildings. An objection was taken after the prescribed time, & was supported by the fact that this rent arose from supplying with water certain houses separated from the reservoir by the property of strangers, over which the vendor had no right to carry it, beyond a licence from year to year by payment of a rent:—Held: the description contained such a misrepresentation as to preclude the vendor from enforcing a specific performance; & the objection was not one as to title, & therefore was not obviated by the stipulation as to time.—*PRICE v. Parol evidence of declarations by the auctioneer at the sale, warranting the quantity, received in opposition to a specific performance, on the ground of fraud; not to enforce performance.—*WINCH v. 453. Vendor representing himself as agent—Necessity for proof of loss by purchaser.—It is no defence to a bill for specific performance by the vendor, that during the treaty he falsely assumed the character of agent for another, when, in fact, he was dealing on his own behalf, & that he thereby deceived the purchaser as to the party with whom the contract was made, provided the purchaser does not show that the deception induced him to enter into the contract, or occasioned any loss or inconvenience to him otherwise.—*FELLOWES v. 456. — Vendor asserting good title.—Pltf. agreed to sell to deft. all his estate, right, & interest in certain lands. pltf. only to produce a title from A. B., the last owner, to himself. It appeared that deft. knew that A. B. was one of four supposed owners of the property, & was anxious to buy up such title as he had in order to get rid of his opposition to a bill in Parliament:—Held: deft. was not at liberty to show aliunde, A. B. had no title, & pltf. was entitled to specific performance. The mere assertion by the vendor that he has a good title, on the faith of which the purchaser relies without investigating the title, is not necessarily such a misrepresentation as will preclude the vendor from enforcing the contract.—HUME v. POCOCK (1866), 1 Ch. App. 379; 35 L. J. Ch. 731; 14 L. T. 386; 12 Jur. N. S. 445; 14 W. R. 681, L. J.J.

ROBINSON* (1830), 1 Russ. & M. 527; 39 E. R. 203.

460. ——A solr. contracts to purchase from A. B., not at that time his client & being ignorant of his legal position, an estate at a low price, informing A. B. that the nature & title of the property were such as that no one but a professional man would purchase it, such representation not being justified by the state of the property, & no solr. having been employed on behalf of A. B. in the transaction. Specific performance of the contract refused to the solr.—DAVIS v. ABRAHAM (1857), 5 W. R. 465.

461. Representations demanding investigation—Full facilities afforded—Investigations partially made.—Where specific performance of a contract for the purchase of a brewery & leasehold houses, was resisted by the purchaser on the ground of misrepresentation, & it turned out that, as to two heads of alleged misrepresentation, the number of barrels of beer sold weekly & the value of the rents of the houses, he had obtained access to the brewery books, & obtained full information; & as to the third, the loans or debts due to the concern agreed to be taken to by the purchaser, he had, previous to completion, obtained in a subsequent statement full & accurate representation; he was held to his contract, notwithstanding some vague & inconsistent statements, & some incorrect representations, contained in an advertisement

462. Onus of proof—Of fraud.]—In general the burthen of proof is thrown upon the party who resists performance of an agreement, on the ground of fraud & surprise; but the rule is by no means universal. If the agreement be suspicious on the face of it, the burthen of proof may be shifted on to the party seeking to enforce it (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—WEST v. HARGOOD (1837), 6 L. J. Ch. 369; 1 Jur. 259.

463. — Of good faith.]—(1) The jurisdiction of the ct. to decree specific performance will not be exercised in favour of a vendor who fails to satisfy the ct. that he has done all he can to avoid misrepresentation.

(2) Specific performance being refused & the bill dismissed with costs, plff. vendor was ordered to repay the purchaser the deposit with interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum from the time of payment, deft. undertaking to bring no action & to restore the property to the condition it was in before the alterations.—TURQUAND v. RHODES (1868), 37 L. J. Ch. 830; 18 L. T. 814; 16 W. R. 1074.

464. — Sale under direction of court.]—Plff. having obtained an order for sale in the suit, put up a lot described as being in the occupation of C. at a yearly rent of £42. It appeared that C. was holding as tenant under another party, hostilely to the vendor. The ct. discharged the purchaser, & directed plff. to pay his costs, & refused to give time to the vendor to recover the premises by ejectment.

If there is any one thing which the ct. requires more than another, it is that in a case where specific performance is asked, there shall appear to have been perfect good faith on the part of a vendor in his description of the property & his representations to a purchaser. This is not less the case when the sale takes place under the direction of the ct. (WOOD, V.-C.).—LACHLAN v. REYNOLDS (1853), Kay, 52; 2 Eq. Rep. 713; 23 L. J. Ch. 8; 22 L. T. O. S. 211; 2 W. R. 49; 69 E. R. 23.

465. Effect of agreement for sale to third party — By person alleging misrepresentation.]—A purchaser agreed to buy an estate, upon a statement in the particulars of sale that it lay upon a valuable vein of coal, which vein afterwards proved to have been mostly worked out. Subsequently the purchaser entered into an agreement with a third party to sell the colliery at a price implying the existence of a considerable quantity of coal, & afterwards discovered the fact of the exhaustion of the coal:—Held: the transaction between the purchaser & the third party did not invalidate the purchaser's defence of misrepresentation to a bill by the vendor for specific performance, though it might have been an answer to a claim by the purchaser for an abatement of the purchase-money.—COLBY v. GADSDEN (1867), 17 L. T. 97; 15 W. R. 1185, L. C.

466. Performance involving fraud on public.]—(1) Pltfs. claimed the specific performance of an agreement for the composition of a literary work by deft., alleging that the agreement was contained in three written documents. At the trial the first & third of the documents were proved; the second was not produced, nor was any evidence given of its contents. Deft., by his statement of defence, denied that he had agreed with pltfs., as alleged by them, with reference to the second document:—Held: pltfs. were not entitled to specific performance of the agreement contained in the first & third documents, or to damages for the breach of it.

(2) Pltfs. alleged that deft. had agreed that his name should not appear on the title-page of the work as the author of it; deft. alleged that it was part of the agreement that his name should so appear. Pltfs. proposed to publish the book with a title page, stating that it was "edited by K., assisted by M. (deft.)." K. was known as having published other books of a similar description, & had allowed pltfs. to make use of his name, but he had taken no part whatever in the compilation:—Held: the proposed title page would be a fraud on the public, & on this ground also pltfs. were disentitled to relief.—POST v. MARSH (1880), 16 Ch. D. 395; 50 L. J. Ch. 287; 43 L. T. 628; 29 W. R. 198.

467. Misstatement as to length of term—Held by tenant—Sale of land.]—A misstatement in the particulars of sale, of the length of the term for which a tenant of the vendor holds a portion of the property, is not, in the absence of any evidence as to whether such misstatement is to the advantage of the purchaser or not, such a misrepresentation as will enable him to resist specific performance.

Seven cottages, let to weekly tenants, were put up for sale, & described as "producing £73 14s. a year." When the particulars were issued the cottages did not produce this rental. Before the sale the vendors had entered into a contract to do certain repairs, & had given notice to the tenants that their rents would be raised, & before the day fixed for completion repairs were done, & the rents were raised 3d. a week; so that, on the day of completion, the statement in the particulars was quite accurate:—Held: this was not such a misrepresentation as would enable a purchaser to resist specific performance.—GODDARD v. JEFFREYS (1881), 51 L. J. Ch. 57; 45 L. T. 674; 30 W. R. 269; on appeal (1882), 46 L. T. 904, C. A. Annotation.—Consd. Van Praagh v. Everidge, [1902] 2 Ch.

468. Misrepresentation by agent.]—An agent, commissioned by a vendor to find a purchaser, has authority to describe the property & to state any fact or circumstance which may affect the value, so as to bind the vendor; & if an agent so commissioned, makes a false statement as to the description or value, though not instructed so to do, which the purchaser is led to believe, & upon which he relies, the vendor cannot recover in an action for specific performance. A surveyor was employed by the owner of a leasehold house to find a purchaser. He represented to deft. that another person, H., was ready to buy the property for £700, & that if deft. were to give £50 more, he would make a clear profit of 7 per cent.; that H. had further offered to rent the property at £300, or the ground floor only at £200. Deft., relying

463 i. Onus of proof—Of good faith.]—When a vendor of land who does not understand English is induced by the purchaser, who understands both English & the language of the vendor, to execute an agreement of sale, in on the above representations & others which were unauthorised by the vendor, & untrue, contracted to purchase for £750; but afterwards, finding out the falsehood, refused to complete. The vendor himself also made a misleading statement to the purchaser:—Held: independently of the statement made by the vendor himself, the false statements made by the agent, being within his authority, were sufficient to vitiate the contract; & specific performance refused.—*MULLENS v. Before signing he asked “are you buying for C. or his nominees?” B. answered “No.” He was, in fact, buying for nominees of C., to whom he afterwards assigned his contract. 470. —.]—In 1895 defts., who were trustees of a Congregational chapel, put up for sale by public auction a building, which had formerly been used as their chapel. The conditions of sale imposed no restrictions on the user of the building. After the sale C. made an offer for the building, but defts. declined to accept it, on the ground that it was made on behalf of a committee of Roman Catholics, who intended to use the building as a Roman Catholic place of worship, & defts. objected to sell for that purpose. The committee then told pltf., who was the manager of a mineral water co., that if he could get the property they would buy it of him at £100 profit. Pltf.’s solrs. wrote to defts.’ agent, making an offer for the property “on behalf of our client, the manager of the E. Mineral Water co.” After some negotiations, a contract was signed by defts. for sale of the building to pltf. at £1,025, a price less than C.’s offer. No direct statement was made that pltf. was buying for the co., but it was admitted that defts., during the negotiations, believed that he was, & that pltf. knew it. Pltf. signed the contract as principal without protest from defts.’ agent. Defts. refused to complete on the ground that pltf. was buying, as agent, for the Roman Catholic committee, to whom he knew they would not sell, & had obtained the contract by misrepresentation:—Held: on the evidence pltf. was not buying as agent for the Roman Catholic committee, but for himself with a view to resell to them at a profit; the misrepresentation as to the Mineral Water co. was immaterial because the vendors did not care whether they sold to the co. or pltf., & as between them no consideration of the person with whom they were contracting entered as an element into the contract.—NASH v. DIX (1898), 78 L. T. 445.

471. Sale in lots—Misrepresentation as to one lot.]—Where a purchaser separately acquires two lots of property at an auction in reliance on an innocent misrepresentation of the vendor as to the second lot, entitling the purchaser to rescission as to that lot, he cannot also rescind the contract for the first lot, unless from the circumstances known & understood by both parties at the time of sale the ct. can infer that the two transactions were to the knowledge of both interdependent.

If, however, the ct. is satisfied that, apart from the misrepresentation, the particular purchaser would not have bought either lot, it will refuse the vendor specific performance as to the first lot.—HOLLIDAY v. LOCKWOOD, [1917] 2 Ch. 47; 86 L. J. Ch. 556; 117 L. T. 265; 61 Sol. Jo. 525.

472. Non-disclosure of person entitled to benefit of contract.]—Unless the possession by one of the contracting parties of some personal quality is a material ingredient of the contract, the mere non-disclosure of the person actually entitled to the benefit of the contract for the sale of land is no defence to an action for specific performance, even although pltf. knows that, if the disclosure had been made, deft. would not have entered into it.—DYSTER v. RANDALL & SONS, [1926] Ch. 932; 95 L. J. Ch. 504; 135 L. T. 596; 70 Sol. Jo. 797; [1926] B. & C. R. 113.

B. Material Misrepresentation.

473. Whether defence to action.]—A purchaser cannot be compelled to complete a contract entered into by him, on the faith of a balance sheet produced by the vendor, as being, though subject to slight errors, substantially correct; the errors being, in fact, so serious as to amount to nearly £1,480 & reducing the balance of £1,500 stock in favour of the business to some £20 or £30 & showing that the concern was barely solvent.—CHARLES-WORTH v. JENNINGS (1864), 34 Beav. 96; 11 L. T. 439; 55 E. R. 569.

474. —.]—S. signed a written contract with R. to purchase a brickfield for “£17,000,” to be paid as follows: £16,000 in cash & £1,000 in freehold equities to pay on the £1,000 12 per cent. per annum. Before signing S. had made out & given to R. a list of freehold houses, in which he was entitled to the equity of redemption, but this document was not referred to in the contract. In the negotiations S. asked R. whether he had ever put the property into the hands of an agent to sell for less money than he was then asking, saying that he fancied, as the fact was, that it must be the same as had been offered to him for less. R. falsely answered “No”:—Held: this was such a material misrepresentation as to prevent the ct. enforcing the contract in an action brought by R.—ROOTS v. SNELLING (1883), 48 L. T. 216.

477. Concealment of material fact.—By an agreement for the sale of a reversionary estate in fee, it was stipulated, that a statement in a deed of 1836, to the effect that a life annuity granted to A. had not been paid or claimed for eight years, supported by a declaration of the vendor that no claim had been made upon him since 1841, & that he believed that the annuity had not been claimed for the last twenty years, should be conclusive evidence that the annuity had determined. It appeared that the annuity was granted by a person entitled in reversion, & was granted for the life of the survivor of four persons, two at least of whom were living:—Held: the omission to state these circumstances disentitled the vendor to enforce the stipulation in a specific performance suit instituted by him.—DRYSDALE v. MACE (1854), 5 De G. M. & G. 103; 2 Eq. Rep. 386; 23 L. J. Ch. 518; 2 W. R. 341; 43 E. R. 809, L. JJ.

478. —.]—Pltfs., who were owners of a ship's cargo, alleged that by the custom of underwriters, before a policy of marine insurance was effected, a paper called a "slip" was offered by way of memorandum to the underwriters, & subscriptions were taken upon it; & that such slip, & the proposals on which it was founded, were regarded & usually acted upon by both parties as a valid contract. Pltfs. having by their agent offered such a slip to deft. & other underwriters, & obtained there signatures thereto, filed a bill for specific performance of the alleged agreement to grant a policy.

The "slip" or agreement was not stamped, & pltfs., though alleging that it could not be proceeded on at law on that account, refused to stamp it, but claimed the relief of the ct. on the unstamped instrument.

It appearing in evidence that the agent of pltfs., in dealing with the deft.'s broker, had suppressed a material fact, namely, that the ship was about to be navigated, not, as they supposed, by the master, but by the mate:—Held: this suppression of fact was a sufficient ground to induce the ct. to withhold its discretionary power of decreeing specific performance.—MOROCCO LAND CO. v. FRY (1865), 5 New Rep. 234; 11 L. T. 618; 11 Jur. N. S. 76; 13 W. R. 310; 2 Mar. L. C. 157.

479. —.]—Trustees under restrictions for sale agreed to sell land to B. for a purpose understood between the parties, though not embodied in the agreement. Pending the negotiation, B. with knowledge of the restrictions, entered into a sub-contract to sell the land for a purpose at variance with the trusts. This arrangement was concealed from the vendors until after the signing of the original contract, & they then refused to complete:—Held: the agreement could not be enforced.—TRAPPES v. COBB (1867), 17 L. T. 236; 32 J. P. 71; 16 W. R. 117.

480. —.]—LLOYD'S BANKING CO., LTD. v. WIGHAM (1884), 1 T. L. R. 58.

481. —.]—On July 31, 1924, deft. purchased from pltfs. two leasehold houses & paid a deposit. Completion was fixed for Aug. 21, 1924. Under the lease vendors were bound to do the inside & outside repairs. The conditions of sale provided that purchaser should execute all necessary repairs.

Requisitions on title were delivered, one of which asked whether any notices from landlords had been served on the property. The answer was that vendors were not aware of any. The answer was made in good faith, but in fact vendors had received landlord's notices on July 7, 1924, calling upon them, within three months of July 4, 1924, to make good the dilapidations found to have accrued on the premises "as per the schedule hereto annexed." On discovering their mistake vendors, on Aug. 20, 1924, sent copies of the notices to the purchaser, who then declined to complete unless the vendors complied with the notices at their own expense. Condition 6 of the conditions of sale provided that the production of the last receipt for rent should be conclusive evidence that all the covenants had been complied with. Condition 8 provided that if any notices were outstanding they should be complied with at the expense of the purchaser. Pltfs. brought an action for specific performance of the contract by deft. Deft. counterclaimed for the rescission of the contract & the return of his deposit:—Held: the notices contained material facts which it was the duty of the vendors to disclose, & the non-disclosure deprived them of the right to the special relief of specific performance.—BEYFUS v. LODGE, [1925] Ch. 350; 95 L. J. Ch. 27; 133 L. T. 265; 41 T. L. R. 429; 69 Sol. Jo. 507.

482. — Defect in title.—Where a vendor has knowingly suppressed a defect in title, the ct. will not allow him to force the title upon a purchaser, although in the conditions of sale he has employed general words large enough to include the defect.—EDWARDS v. WICKWAR (1865), L. R. 1 Eq. 68; 35 L. J. Ch. 48; 13 L. T. 428; 29 J. P. 820; 14 W. R. 79.

483. Unusual restrictive covenant.—It is a sufficient defence to a vendor's action for specific performance of an agreement to purchase land that the purchaser was induced or allowed to sign the agreement on the faith of an assumption that the property was not subject to any "unusually restrictive" covenants, whereas in fact it was subject to a covenant to build at the request of the original grantor, such covenant, though probably not enforceable against the purchaser, yet rendering it possible that he might be called upon to allow buildings to be erected, or be harassed by claims to that effect.

A. agreed to purchase from B. a plot of land & dwelling-house, in the neighbourhood of a large town of which B. was mtgee., with power of sale, & which were held by his mtgor. subject to a covenant "that he, his heirs, exors., administrators, or assigns . . . would, at the request of the original grantor, his heirs or assigns, erect & build upon the plot of land one or more dwelling-house or dwelling-houses." In the margin of the draft agreement A.'s solrs., who had not seen the deed containing the covenant, had written the following note: "We assume that the covenants . . . include nothing unusually restrictive." This assumption was not negatived by B., & the agreement was eventually signed by A. on the faith of its being correct. Upon the discovery, however, of the existence of the above covenant, A. refused to complete his purchase. In an action by B. for

d. Misrepresentation as to liability to floods.—A statement by a vendor of land that the land was drained, fit for the plough, & not liable to be flooded, when as a fact in ordinary winter floods the water of a creek was backed up & a considerable portion of specific performance:—Held: A. could not be compelled to complete: since, though he probably could not be forced actively to fulfil the covenant, he might nevertheless be called upon under it to allow B. to build upon the land, or at any rate be harassed by claims to that effect or otherwise under the covenant.—ANDREW v. AITKEN (1882), 22 Ch. D. 218; 52 L. J. Ch. 294; 48 L. T. 148; 31 W. R. 425.

484. — Mere silence as regards material fact.—Mere silence as regards a material fact, which the one party is not bound to disclose to the other, is not a ground for rescission, or a defence to specific performance.—TURNER v. GREEN, [1895] 2 Ch. 205; 64 L. J. Ch. 539; 72 L. T. 763; 43 W. R. 537; 39 Sol. Jo. 484; 13 R. 551.

485. — By person in fiduciary position.—Pltf. contracted to purchase from H. & C., who were trustees, a portion of their property. H. was a solr. & C. was his managing clerk. Throughout the transaction H. acted, through C., as solr. both for vendors & purchasers. C. failed to disclose to pltf. certain valuations previously obtained showing that the property was not worth the price which pltf. agreed to pay. Pltf. knew that the vendors were trustees. In the course of the negotiations pltf. offered & C. accepted a bribe. In an action by pltf. for rescission of the contract defts. counterclaimed for specific performance:—Held: H., as pltf.'s solr., was bound to disclose to him all material facts relating to the matter, & he was not relieved of that obligation by the fact that he owed a conflicting duty to his cestuis que trust. By the claim for specific performance the contract, which might have been repudiated on the ground of the bribe, was affirmed, & pltf. was not therefore deprived of his equitable right to rescission on the independent ground of the non-disclosure by his solr. of material facts.—*MOODY v. If one party thought he had purchased bonâ fide part of an estate, which the other thought he had not sold, it is a ground to set aside the contract. If both understood the whole was to be conveyed, it must; otherwise if neither understood so.—

Before the sale took place several of the printed copies were altered by the vendor's solr., who introduced in writing a reservation of a right of way to other premises belonging to the vendor. Several of the altered copies of the particulars were laid on the table in the auction room, without any remark with regard to the alteration, & an altered copy was delivered to the auctioneer, who read the same aloud before the biddings commenced; but the party who became the purchaser did not hear or notice the alteration. The contract was signed by the auctioneer, inadvertently, & by the purchaser, on a copy of the particulars of sale not containing the reservation. After the purchase-money was paid & possession given, the purchaser filed his bill for a specific performance of the contract by a conveyance from the vendor, without a reservation of the right of way; & the bill was dismissed without costs.

An authority given to an auctioneer to sell may be revoked by the vendor at any time before the sale, & such revocation is valid against parties dealing without knowledge of it; therefore, in a suit by a purchaser to enforce specific performance of a contract entered into by the auctioneer by mistake or inadvertence, for the sale of property, as to part of which, a right of way over the land sold, his authority had been revoked, it is competent to deft. to insist upon such revocation, & parol evidence is admissible in support of that defence.

500. —.—.]—At a sale by auction of landed property on Nov. 18, 1901, deft. bid for one lot by mistake for another, & it was knocked down to him. On discovering his mistake he refused to sign the contract, whereupon the auctioneer signed it as his "agent."

The printed particulars, conditions, & annexed form of contract had been prepared for a sale on "Oct. 17, 1901," which was postponed till Nov. 18, but by inadvertence the original date, though altered in the particulars, remained in the conditions & form of contract:—Held: there was no contract within Stat. Frauds, nor, semble, any consensus ad idem to support an action by the vendor for specific performance.—VAN PRAAGH v. EVERIDGE, [1903] 1 Ch. 434; 72 L. J. Ch. 260; 88 L. T. 249; 51 W. 502. Erroneous construction—Right of plaintiff to specific performance—According to construction admitted by defendant.—A negotiation took place as to the sale by L. to P. of a British patent & certain foreign patents for the same inventions, & ultimately an offer was made for the sale at £500 & accepted by letter, but it was not quite clear whether the offer & acceptance related to all the patents, or to the British patent only. P. brought his action for specific performance, treating the contract as including all the patents, & moved for an injunction to restrain L. from parting with them. At the hearing of the motion he asked for leave to amend his writ, & for an injunction as to the British patent only:—Held: an injunction should be granted, for where a written agreement has been signed, though it is in some cases a defence to an action for specific performance according to its terms that deft. did not understand it according to what the ct. holds to be its true construction, the fact that pltf. has put an erroneous construc-his agent altered the agreement to read Lot 4, the alteration being initialled by pltf. Deft. subsequently refused to carry out the agreement. In an action for specific performance:—Held: the mistake was a mutual tion upon it, & insisted that it included what it did not include, does not prevent there being a contract, nor preclude pltf. from waiving the question of construction & obtaining specific performance according to what deft. admits to be its true construction.—PRESTON v. LUCK (1884), 27 Ch. D. 497; 33 W. R. 317, C. A.

503. ——— Time for election.—(1) A vendor who claims specific performance of a written contract for sale & insists upon a wrong interpretation of the contract down to & at the trial, does not thereby forfeit his right to elect to have specific performance of the contract as rightly interpreted, the purchaser's offer, contained in his defence, to complete on those terms not having been withdrawn.

(2) A party to a contract who desires to avail himself of an act of repudiation by the other party must evidence his election to do so with every reasonable dispatch.

Accordingly, it is too late for a purchaser, who in his defence to an action by the vendor for specific performance has pleaded that he was willing to complete on the right interpretation of the contract, to seek at the trial to amend that offer & ask for rescission & recovery of his deposit, on the ground that pltf. by his conduct in insisting upon a wrong interpretation had repudiated the contract & had thereby given deft. the option to accept that repudiation.—BERNERS v. FLEMING, [1925] Ch. 264; 94 L. J. Ch. 273; 132 L. T. 822; 69 Sol. Jo. 507, C. A.

504. Clerical error—Party claiming to be misled having knowledge of true facts.—A., who was tenant for life of coal mines under a will with remainder to his children, filed a bill in which he set out his title, & the will under which he took, alleging, however, by a clerical error that he was tenant in tail, although in the interrogatory founded on that statement, he asked whether he was tenant for life. The bill, which was filed against the lessees of a conterminous mine, prayed on account of coals raised by them, & payment to him of the value thereof, & for an injunction to restrain them from getting any coals, & that pltf. might have liberty to view the workings. An interim order was obtained, & from time to time continued, whereupon a compromise was entered into between the solrs. of the parties, by which defts. were to pay to pltf. £400 for the full value of the coals to be raised from the mine, with costs of suit to be taxed in Michaelmas Term then next, as between solr. & client, & if reasonable security were given to the satisfaction of pltf., six months time from the date thereof for payment of the £400 was to be given. First a petition to which an objection was taken & allowed, & then a claim, was filed for the purpose of enforcing the agreement for a compromise:—Held: as the statement in the bill that pltf. was tenant for life was clearly a clerical error, & could not, as pltf.'s title was stated on the bill, have misled defts., the ct. was not precluded from decreeing specific performance on the ground that the agreement for a compromise was entered into by mistake or under an erroneous impression.—

An undivided moiety of a property was sold by auction, the rent of which was described as £16; but that was the rental of the whole & not of a moiety. The purchaser might have discovered this from the rest of the particulars; but having sworn that he had purchased, under a mistake that £16 was the rental of a moiety, the ct. refused to decree a specific performance against him.—*SWAISLAND v. 512. ———. ———.]—On a sale of a small residential property the plan exhibited showed the western side as bounded by a strip of ground covered with a mass of shrubs or trees. An intending purchaser went with the plan in his hand, inspected the property, found on the western side a belt of shrubs bounded on the west by an iron fence, & including three magnificent trees. He then bid for the property, believing that he was buying everything up to the fence. He afterwards discovered that the three trees & the iron fence stood on the glebe land which adjoined this property, the real boundary being denoted by stumps, which were so shrouded by the shrubs as not easily to be seen. The plan represented in a conspicuous way all the detached trees standing on the property, none of which were nearly so large as the trees in question, but did not show these trees. It was admitted that the existence of these trees was a material element in the value of the property as a residence:—Held: (1) the purchaser inspecting the property with the plan in his hand would naturally conclude the iron fence to be the boundary; there was nothing to put him on inquiry whether it was not; he had been misled by the fault of the vendors; & specific performance could not be decreed against him.

Deft. at the sale became the purchaser, both parties being under the impression that the freeholder could alone release the covenant. The abstract delivered to the purchaser showed that pltf. held under an underlease by demise, a reversion of one day being vested in A. & B., whose consent to a release of the covenant was necessary, which fact was overlooked by the purchaser, he taking an underlease at an increased rent, in which the covenant was omitted, & he paid his purchase-money partly by a cheque & entered into possession. The day after the mistake as to the parties to release the covenant was discovered, & deft. stopped payment of the cheque. sale under the description of "All that inn with the brewhouse, outbuildings, & premises known as The Ship, together with the saddler's shop & premises adjoining thereto, situate at N., Nos. 454 & 455 on the tithe map, & containing by admeasurement twenty perches more or less." In the saleroom were plans of the property, which consisted of the closes numbered 454 & 455 on the tithe map. At the back of the property were two pieces of garden ground, containing together about twenty perches, not belonging to the vendors, one of which had for many years been occupied with the inn, & the other with the saddler's shop, & which were hardly at all fenced off from the premises with which they were occupied. Deft. who was acquainted with the property & knew that the gardens were occupied along with the inn & saddler's shop, did not look at the plans, & bought in the belief that he was buying the whole of the property in the occupation of the tenants:—Held: the purchaser could not resist specific performance on the ground of mistake.

It is doubtless well established that a Ct. of Equity will refuse specific performance of an agreement when deft. has entered into it under a mistake, & where injustice would be done to him were performance to be enforced. The most common instances of such refusal on the ground of mistake are cases in which there has been some unintentional misrepresentation on the part of pltf., & I am not now referring to cases of intentional misrepresentation which would fall rather under the category of fraud, or where from the ambiguity of the agreement different meanings have been given to it by the different parties (BAGGALLAY, L.J.):—*TAMPLIN v. 532. Mistake as to lot put up for sale.—Where an estate is purchased at an auction under a mistake as to the lot put up for sale, the ct. will not decree specific performance against the purchaser, but leave the vendor, if he has sustained any damage by the mistake of the purchaser, to his remedy at law. A bill for specific performance was accordingly, under such circumstances, dismissed without costs.—MALINS v. FREEMAN (1837), 2 Keen, 25; 6 L. J. Ch. 133; 1 Jur. 19; 48 E. R. 537.

533. Mistake of agent—Alteration of conditions of sale—Contract signed by auctioneer on copy not containing alterations—Revocation of authority.—MANSER v. BACK, No. 491, ante.

534. Wrong property offered for sale—Mistake of vendor's agent.—If property not intended to be sold be, by the ignorance or neglect of vendor's agent, included in a contract for sale with other property intended to be sold, a case may arise in which the ct. will refuse to compel a specific performance of the whole contract; & if in such case the purchaser should decline to take so much as was intended to be sold, the course which the ct. might adopt would probably be to abstain from interfering, leaving the purchaser to his remedy at law; but it certainly would not rescind the contract. This course, however, cannot be followed in reference to sales under orders of the ct. in which the ct. must decide whether the sale is to be carried into effect or the property resold; but in these cases it is expedient, as far as possible, to adopt the rules which regulate the practice as between ordinary vendors & purchasers. Thus, in the case of a sale under the order of the ct., it being clear that a certain portion of the property was not intended by the vendor to be included in the contract of sale, the ct., in the absence of any proof of misconduct in the purchaser or his agent, refused to compel a specific performance by the purchaser excluding the portion in question. The purchaser, however, electing to take exclusive of the portion of property in dispute, the ct. ordered accordingly, & without compensation.—ALVANLEY v. KINNAIRD (1849), 2 Mac. & G. 1; 16 L. T. 536. Mistake as to extent of property sold—Mistake based on report of surveyor.—After a sale by auction of a messuage & lands, one of the conditions of which was that any mistake or error in the description of the property, or any other error in the particulars, should not annul the sale, but, except where otherwise provided for by the conditions, a compensation should be given or taken, to be settled by two referees or an umpire, it was found that one of the lots contained about 20 more, & another about 10 acres less, than the quantity of land described in the particulars:—Held: whether a vendor could or could not in equity be relieved on the ground of mistake from a contract for the sale of lands inaccurately described as to quantity, & which description has been prepared by his solr. from former particulars & conditions relating to the same property, drawn up by another solr. on the report of a surveyor, equity would not in such circumstances enforce the contract against vendor, unless the case should be one for compensation, & purchaser should submit to make such compensation.—LESLIE v. TOMPSON (1851), 9 Hare, 268; 20 L. 539. Defendant misled by private information.—Where a person bidding at a sale has private information as to the property sold, which misleads him, he may be entitled to adduce his mistake as a defence to a suit for specific performance; but he cannot bring it forward as a ground on which to maintain such a suit.

A purchaser, who was well acquainted with the property that he was buying at a sale, filed a bill against the vendors to compel them to assign him certain leaseholds, which he said he thought they intended to sell, together with some freeholds which he had bought at the same time. He adduced evidence to show what he considered to be the intention of vendors, & endeavoured to import his knowledge of that intention into the contract for sale:—Held: the bill must be dismissed; & pltf. was ordered, under the circumstances, to pay defts. their costs.—FAIRHEAD v. SOUTHEE (1863), 8 L. T. 818; 9 Jur. N. S. 764; 11 W. R. 739.

540. Mistaken belief that building not subject to restriction.—A. entered into a contract to purchase from B. a house with a forecourt, situate in Queen's Road, Bayswater, in the belief that he could build upon the whole of the property. He afterwards ascertained that by the Metropolis Management Act, 1862 (c. 102), no building can be erected, or alteration made in any existing building, without the consent of the Metropolitan Board of Works, & that the Board had given a consent to the erection of a building on the forecourt, which was not to be of a greater height than 10 feet, & he thereupon repudiated the contract, the premises being useless for the purpose for which he required them.

On a bill for specific performance of the contract against A.:—Held: the ct. would not enforce specific performance, the contract having been entered into by A. in the belief that he could build over the whole property without restriction as to height.—BRAY v. BRIGGS (1872), 26 L. T. 817; 20 W. R. 962.

541. Mistake as to value—Recent valuation at higher figure forgotten.—Deft. offered freehold land to pltf. at a price based upon a valuation made in 1895, forgetting the existence of a recent valuation at a much higher figure. Pltf. accepted the offer in terms which were not identical in every respect, but sufficient to constitute an open contract:—Held: the ct., in the exercise of its discretion, would not enforce the contract.—*HODSON v. 548. Defect must be material.—A contract was entered into for the sale of a house & lands adjoining described as a "residential property," but which in fact possessed advantages for the formation of building sites. The contract stated that the property was sold subject to all drainage, sewer, & other easements, if any, affecting same, & clause 11, that if any error or misstatement in the particulars or contract should be disclosed, same should not annul the sale, nor should any compensation be claimed or made in respect thereof by either party. Neither the particulars nor contract, nor the plan annexed, disclosed or indicated the existence of a natural underground watercourse which ran through the grounds & the lands of adjoining owners in a culvert or piping constructed by the owners of the several lands. The vendors knowing of the existence of the watercourse, did not disclose it to the purchaser, & the purchaser's agents, when inspecting the property prior to the contract, did not see the piping, although it was then exposed to view in a hole in the lawn of the house. The purchaser bought the property primarily as a residence, but with a view in certain events to using it for building purposes. In an action by the vendors for specific performance they waived clause 11 of the contract:—Held: the watercourse was not a sewer or drain vested in the local authority, nor an easement affecting the property, nor a defect in title, but that it was a latent defect in the property, although not of such materiality as would prevent the purchaser from getting substantially what she had contracted for if the contract was specifically enforced against her; & the vendors were entitled to specific performance subject to their paying compensation to the purchaser for the defect by reason of the existence of the watercourse.—SHEPHERD v. CROFT, [1911] 1 Ch. 521; 80 L. J. Ch. 170; 103 L. T. 874.

If so exercised it will be a bar to any relief by way of specific performance subsequently sought by the vendor, even though the defect has been removed before trial. If, however, after ascertaining the existence of the defect, the purchaser still treats the contract as subsisting, he does not retain the right to repudiate at any subsequent moment he may choose, but must give the vendor a reasonable time in which to cure the defect.—BAI DOSIBAI v. BAI DHANBAI (1924), 1 L. R. 49 Bom. 325.—IND.

private right of way or of a mere accommodation track for the use of persons entitled to the land & there is, in fact, a public right of way along the track, it does not constitute a patent defect so that a decree for specific performance can be obtained against a purchaser of the land under an open contract.

It is not enough that there exists on the land an object of sense that might put a careful purchaser on inquiry. As the result of evidence it appeared that the house was subject to an easement belonging to the owner of a neighbouring tenement to use the kitchen for particular purposes & that the vendor's solr. knew of the rumoured existence of some such easement but forbore to make inquiries. No grant of an easement appeared from the abstract & its existence was, in fact, disputed on the pleadings. In the auction room pltf.'s solr. said he had heard of some such claim but had no definite information about it & the auctioneer in hearing of pltf.'s solr. on being questioned told the audience that they might dismiss the subject of the rumoured claims from their minds as nobody would probably ever hear of them again:—Held: the conditions were misleading & the statements in the auction room insufficient & specific performance of the contract refused.—*HEYWOOD v. The owners made a similar agreement with B. as to the minerals under the land to the east of the fault, supposed to contain 98 acres or thereabouts. The fault was afterwards found to run so as to leave on the west 8 acres only:—Held: on a bill filed by B. to restrain A. from working coal to the east of the fault, the ct. would not in a suit by B. for specific performance against the owners have decreed a demise of all the minerals to the east of the fault, & he could not be deemed in constructive possession so as to maintain his suit against A.—*DAVIS v. agreement must show that he is willing & able to carry it out in all its material parts so far as he is concerned, & also that no act of his own in relation to the agreement has in any material degree damaged his opponent. He cannot select one part of the agreement for breach & another for performance. He must be prepared to carry out the entire of his own part of the contract before he can call upon his adversary, through the instrumentality of the ct., to specifically execute the latter's part of the agreement.—VISHVANATH ATMA- dent to the performance of the contract by the co.—DOUGLAS v. SIDMOUTH RAILWAY & HARBOUR Co. (1868), 13 L. T. 788; 14 W. R. 361.

570. Effect of defendant's knowledge of reasons preventing performance.]—In an agreement for the purchase of an estate, one of the stipulations was, that the vendor should be tenant from year to year to the purchaser:—Held: the liability of the vendor to perform this stipulation by reason of embarrassments of which the purchaser must have some notice, was no bar to the specific performance of the contract.—LORD v. STEPHENS (1835), 1 Y. & C. Ex. 222; 160 E. R. 90.

571. Right of purchaser to refuse completion—Until restrictive covenants made applicable to vendor as well as purchaser.]—The particulars & conditions of sale of property, put up for sale in lots at an auction, contained certain conditions as to the manner in which the lots were to be fenced, & as to the maintenance, etc., of roads, & also provided that the purchasers of several lots specified should be restricted as to the character of houses to be erected, & that only houses of a certain class should be built on such lots; that a statement to this effect should be inserted in the conveyance to purchasers, & that the vendor reserved to himself the right of selling unsold lots either subject to or not subject to the stipulations "as to fencing or otherwise," contained in the particulars & conditions. At the auction defts. became the purchasers of two of the specified lots; others of such lots remained unsold:—Held: pltf., the vendor, was not bound, as to the lots remaining unsold, by the restrictions as to building contained in the conditions of sale, & he was entitled to have disclosed on the conveyance to defts. the fact that they were bound, & he was not bound by such restrictions.—SIDNEY v. CLARKSON (1865), 35 Beav. 118; 14 W. R. 157; 55 E. R. 839; sub nom. SYDNEY v. CLARKSON, 13 L. T. 659.

Annotation:—Refd. Re Birmingham & District Land Co. & Allday, [1893] 1 Ch. 312.

572. — Insertion of restriction in habendum.]—On a sale by auction by trustees one of the conditions was that the property was sold, & would "be conveyed," subject to all rents & rights of way, if any, & to all liabilities & existing tenancies, & to all rights & claims, if any, of the tenants. The vendors declined to complete unless the condition was substantially set out at length in the habendum in the conveyance, to which the purchaser objected. On an action for specific performance, by the vendors:—Held: the proviso, that the property "would be conveyed" subject to such rights, entitled the vendors to have the reservation on the face of the conveyance; & specific performance was accordingly decreed on that footing.—GALE v. SQUIER (1876), 4 Ch. D. 226; 46 L. J. Ch. 373; 25 W. R. 226; affd. (1877), 5 Ch. D. 625; 46 L. J. Ch. 672; 36 L. T. 632, C. A.

573. Whether partial performance sufficient—Where part of agreement is separable.]—Where the conditions of an agreement between landlord & builder, whereby the landlord agrees to grant leases of successive plots of land as the houses upon each of them are built to a certain stage, are by the terms of the contract separable, there is no rule of equity to prevent them from being separately enforced by way of specific performance. Therefore, where the assignee of the builder's interest had completed the houses upon some only of the plots agreed to be built upon, upon bill for specific performance:—Held: he was entitled to the leases of those plots, even though disclaiming all interest in the remaining plots.—WILKINSON v. CLEMENTS (1872), 8 Ch. App. 96; 42 L. J. Ch. 38; 27 L. T. 834; 36 J. P. 789; 21 W. R. 90, L. J.

574. Effect of independence of covenants.]—A deed, which purported to assign some shares in a foreign trading co., contained covenants by the assignor for further assurance of the shares, & by the assignee for the indemnity of the assignor against certain partnership liabilities. It was subsequently found that the transfer of the shares could not be completed without a further act of the assignor. To a suit of the assignee for specific performance of the covenant for further assurance, the assignor alleged, in defence, that pltf. had failed to indemnify him against some of the partnership liabilities:—Held: the covenants were independent, & the breach of one was no bar to the specific performance of the other.—GIBSON v. GOLDSMID (1854), 5 De G. M. & G. 757; 3 Eq. Rep. 106; 24 L. J. Ch. 279; 24 L. T. O. S. 176; 1 Jur. N. S. 1; 3 W. R. 79; 43 E. R. 1064, L. J.

578. — What constitutes performance of duty.—By the conditions of sale of the property of a co. in the course of being wound up it was stipulated that the purchaser should accept a conveyance from the official manager under the powers of Winding-up Acts, 1848 & 1849, or one of them, without requiring the concurrence of any of the shareholders or any other person; but that, if the purchaser should consider the legal estate outstanding & should require a conveyance thereof, he should bear the expenses of obtaining such conveyance or conveyances as he might require & all other expenses incident to getting in such legal estate:—Held: on the general scope of the conditions, the purchaser was to be at the risk of getting in the legal estate, & the vendor was entitled to a specific performance on executing a conveyance of the equitable interest & undertaking, at the expense of the purchaser, to obtain all such conveyances & render all such assistance to the getting in of the legal estate as the purchaser should require & as the vendor was able to obtain or give.—SHEERNESS WATERWORKS CO. v. POLSON (1861), 3 De G. F. & J. 36; 4 L. T. 568; 45 E. R. 791, L. C.

579. — Sale of land & timber—Contracts separate.—On [an entire] contract for the sale of lands, described as partly freehold & partly copyhold, & the timber thereupon, the latter at a specified valuation, upon a condition that the vendor should not be required to distinguish the freehold land from the copyhold, nor the respective boundaries thereof, it was held that, upon the particulars & conditions, the contract for the land & timber was one contract, & not separate contracts; & that the purchaser was bound to pay for the timber at the valuation, notwithstanding the fact that it might be wholly upon the copyhold land, & therefore subject to the rights of the lord, & the restrictions of the custom.

Where, upon a contract for the sale of an estate, a separate & distinct contract is made for the sale of the timber upon it, the ct. will not enforce the latter contract unless the vendor can give the purchaser such possession & dominion over the timber as will entitle him to fell & remove it; but, if an entire contract be made for the sale, both of the estate & the timber, notwithstanding the purchase-money is made up of distinct sums for each, the vendor is only bound to make out his title to the land according to the contract; & the title to the land is the title to the timber upon it.—CROSSE v. LAWRENCE (1852), 9 Hare, 462; 21 L. J. Ch. 889; 18 L. T. O. S. 314; 16 Jur. 142; 68 E. R. 591.

582 i. Whether doubtful title forced on purchaser.—Before the ct. will compel a purchaser to accept a title, it must be shown to be reasonably clear & marketable, without doubt as to the evidence

r. — Vendor ignorant of defect at time of agreement—Defect cured within reasonable time.—A vendor is entitled to specific performance of an agree-performance, the opinion of the ct. was in favour of the title, the question on which turned on the construction of a particular will; but the ct., being unable to found that opinion upon any general rule of law, or upon reasoning so conclusive as to satisfy the ct. that other competent persons might not entertain a different opinion, or that the purchaser taking the title might not be exposed to substantial & not merely idle litigation, refused to decree a specific performance.

A doubtful title, which a purchaser will not be compelled to accept, is not only a title upon which the ct. entertains doubts, but includes also a title which, although the ct. has a favourable opinion of it, yet may reasonably & fairly be questioned in the opinion of other competent persons; for the ct. has no means of binding the question as against adverse claimants, or of indemnifying the purchaser, if its own opinion in favour of the title should turn out not to be well founded.

If the doubts as to a title arise upon a question connected with the general law, the ct. is to judge whether the general law on the point is or is not settled; & if it be not, or if the doubts as to the title may be affected by extrinsic circumstances, which neither the purchaser nor the ct. can satisfactorily investigate, specific performance will be refused.—PYRKE v. WADDINGHAM (1852), 10 Hare, 1; 68 E. R. 813.

G. assigned the reversionary sum to one of plffs.' predecessors in title, the assignment being expressed to be subject to the rights, if any, of E., P., & X. On Jan. 14, 1879, E., under the power of sale in his mtge., sold the reversionary interest to plffs. On Jan. 20, 1879, an order gave plffs. the benefit of E.'s stop order. On Apr. 16, 1879, P., under the power of sale in his mtge., sold the reversionary interest to plffs. On June 25, 1879, J. G. obtained his discharge from the Bkpcy. Ct. A purchaser, upon investigation of the title, discovered that there was good reason to contend that a prior owner had elected to take the estate as realty, in which case the fee belonged to the heir of the insolvent's late wife, the insolvent himself being only tenant by the curtesy. The purchaser, after some correspondence, in which he required the concurrence of the heir, abruptly gave notice to determine the contract, & immediately afterwards bought up the title of the heir:—Held: he could not avail himself of this purchase to defeat his contract, but he had thereby removed the objections to the title, & specific performance was decreed against him, allowing him the expenses of his purchase from the heir.

Semble: a vendor who bonâ fide puts up a property for sale, believing himself absolute owner, when he has in fact only a partial interest, is entitled to enforce the contract if he can perfect the title.

If a purchaser is entitled at all to insist that the vendor's having only a partial interest makes the contract void, he must insist upon the objection at once, & cannot avail himself of it after having treated the contract as good & required the concurrence of the persons who can complete the title.—MURRELL v. GOODYEAR (1860), 1 De G. 606. —.]—On Mar. 28, 1894, pltf. & deft. signed a memorandum of agreement, by which deft. was to take an underlease of a house on certain terms. The date from which the underlease was to commence was omitted in this agreement, but it was understood by the parties, at the time, that it was to be Apr. 7, 1894. This date was specifically agreed to in writing by subsequent letters. By the lease under which pltf. held, there was a covenant that the lessee would not assign or underlet without the licence in writing of the lessor, but the licence was not to be withheld in the case of the lessee obtaining a respectable & responsible person as tenant. Deft. was a respectable & responsible tenant, but the lessor declined to consent to the underlease, unless a certain undertaking was given by deft. This refusal to consent was also pleaded as a defence to an action by pltf. for specific performance of the agreement:—Held: deft. would get a good title & run no substantial risk of having it impeached on the ground of any breach of covenant by the granting of the underlease. He was therefore ordered to specifically perform the contract.

I am satisfied that deft. here will get a good title. . . . If I thought that there was any substantial chance of his having to run the risk of a lawsuit, or it was a doubtful question, I should not enforce specific performance against him (ROMER, J.).—WHITE v. HAY (1895), 72 L. T. 281.

It did not appear that a fine was ever levied. On a bill filed by a vendor claiming under F. against a purchaser for specific performance, the purchaser objected to the title on the ground of the want of a fine & the defectiveness of the proceedings in chancery:—Held: the objection was not one of title but of conveyance inasmuch as the order in chancery notwithstanding its informality, was binding on the married woman, & rendered her a trustee for the purchaser, & she was therefore compellable to complete the legal title.—JUMPSON v. The description of Lot 1 in the particulars was: "The property comprises 1 acre, 2 roods, 8 poles, situate, etc., consisting of a cottage & paddock in the occupation of Mr. P." By the contract of sale, the title & conveyance were to be completed according to the conditions of sale. One of these was "The property comprised in the particulars is presumed to be correctly described & the quantity of the land shall be taken as stated whether more or less, although the title deeds state such quantity to be less, without any compensation on either side & no other evidence of identity shall be required than that furnished by the title deeds, & the statements therein shall be deemed conclusive evidence of the identity of the property." The will also gave the trustee a power of sale. All the existing children having attained twenty-one, the widow & the brother still living, the trustee appointed in their favour. Thirteen years after testator's death he sold the premises by auction. The purchaser required the concurrence of the appointees, as beneficiaries & necessary parties to the sale. On a suit for specific performance:—Held: their concurrence was not necessary, & the ct. enforced the contract.—GREETHAM v. COLTON (1865), 34 Beav. 615; 6 New Rep. 311; 13 L. T. 34; 11 Jur. N. 637. — Purchaser with constructive notice.]—A purchaser, on contracting to purchase a leasehold interest near London at rack rent did not ask to see & was not shown the lease. On investigating the title it appeared that the lease contained a covenant not to assign without the lessor's licence. The vendor sought specific performance:—Held: such a covenant, though not a usual covenant is so common & ordinary in & near London & its existence was no answer to such a claim.—STRANGWAYS v. BISHOP (1857), 29 L. T. O. S. 120.

638. Undisclosed easements.]—The owner of land situated on an acclivity, conveyed by a deed of 1816 a portion of lower land, with liberty to enter on upper lands, & fetch water from a spring & to cut open, cleanse & cover in such gutters & drains as might be necessary for the purpose of conducting the spring to the conveyed land; & also with liberty to pass & repass for ingress & egress on the upper land around or adjoining the conveyed land, & to put any ladders against the cottages then intended to be built upon the conveyed land. By another deed of 1820 other part of the lower land was conveyed, with liberty to take water from specified springs in the higher land, & to make such reservoirs in a particular field, part thereof, as might be necessary for taking up water for family use & other necessary purposes, & with liberty to pass for ingress & egress in the upper land surrounding or adjoining the conveyed land. By other deeds of 1824 other portions of the lower land were released, with all watercourses, particularly as same ran to an inn on the conveyed land from the upper land. By other deeds of 1825 further portions of the lower land were released, with liberty to fetch water for family & domestic uses at a well on the higher land.

By other deeds of 1834 other part of the lower land was released with liberty to the releasee to make a covered goit, or watercourse across the bottom part of a field, part of the upper land, & to open & repair the same when necessary. Several years afterwards the upper land was sold, according to a particular describing it as fit for building, & subject to conditions of sale, providing that if any mistake were made in the description of the premises or if any other error should appear in the particulars such error or omission should not annul the sale, but compensation should be given or taken. The existence of the easements was not stated in the particulars or conditions:—Held: (1) the existence of the easements granted by any one of the deeds of 1816, 1820 & 1834 alone constituted a material defect in the title to the upper land; (2) the existence of the easements granted by the deeds of 1825 & 1825 would have been alone sufficient to render the title subject to such serious doubt that a purchaser could not be compelled to accept it; (3) under the circumstances, & inasmuch as the whole purchased land did not exceed 30 acres, the purchaser could not be compelled to take the title, with compensation as to the lands prejudicially affected, which admeasured about four acres & a half.—SHACKLETON v. SUTCLIFFE (1847), 1 De G. & Sm. 609; 10 L. T. O. S. 411; 12 Jur. 199; 63 E. R. 1217.

639. —.—Trustees put up for sale by auction two adjoining freehold properties. Lot 2 was a hotel standing in its own grounds & approached from the main road by a carriage drive. Lot 3 was a house the only access to which from the road was by a carriage sweep opening into the carriage drive of lot 2. Both properties were leased, & the lease of lot 2 reserved to the lessors a right of way over the carriage drive to get access to lot 3. By an error the particulars of sale of both lots 2 & 3 made no mention of the right of way, but on the sale plan, which formed no part of the contract, it was apparent that the only access to lot 3 was over the carriage drive. By the conditions of sale the properties were sold subject to all rights of way & other easements "whether or not the same shall be mentioned . . . in or upon the particulars . . . or the sale plan, if any . . . but if there shall be found to be any such . . . easement . . . not disclosed or partially or inaccurately disclosed in the particulars . . . or the sale plan, if any, such non-disclosure or partial or inaccurate disclosure shall be deemed to be an omission or error within the meaning of the 15th clause." By condition 15, "if any error misstatement or omission shall be discovered in the particulars of sale plan, if any, . . . the same shall not annul the sale, nor shall any abatement or compensation be allowed or paid by the vendor or purchaser." The lease of lot 2 was produced to G., the purchaser, before the auction & was perused by his solr. G. was almost blind; but the particulars were read to him, & he bought lot 2 with the intention of building over the carriage drive. The abstract included in the lease of lot 2, with a plan showing the carriage sweep to lot 3, but G.'s solr. made no requisition about it, & sent a draft conveyance of the property unincumbered in which the vendor's solr. inserted a reservation of the right of way to lot 3. G. refused to accept this addition. The vendors brought an action for specific performance with the reservation, or, alternatively, rescission & retention of the deposit. G. counterclaimed for rescission & return of the deposit:—Held: the vendors were not entitled to specific performance with a reservation of the right of way; there was not, in the circumstances, any patent defect on the title; the condition as to errors only applied to errors which were not known to the vendors; that the purchaser was not bound to make a requisition as to the right of way, when the abstract showed a title to an unincumbered freehold; & the purchaser was entitled to rescission & return of the deposit.—SIMPSON v. GILLEY (1922), 92 L. J. Ch. 194; 128 L. T. 622.

640. Inaccurate document.—A. being entitled under his marriage settlement, to a life interest in certain freehold estates, with remainder to the use of trustees for a term of a thousand years, to secure a jointure & portions, with remainder to himself in fee, conveyed part of the lands to B. in fee, in exchange for other lands. B.'s heir afterwards having contracted for the sale of the land, the purchaser refused to complete the contract, on the ground that A. had no power to exchange the lands in fee. The vendor then procured the execution of certain deeds, with a view of bringing the exchange within the terms of a power of sale & exchange, given to the trustees under the settlement:—Held: under these circumstances, & likewise on the ground that the after executed deeds were grossly inaccurate, the purchaser was not bound specifically to perform the agreement.—*COWGILL v. In the body of the act there was a proviso that the manor of W. should not be sold. The trustees having contracted to sell the Mountain Farm:—Held: the purchaser was not bound to accept the title.—LINCOLN

644. Question turning on general rule of construction.—Testator gave his estates to trustees upon trust to pay the rents to his two daughters, both then unmarried, in equal shares during their respective lives "independently of the control of any husband or husbands with whom they or either of them might happen to intermarry"; & after their respective decease, upon trust to convey the estates "unto & equally between the respective husbands of them, my daughters, to hold them respectively, & their respective heirs & assigns"; with a proviso, that if either of his daughters should "depart this life unmarried," her share should go to the survivor for her life, & on her decease the whole should be conveyed to the husband of the surviving daughter. Both daughters married. One died in the lifetime of her husband. Then the husband of the other died, having devised his interest in the estate to his wife absolutely:—Held: the surviving daughter could make a good title to a moiety of the estate; for a gift to an unmarried woman for life, with remainder in fee to her husband, gives an indefeasibly vested remainder in fee to her first husband; as the question turned on a general rule of construction, unaffected by any special context in the will, the title would be forced on a purchaser.—*RADFORD v. devised estates to go over to the person next in succession as if the person refusing or neglecting to reside or live at Juts was actually dead. In a suit by parties making title under a recovery suffered by A. & his eldest son against a purchaser for specific performance:—Held: it was too uncertain what testator meant by the words live & reside for the ct. to determine that there had been a forfeiture & a specific performance decreed.—*FILLINGHAM v. 646. Devise for payment of debts—One estate to be sold if other estate not sufficient—Necessity for proof that debts not paid.]—Testator devises lands in trust for the payment of his debts generally, & desires that his estate at A. shall be sold first, & if the produce of that estate be insufficient, then his estate at B. A. purchaser will not be compelled to accept the title to B., unless the ct. is satisfied beyond suspicion that the debts have not been paid.—PIERCE v. SCOTT (1835), 1 Y. & C. Ex. 257; 4 L. J. Ex. Eq. 36; 160 E. R. 105.

647. — Implied power of sale to executor.]—A general charge of debts on the real estate gives to the exors. an implied power of sale.

Testator ordered his debts & legacies "to be paid & discharged out of his real & personal estate." He subsequently devised his real estates to trustees for five hundred years, & subject thereto, to his five sons as tenants in common in fee "upon condition" that they should pay, in equal shares, certain legacies & his debts; & in case any son should neglect to pay his portion, the trustees of the term were, out of the rents of his share, to raise the amount. He appointed the five sons exors. Thirty-three years after the death of testator, the surviving exors. sold the estate, as they alleged, to pay the debts. The ct. held, that they had power to sell, & decreed a specific performance against the purchaser.—WRIGLEY v. SYKES (1856), 21 Beav. 337; 25 L. J. Ch. 458; 26 L. T. O. S. 252; 2 Jur. N. S. 78; 4 W. 649. — Revocation of appointment of one trustee—Appointment of new trustee—Sale by trustees of after-acquired lands.]—Testator, by his will, made a general devise of his lands to A. & B., as trustees, upon certain trusts for sale, for the benefit of his family; he then purchased other lands, & afterwards made a codicil to his will, whereby, after reciting the devise of his lands by his will to A. & B., & that he was desirous of revoking the appointment of B. as trustee of his will, he revoked & made void the appointment, devise, & gift, in the will contained, so far as regarded B., & appointed C. to be a trustee, to act in conjunction with A. in the place of B.:—Held: (1) a purchaser from A. & C., of the after-acquired lands, could not be compelled to accept the title, on a bill being filed by A. & C. against him, unless the heir-at-law would concur with them in the conveyance; (2) in a doubtful case of title, where the doubt is only removed at the hearing by an act of plffs. that plffs. must pay deft.'s costs.—ASHLEY v. WAUGH (1839), 9 L. J. Ch. 31; 4 Jur. 572, L. C.

Devise to trustees for sale—Sale by devisees of surviving trustee.]—(1) Devise to trustees & the survivor of them, & the heirs & assigns of such survivor, upon trust to sell, the surviving trustee having devised the trust estate to persons who sold & who filed a bill to enforce specific performance of the contract to sell:—Held: there was sufficient doubt upon the point to prevent the ct. from forcing the title upon the purchaser.

(2) Vendors who by the contract bound themselves to make out a good title to all the lands included in the contract, but were unable to show a title to one three hundred & thirtieth part, not necessary to the enjoyment of the other parts included in the contract, which provided for compensation for errors in dimensions in the land, the bill averring that they could make title to all the lands sold, seeking specific performance as to all:—Held: it was not competent to the vendors at the hearing to seek specific performance with compensation.—*ASHTON v. Power of sale to surviving executor.]—Testator, after directing all his just debts to be paid, devised a freehold messuage to his wife "for her natural life, with liberty to sell it in case a good offer is made, & invest the proceeds of it in the 5 per cent. stock, for her benefit during her life." In a subsequent part of the will testator said, "I desire that at the death of my wife, the residue of my estate may then be collected, including the proceeds of the house & lot, if not previously sold, to be then disposed of to good advantage, to be divided as follows," etc. He appointed his wife & others to be extrix. & exors. After the death of the widow, the surviving exor. contracted to sell the messuage. A bill being filed for specific performance:—Held: the surviving exor. had, under the will, a power of sale.—FORBES v. PEACOCK (1840), 11 Sim. 152; 9 L. J. Ch. 367; 59 E. R. 832.

652. Power of sale to heir of surviving trustee—Sale by devisee of surviving trustee.]—Testator devised his real estates to A., B., & C., in trust that they, or the survivors or survivor of them, or the heirs of the survivor, should, as soon as conveniently might be after his decease, but at their discretion, sell the same; & he empowered them & their heirs to make contracts with & conveyances to the purchasers; & declared that the receipts of them or the survivors or survivor of them, or the heirs, exors. or administrators of such survivor, should be good discharges to the purchasers; & he directed that they, their heirs, administrators, & assigns, should hold the proceeds of the sale upon certain trusts. A. & B. disclaimed, & C. alone acted. He devised the estates to M. & N. upon the trusts affecting the same. After his death, M. & N. agreed to sell the estates to P.:—Held: M. & N. were not entitled to execute the trust for sale, as they were the devisees & not the heirs of C.—*COOKE v. The survivor of the three trustees devised all estates vested in him as trustee to two trustees, whom he also appointed his exors., of whom one was his customary heir; the two contracted to sell, & the purchaser declined to complete. Testator by his will, dated in 1845, devised & bequeathed his real & personal estate to his wife for life, subject to the payment of his debts, & from & after her decease to A. & B., "their heirs, exors., & administrators, upon trust to sell & dispose thereof at such times & in such manner as they may said trustees shall deem expedient." A. & B. both predeceased the tenant for life, B., the surviving trustee, having devised his trust estates. & assigns for ever, upon trust to receive the rents & profits till C., his daughter came of age, with a provision for her maintenance, & to account for & pay the surplus rents upon her coming of age; from that period "as to his estates" to the use of the trustees, their heirs, & assigns, upon trust during the life of C. to preserve contingent remainders, C. & her assigns to receive the rents nevertheless during her life; after her death then to the use of all & every the children of C., share & share alike, as tenants in common; in case C. should die under twenty-one & without issue, then the trustees were to account with & pay the balance of the trust account unto & to the use of such person as should be the will be next in remainder, & entitled to the "aforesaid estates & hereditaments" after the death of C.; in case C. should die before she attained twenty-one, or surviving should die without lawful issue, then as to the aforesaid estates to the use of F. in tail male with remainders over in default of such issue. C. attained twenty-one, married, & had six children. E., one of the children, contracted to sell her undivided sixth share in the devised estates expectant upon the death of C. 657. Will relating to personal property—Land acquired after execution of will—Intention of testator to dispose of all property.]—Testator commenced his will, by stating that he disposed of all his worldly estate & effects, & he directed his debts to be paid out of his personal estate, & also directed his exors. to make sale of all his stocks, shares, & securities, & such other part of his personal estate as was in its nature saleable, & to collect all sums due, & all other his estate, & convert same into money. After the date of his will testator acquired some freehold property, which, on his death, his widow, being sole extrix., put up for sale with the concurrence of mtgees., but the purchaser objected that she could not make a title. In a suit for specific performance against the purchaser:—Held: the widow had a clear power to sell the real estate, & the title was forced upon him in the absence of the heir.—HAMILTON v. BUCKMASTER (1866), L. R. 3 Eq. 323; 36 L. J. Ch. 58; 15 L. T. 177; 12 Jur. N. S. 986; 15 W. R. 149.

658. Trustee with power to appoint new trustees—Tenant for life appointed as one trustee—Sale by tenant for life as trustee.]—Testator devised his real estate to trustees in trust for his wife for life, with remainder to F. for life, with remainders over, & with a power of sale, at the discretion of the trustees or trustee for the time being, & with the usual power for the surviving or acting trustee or trustees, with the consent of the tenant for life, to appoint new trustees. The sole acting trustee appointed testator's widow & F. new trustees jointly with himself. F. being sole surviving trustee contracted for the sale of part of the property:—Held: the power to appoint new trustees had been well exercised, there being nothing in the will to prevent the appointment of a tenant for life as trustee; & F. could make a good title to the property, which the ct. could enforce upon a purchaser.—FORSTER v. ABRAHAM (1874), L. R. 17 Eq. 351; 43 L. J. Ch. 199; 22 W. R. 386.

Sect. 10.—Non-performance of conditions and essential terms: Sub-sect. 2, A. (g) ii., (h), (j) & (k).]

659. Devise of copyholds—To pay or permit beneficiary to receive rents.—Testator devised freehold & copyhold estates to trustees, their heirs, exors., administrators & assigns, upon trust during the natural life of his son A. to receive the rents & profits thereof, & to pay same to A. & his assigns during his life, or permit him to receive the same. After the decease of A., testator devised same to the sole use & behoof of the heirs of his body lawfully begotten. Testator appointed the trustees & another, exors., & declared that the receipts of his trustees & exors. should be good discharges. On demurrer to a bill for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of freeholds & copyholds:—Held: there was a legal estate in the trustees & their heirs during the life of A. in the copyholds, & demurrer allowed as to the copyholds.—BAKER v. WHITE (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 166; 44 L. J. Ch. 651; 53 L. T. 347; 23 W. R. 670.

660. Sale of leaseholds by executor—Purchaser with notice that no debts of testator outstanding.—Testator by his will appointed his wife sole trustee & extrix. thereof, & gave to her all his estate upon trust for sale or conversion for the benefit of herself during life or widowhood, & declared it to be his wish that, unless circumstances otherwise required it, his leasehold estates should not be converted during the life or widowhood of his wife, & at her death or marriage he bequeathed a leasehold house to his son. Eighteen years after the death of testator the widow entered into a contract for sale of the leasehold house. Her solrs. informed the purchaser that there were no debts of testator remaining unpaid. No reason for selling was suggested. The purchaser objected to the title, unless the concurrence of the son was obtained, but this was refused:—Held: under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the purchaser having actual notice that there were no debts of testator remaining unpaid, & no reason being suggested for the sale, the title was not one which ought to be forced on a purchaser.—Re VERRELL'S CONTRACT, [1903] 1 Ch. 65; 72 L. 661. Rectification before hearing.—Where the time, at which the contract was to be executed, is not material, & there is no unreasonable delay, the vendor, though not having a good title at the time the contract was to be executed, nor when the bill was filed, but being able to make a title at the hearing, is entitled to a specific performance.—*WYNN v. 666. —.— Not complete before bill filed.]—It being necessary, in order to make a title perfect, that a recovery should be suffered for the purpose of barring an old estate tail vested in a person who was not a trustee for the vendor, the deed making the tenant to the præcipe & the warrant for suffering the recovery were executed before the filing of the bill for specific performance, but the recovery was not completed till a few days afterwards:—Held: a good title was not shown before the commencement of the suit. A person, who purchases two lots is not justified in refusing to perform his contract for the purchase of the second lot, because a good title is not shown to the first lot.—LEWIN v. GUEST (1826), 1 Russ. 325; 38 E. R. 126.

667. Advantage arising on either side after contract—Effect of—Where title accepted.—Where a purchaser has actually accepted a title after contract of sale, if advantage arise on either side before the execution of the conveyance as by the lapse of a life in the mean time, a ct. of equity will enforce a specific performance without regarding which party may happen to be benefited or prejudiced by the accident of unforeseen events, but where the title had not been accepted, the ct. refuses to decree performance (MACDONALD, C.B.).—*WYVILL v. 669. Whether court will allow time for rectification.—In a suit for specific performance, where the vendor cannot make a good title, when the cause comes on to be heard on further directions, the ct. will not allow the cause to stand over, in order that he may be able to cure the defects in his title.—BOSWELL v. MENDHAM (1823), 1 L. J. O. S. Ch. 160.

670. Title acquired after conveyance.—J. S., under the belief that he had the fee simple in an estate subject to a life interest in his mother, conveyed all his interest to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. The conveyance contained covenants for title & for further assurance. It turned out that at the time of the conveyance the mother had the fee simple, which, upon her death descended to J. S. as her heir-at-law:—Held: although no estate passed by the conveyance, yet the transaction amounted to a contract for sale of the specific estate, & J. S., unless he could set aside the contract for fraud, was in equity compellable to carry it into execution.—SMITH v. BAKER (1842), 1 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 223; 62 E. R. 864.

671. Power of sale to trustees of testator—& heirs of survivor—Sale of devisee in trust of survivor—Release by cestuis que trust.—Testator gave a power of sale to two trustees & the survivor, "his heirs, exors. & administrators":—Held: a title dependent on a sale by the devisee in trust of the survivor, was too doubtful to force on a purchaser; & the defect was cured, by the release of all the cestuis que trust to the representatives of the surviving trustee.—MACDONALD v. WALKER (1851), 14 Beav. 556; 51 E. R. 399.

672. Purchaser having means of curing defect.—Deft. purchaser in possession, who, by decree directing an inquiry as to title, was ordered to pay into ct. the interest on his purchase-money; the decree also declaring the purchase-money a lien on the estate:—Held: not entitled to dismiss the bill for specific performance, although the certificate was that pltf. could not show a good title, it appearing on the evidence that deft. had since the purchase, by his own act, acquired the means of curing the defect in the title.—HUME v. POCOCK (1866), L. R. 1 Eq. 662; 11 L. T. 127; 12 Jur. N. S. 223; 14 W. R. 495.

673. Rectification after reference as to title.—A person contracted to sell an estate, who at the time of the contract had no legal or equitable title to it by reason of the alienage of a party through whom he claimed. The purchaser by his own inquiries ascertained the defect of title, but did not, till after some months of negotiation with the vendor repudiate the contract. The vendor then filed his bill for specific performance, & pending the investigation of the title in the master's office, obtained a grant of the estate from the Crown:—Held: he was entitled to a decree.—EYSTON v. SIMONDS (1842), 1 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 608; 11 L. J. Ch. 376; 6 Jur. 817; 62 E. R. 1038.

674.—The purchaser of a house in London having taken various objections to the title, the vendor filed a bill for specific performance, & obtained the usual reference as to title. All the above objections were overruled; but before the certificate had been signed, the purchaser discovered in a long blank wall, which formed one side of the house, & fronted on a street, a stone with an inscription dated in 1776, stating that the wall had been built by & belonged to the East India Co., who had thrown the adjoining ground into the street. It turned out that the wall had been rebuilt in 1831 by the tenant of the house, and the stones set up again; but under what circumstances did not appear. No rent had from that time been paid to the co., nor any acknowledgment of their title given; but their successors in title, on being applied to, claimed the wall as theirs, & the vendor obtained a release from them:—Held: (1) the vendor had not a good title when the bill was filed, for there was no ground for holding a title to have been gained by possession adverse to the East India Co.; (2) the vendor was to blame, as he might, with reasonable diligence, have informed himself of this defect before selling, & therefore, although he had been right on all points which arose before the bill was filed, he ought not to receive costs.

In almost every case it is the duty of a vendor where there is no question but that of title between him & the purchaser, to avail himself of the opportunity of having an immediate reference as to title & so saving the multiplication of unnecessary costs (JAMES, L.J.).—PHILLIPSON v. GIBBON

677. Transfer of lease by unattested will—Lease devolving on heir as special occupant.—Testator devised all his manors, messuages, lands, tenements, tithes, & hereditaments, & all his real estate whatsoever "except what is hereinafter mentioned & devised" to the use of all his children successively in strict settlement. He gave part of his personal estate specifically; & directed the residue to be laid out in land to be settled to the same uses as his real estate; but afterwards by a testamentary paper unattested he disposed of his personal estate otherwise: the heir contracted to sell lease of rectory; & upon a case directed to the Ct. of K. B. on his bill for specific performance the certificate was, that the lease did not pass by the will, but devolved on the heir as special occupant; but the Lord Chancellor considered that title too doubtful to be forced on a purchaser.—SHEFFIELD v. 681. Title under assignment for benefit of creditors.]—A purchaser is not bound to take a doubtful title. Therefore, where the vendors derived title under an assignment made by a party for the benefit of his creditors, in itself an act of bkpcy.:—Held: they could not compel the purchaser to accept the title, without proof that there was no creditor in a situation to sue out a commission against the assignor.—*POTT v. 682. Settlement made by infant.]—Leasehold property given by a will to the separate use of a female infant. On her marriage, a settlement is made under the orders of the ct., she being still an infant, containing certain trusts for sale. The trustees offer the property for sale by auction, & file a bill against the purchaser for a specific performance:—Held: the settlement of the female infant's chattel interest, already secured to her separate use, though made under the orders of the ct., was invalid, & the purchaser not bound to take the title.—*SIMSON v. 683. —.]—A female infant joint tenant can, by covenant in her marriage settlement to settle after-acquired property, effect a severance of her share under the joint tenancy without actual confirmation, non-revocation being enough.

Upon an agreement to purchase such a reversionary share, the husband, who claimed through the settlement, having survived the wife, who died before the property fell into possession, an imperfect abstract of title was delivered, from which it did not appear that the property was touched by the settlement at all, but only that the husband assigned to the trustees all his interest in property coming to him in right of his wife. The purchasers objected to complete, on the ground that there had been no severance of the joint tenancy. A supplemental abstract was then delivered, setting out a clause by which it was agreed that the husband & wife should concur in settling property coming to him in her right. The purchasers, however, still declined to complete, contending (a) that the property was not touched by the settlement; (b) that an infant, by a voidable deed, could not sever a joint tenancy; (c) that there could, on her coming of age, be no confirmation by a married woman of a voidable deed purporting to deal with reversionary property:—Held: the severance was effectual, the settlement not having been revoked by the infant upon her coming of age, & the purchase must therefore be completed, the purchasers, however, to be charged with costs only from the date of the delivery of the supplemental abstract.—*BURNABY v. 684. Mortgage not properly discharged.]—A sum of money having been given to four trustees, one of them lent a part on mtge., & there was notice of the trust on the mtge., which was made to that one trustee only; he subsequently called in the money, which the mtgor. procured from another person, to whom the mtge. was then assigned, & who paid the money to the single trustee alone. The mtgor. afterwards sold the property, & the purchaser objected that the payment of the mtge. money to the one trustee alone was not a good discharge: but the ct. was of opinion that that payment was a good discharge; the true principle being, that no person could be allowed to deal with trust money to the prejudice of the cestui que trust, & the ct. being of opinion that there had not been any such dealing by the vendor in this case; yet, inasmuch as equity will not impose the expenses of litigation upon a purchaser, the ct. refused to decree specific performance, & dismissed the bill.—*HANSON v. It turned out that the estate was vested in an assignee under a previous insolvency. After the master had made his report, upon a reference as to title, the assignee in insolvency offered to concur in the sale:—Held: a good title could be made.—*SIDEBOTHAM v. On a claim filed by the vendor:—Held: the purchaser was not bound to complete the contract without administration being taken out by the vendors to the survivor of the trustees; & though the vendor only undertook to convey the beneficial interest, & not the legal estate, yet the whole beneficial interest was to be assigned, & it could not be ascertained whether the vendor could assign it till there was a personal repre-

690. Covenant by lessee to insure in joint names—Insurance by sub-lessee in name of original lessor.]—A lessee covenanted to insure in the names of himself or the lessor. The lessee subdemised, & the sub-lessee insured in the name of the original lessor, it being unknown whether the original lessee was alive. The lease became vested in trustees for sale, & the purchaser at the sale refused to complete, on the ground of breach of the covenant to insure. On a bill filed by the vendors for specific performance against the purchaser:—Held: there had been a sufficient compliance with the covenant in the original lease, so as to prevent the original lessor from taking advantage of the usual proviso for re-entry, & the purchaser was bound to perform his contract.—*HAVENS v. 693. Title depending on validity of purchase by solicitor from client.]—A title depending on the validity of a purchase by a solr. from his client forced on an unwilling purchaser, on proof of the validity of the transaction, though given in the absence of the client.—SPENCER v. TOPHAM (1856), 22 Beav. 573; 28 L. T. O. S. 56; 2 Jur. 865; 52 E. R. 1229.

Annotation —Apld. Powell v. Browne (1907), 97 L. T. 167.

694. Partition depending on power of sale & exchange.]—A power to sell & exchange merely does not so clearly authorise a partition that the ct. will force on a purchaser a title taken under it. But where a power was to make sale & dispose of or convey in exchange & the powers to revoke & limit new uses for carrying these powers into effect also referred to disposition, & the declaration as to the application of the money to be obtained referred also in terms to partition; it was held that on the whole context there was good power to partition & the title taken under it was a good title.—BRADSHAW v. FANE (1856), 3 Drew. 534; 25 L. J. Ch. 413; 27 L. T. O. S. 25; 2 Jur. N. S. 247; 4 W. R. 422; 61 E. R. 1006.

695. Land conveyed to trustees to secure stock—Sale of land—Uncertain whether proceeds invested in stock.]—C., to pay for an estate he had purchased, borrowed from the trustees & exors. of Y.'s will two large sums of stock in a moiety of which he had a life interest with remainder to his children. The estate was conveyed to him subject to a mtge. to the trustees to secure these two sums of stock. C.'s son on his marriage assigned his share of the interest in the estate to trustees, for himself, his wife & the children of the marriage; a similar settlement was made on the marriage of C.'s daughter. After the death of C. a portion of the estate was sold to pltf., & a moiety of the purchase-money was paid to the trustees of the son's & daughter's marriage settlement in money; but it did not appear that the trustees invested the money they received in stock, & on this estate in 1856 being sold to deft. he objected to the title, contending that he was entitled to have it ascertained that this money did eventually become stock. There were the usual powers for the varying of securities:—Held: the objection was a valid one, & the appeal was dismissed with costs.—PELL v. DE WINTON (1857), 2 De G. & J. 13; 27 L. J. Ch. 230; 30 L. T. O. S. 252; 4 Jur. N. S. 225; 6 W. R. 179; 44 E. R. 892, L. C.

696. Title depending on voluntary settlement.]—Bill by purchaser against the vendor, who had previously executed a voluntary settlement of the property, & against the trustees & cestui que trusts under the settlement to have the settlement declared void & delivered up, & for a specific performance, sustained, the only objection to the title being the voluntary settlement.—DAKING v. WHIMPER (1859), 26 Beav. 568; 53 E. R. 1017.

697. — — —.] In a suit for specific performance against a vendor & those claiming under a voluntary settlement made by him previous to the contract for sale, the ct. refused to declare that the settlement was void under stat. 27 Eliz. c. 4.—FLETCHER v. KETTEMAN (1871), 40 L. J. Ch. 624.

698. Obligation to repair fences doubtful.]—Where in a suit for specific performance it appears that a covenant has been entered into by a former purchaser of the property for himself, his appointees, heirs, & assigns, to the intent that it should run with the land, with the owners & occupiers for the time being of certain adjoining lands, at all times thereafter at his & their expense to make & maintain the boundary fences between the lands, & abutting on a road, afterwards made; the question of the obligation being binding on a future purchaser is too doubtful to admit of the title being forced upon him.—POTTER v. PERRY (1859), 23 J. P. 644; 7 W. R. 182.

699. Notice of lis pendens.]—Notice of a lis pendens is not necessarily notice of an incumbrance. It only amounts to a notice of a claim upon the subject of the suit which may possibly be unfounded. Such a notice affords no ground for resisting specific performance.—BULL v. HUTCHENS (1863), 32 Beav. 615; 2 New Rep. 306; 9 L. T. 716; 9 Jur. N. S. 954; 11 W. R. 866; 55 E. R. 242.

700. Appointment in fraud of power.]—The tenant for life of real estate under a marriage lessor agreeing not to withhold his consent from any assignment to a respectable & responsible person:—Held: the fact that the lessor's consent had not been obtained at the time of the agreement to take an assignment was not enough to enable defts. to resist a claim for specific performance.

Where two distinct properties, held under separate titles, are comprised in one lease, & the reversion of one of them becomes vested in the lessee, this does not extinguish a right of re-entry in respect of the property of which the reversion remains in the lessor; the rules as to severance of reversion by assignment to third parties not being applicable to cases where a portion of the reversion is vested by assignment in the lessee himself.—*HYDE v. 710. Sale of leaseholds—Premises subject to building agreement—What amounts to performance of agreement.—In a suit by the owner of leasehold premises against a purchaser, to enforce the specific performance of a contract to purchase, it appeared that the original lessee had, in 1835, covenanted with the lessors, in or before 1836, to build two houses on the property, worth £100, to the satisfaction of the lessors' surveyor. The lessee, instead of so doing, built, with the sanction of the lessors' surveyor, five houses worth, in the aggregate, more than £400, but no two being worth that sum. The lessors thenceforth received the rents yearly accruing due on the premises:—Held: though the covenant had not been performed modo et forma, yet that it had been substantially performed; and the ct. decreed specific performance.—HUME v. BENTLEY (1852), 5 De G. & Sm. 520; 21 L. J. Ch. 760; 16 Jur. 1109; 61 E. R. 1225.

711. — Purchaser entering into possession—Suit by lessors for rectification of lease—Suspension of completion until suit decided.—A purchaser bought the lease of certain premises under the decree of the ct. & entered into possession & paid the purchase-money into ct. Afterwards the lessors instituted a suit against the original lessee for the purpose of altering the lease in a material particular:—Held: the ct. would not compel the purchaser to complete the purchase until that suit was decided, although he had notice at the time of accepting the title that there were grounds for the lessors' claim.—BENTLEY v. CRAVEN (1853), 17 Beav. 204; 21 L. T. O. S. 215; 1 W. R. 401; 51 E. R. 1011.

712. — Option to purchase—Exercise independent of contract of letting—Forfeiture of lease.—The owner of a plot of ground agreed to grant a lease of it to A. B. as soon as the latter had erected a villa thereon. But it was stipulated, that if A. B. should not perform the agreement on his part, the agreement for a lease was to be void, & that the owner might re-enter. A. B. was to insure in a particular way, & he was to have the option of purchasing the fee within two years. A. B. erected the villa, but insured in the wrong office and in the wrong name:—Held: the contract for a lease was independent of the option to purchase, & notwithstanding the forfeiture of the first, the latter still subsisted, & a specific performance of the contract for sale was decreed.—GREEN v. LOW (1856), 22 Beav. 625; 27 L. T. O. S. 269; 20 J. P. 564; 2 Jur. N. S. 848; 4 W. R. 669; 52 E. R. 1249.

713. General rule.—Specific performance refused, on the ground of representations having been made at the sale on the part of the vendor, of improvements affecting the value of the premises intended by him, which were not carried into effect.—BEAUMONT v. DUKES (1822), Jac. 422; 37 E. R. 910.

714. ——A. agreed to purchase part of an estate on the faith of representations made to him by the vendor's agent, that the vendor would do certain acts on the remainder of the estate. Those acts, however, were not done; in consequence of which the value of the land purchased was considerably diminished. A bill for specific performance, filed by persons claiming under the vendor, was dismissed with costs.—MYERS v. WATSON (1851), 1 Sim. N. S. 523; 61 E. R. 202.

In a suit by a purchaser of two lots for specific performance, the questions arose as to what rights of way he was entitled to have conveyed to him:—Held: the ct. could only act on the footing of the contract, & the purchaser could only claim a right of way over the road adjoining the lots, & directly thence into the public high-

The contract did not refer to any plan, but the agents who signed it for the parties signed at the same time the following memorandum written upon a plan of the property "Plan of property sold to & purchased by D. Oct. 23, 1874. N.B. The property included in the purchase is edged with red colour":—Held: the plan was sufficiently incorporated, & the description in the contract was controlled by it.—*NENE VALLEY DRAINAGE COMRS. v. 722. — Mutual contracts contained in one instrument—Not expressed to be interdependent—Admissibility of evidence that agreement intended to operate as exchange.]—By a written agreement between pltf. & deft., pltf. agreed to sell, & deft. agreed to purchase, upon the terms stated, a certain property called the L. estate; & by the same agreement deft. agreed to sell, & pltf. agreed to purchase, another estate called the H. estate; & it was not expressed that the two contracts were to be dependent on each other. Deft. was eventually unable to make a good title to the H. estates:—Held: pltf. was entitled to a specific performance of the contract as to the L. estate.

Evidence aliunde was not admitted, to show that it was the real intention of the parties that the agreement should take effect on the basis of a mutual exchange.—CROOME v. LEDIARD (1834), 2 My. & K. 251; 3 L. J. Ch. 98; 39 E. R. 940, L. C.; subsequent proceedings (1835), 2 My. & K. 293.

723. Failure to present cheque given by purchaser.]—Where a void cheque was given by purchasers & received by vendors for the consideration money for an estate, & presentation of the cheque was delayed by the vendors until after an event, which never happened, at the request of the authorised agent of the purchasers, & the bankers became bkpt.:—Held: there was no laches in the non-presentation of the cheque, & no payment or equitable satisfaction of the cheque; & further, the vendor was entitled, on a bill filed by him for specific performance of the agreement to a decree for that purpose, & full payment of the consideration money.—*WARD (LORD) v. 724. Sale of land occupied by third party—Purchaser to have possession on day of completion—Vendor unable to give personal occupation.]—Pltf. agreed to sell deft. an orchard, described as being in the "occupation of P.," & that the purchaser should have "possession" on the day appointed for completion:—Held: "possession" did not mean "personal occupation," & a decree for specific performance was made against deft., although pltf. was unable, by reason of P.'s tenancy, to put him in actual occupation of the premises.—LAKE v. DEAN (1860), 28 Beav. 607; 54 E. R. 499.

725. Physical condition of subject-matter—Stipulation that vendor should make road—Part of agreement for sale of land.]—(1) Pltf. agreed to sell, & deft. to purchase a piece of land, upon which deft. agreed to build a residence within eighteen months of the execution of the conveyance:—Held: the nature of the contract did not in itself make time of the essence of the contract.

(2) It was part of the agreement that the vendor should forthwith form & make a road to be used in common by the vendor & deft. Assuming the vendor not to have performed this part of the agreement, it was held not to be a ground for refusing specific performance of the contract.—WELLS v. MAXWELL (No. 1) (1863), 32 Beav. 408; 33 L. J. Ch. 46, n.; 8 L. T. 591, 9 Jur. N. S. 565; 11 W. R. 676; 55 E. R. 160; affd., 33 L. J. Ch. 44; 8 L. T. 713; 9 Jur. N. S. 1021; 11 W. R. 842, L. JJ.

726. — Premises not completed.]—HEMBROW v. TALBOT (1892), 36 Sol. Jo. 712.

727. License not to be affected before completion.]—By an agreement in writing, defts., W. & others, agreed to sell, & pltf., the T. co., agreed to purchase, a freehold house & shop, with the off beer license attached thereto & other premises, at the price of £725; & it was further agreed that if the license or magistrates certificate in respect of the said house & shop should be indorsed or otherwise affected prior to the completion of the purchase, the agreement should at the option of pltf. be at an end, & the deposit returned.

Pltf. postponed the completion of the purchase, & then, without previously consulting the vendors or obtaining any indorsement of the license, or asking the vendors to attend or assist pltf., applied to the magistrates for temporary authority till the next transfer day to carry on the licensed business in the name of their nominee. The magistrates declined to give this temporary authority.

Pltf. claimed to have the contract set aside, & the deposit returned.

Defts. counterclaimed for specific performance of the contract:—Held: license never having been "affected" within the meaning of the contract, & there being no obligation on defts. under the contract to procure such temporary authority from the magistrates, or to do more than join with the purchasers, or authorise them to use their name, in any application to the magistrates, pltf.'s claim failed, & defts. were entitled to specific performance of the contract.—*TADCASTER TOWER BREWERY CO. v. 728. Whether bar to specific performance — Where plaintiff is purchaser.]—An act of bkpcy. & a docket struck, though no commission issued, a sufficient objection to a bill for specific performance of a previous contract for the sale of an estate to pltf.; in a case even, where part of the money had been paid: the sub-contracts for sale of part entered into by pltf.; & defts. had agreed to convey accordingly.—*FRANKLIN v. 729. ——— Certified bankrupt purchasing reversionary interest.]—A bkpt., after obtaining his certificate, contracted with creditors' assignee for the purchase of his reversionary interest in a legacy to which he was entitled under the will of his father-in-law. Shortly after the agreement had been signed, the reversion fell into possession. On the day named in the contract for the payment of the purchase-money the bkpt. tendered the amount to the official assignee, who refused either to receive it or to recognise the contract. Upon a petition by the purchaser:—Held: in the absence of fraud or proof of insufficient value, the contract was valid, & ought to be completed.—Re WARD'S LEGACY (1858), 26 Beav. 207; 28 L. J. 730. ——— Agreement to set off debt of vendor against purchase-money.]—By two contracts dated respectively June 18 & July 2, 1908, debtor agreed to sell for £880 four houses which were subject to a mtge. for £600. Debtor was indebted to the purchaser in the sum of £257 for work done by the purchaser to certain houses, including those agreed to be sold. On July 11, 1908, the purchaser heard for the first time that the debtor had committed an act of bkpcy. on the previous June 30. On Oct. 12, 1908, a receiving order was made against the debtor in a county ct., & adjudication followed. The purchaser, having accepted the title & entered into possession, applied to the county ct. judge, against the trustee in bkpcy. for specific performance of the two contracts & for a declaration that he was entitled to set off the £257 due to him from debtor against the balance of the purchase-money due from him to the debtor after deducting the amount due on the mtge. The county ct. judge held that the purchaser was only entitled to specific performance on payment of the balance of the purchase-money in full to the trustee:—Held: there had been mutual dealings between the debtor & the purchaser within Bkpcy. Act, 1883 (c. 52), s. 38, & the purchaser was therefore entitled to specific performance upon the terms that the £257 due to him from debtor be set off against the balance of the purchase-money.—*Re TAYLOR, Ex p. 732. ———.]—Pltf. & his two partners filed a liquidation petition under which the joint creditors resolved upon a liquidation, appointed a trustee, & granted the debtors their discharge. The separate creditors were summoned but did not attend the meeting. After the discharge, but before the close of the liquidation pltf. acquired a lease of a piece of ground on which he built a house & entered into an agreement to sell it to debt.

Pltf. filed his bill for specific performance of the agreement & debt. demurred:—Held: the separate estate of each partner, as well as the joint estate, vested in the trustee appointed by the joint creditors & the discharge given by the joint creditors did not operate to discharge pltf. or his separate estate, from his separate debts, & therefore pltf. could not make a good title to the property.—*EBBS v. 734. ———.]—Under an agreement for a lease, containing a covenant against alienations, & a proviso for re-entry for breach of the covenant: the lessee, after having been in possession for many years, conveyed all his property to trustees, for the benefit of his creditors, & subsequently a commission of bkpt. issued against him, & he was found bkpt. On the trial of an ejectment at law, it was held that the deed was an act of bkpcy., & void, & that it did not operate as a valid assignment of the lease, & was therefore no forfeiture.

On a bill by the assignees for the specific performance of the agreement: the ct. decreed that the assignees were entitled to a lease, according to the agreement, on personally entering into those covenants, the which bkpt., if solvent, would have bound to enter into.

In decreeing a specific performance, a ct. of equity exercises a discretion, & will not exert its authority for that purpose, if, by so doing, injustice will be done.—POWELL v. LLOYD (1827), 2 Y. & J. 372; 148 E. R. 962.

SUB-SECT. 5.—WAIVER.

736. What constitutes waiver—General rule.]—A landowner entered into an agreement with a railway co. by which the latter agreed to make & maintain so many crossings across the estate of the former as the engineer or surveyor of the landowner should, within one month after the co. obtained possession of the land, direct & notify in writing to the co. or their engineer. No notification in writing of the crossings required was given to the co. or their engineer until nearly three months after the co. obtained possession of the land, & the co. refused to make a certain crossing directed in the certificate or award:—Held: time was of the essence of the contract, & the landowner was not, under the circumstances, entitled to specific performance of the agreement, & the rights of the parties under the agreement having been lost, the ct. had no power to substitute for that agreement an agreement to give all necessary & proper crossings, & the general rights of the landowner under the Railway Acts, to have proper crossings, etc., were impliedly taken away by the private agreement he had made with the co.

A waiver must be an intentional act with knowledge. Where, therefore, there is an agreement to refer to arbn., & it is agreed that the award shall be made within a specified time, & the award is not made until after the expiration of such time, & one of the parties, in ignorance of that fact, takes it up & pays the charges for it, his doing so will not amount to a waiver of the condition as to time specified in the agreement.—*DARNLEY (EARL) v. 737. — Admitting title in action.]—A. contracts with B. to purchase an estate, & after accepting the title, agrees to sell to C., who refuses to complete his purchase on the ground of his having discovered a will made eighty years ago, not set forth in the abstract, but supposed to affect the title. Upon a bill for specific performance by the original vendor against A., who by his answer, which was put in, & the cause set down for hearing, before this discovery was made, admitted the title; qu. if he may be allowed to set up the will as an objection to the title by a supplemental answer. By consent of both parties, a reference was directed to the master to inquire whether a good title could be made, regard being had to the will only.—

RING* (1854), 2 Sm. & G. 43; 65 E. R. 294.

741. — Long possession by purchaser—Vexatious objections to completion.]—Purchaser after long possession & vexatious objections to complete the purchase, held to have waived his right to an investigation of the title, & decreed to perform the agreement specifically, to pay interest at £4 per cent. on the unpaid purchase-money, from the time of taking possession, & to pay the costs of the suit.

744. — Acceptance of supplemental agreement.]—A. became the purchaser of a mansion house & park under conditions of sale, which stated that the whole property was freehold except 8 acres, which were copyhold, but undistinguished except as to not including any of the buildings. The abstract of the title having been delivered & discussions thereon having taken place, which raised difficulties in the way of completing the purchase, a supplemental agreement was entered into, detailing what requisitions as to title, etc., should be complied with. Among these requisitions was one in the following words: "Declaration of identity of lands mentioned in deeds to those now sold":—Held: on a bill filed by the vendor for specific performance, the supplemental agreement was a substitution for the original contract, & A. was not entitled to demand that the vendor should distinguish the freehold from the copyhold parts of the premises so as to show that the latter did not include any of the buildings.—*DAWSON v. to the landlord's consent being obtained & to the premises being taken in their then present condition. The premises were not assignable without the landlord's licence.

On Feb. 1 the title, subject to the licence being obtained, was accepted & the draft assignment approved.

Two days later the landlord served a formal notice of breaches of covenant & a schedule of dilapidations on the vendors, & intimated that her licence to assign would be withheld until the notice was complied with. The vendors at once forwarded the notice & schedule to the purchasers, informed them of the landlord's intimation, & requested them to do the repairs. The purchasers refused to do any repairs & subsequently repudiated the purchase.

The vendors then did the repairs at a cost of £225, obtained the licence to assign, & claimed specific performance of the contract on the footing that the £225 & other outgoings since Feb. 1 must be borne by the purchasers:—Held: the vendors were entitled to the relief they claimed on the following grounds:—(a) By contracting to take the premises in their then present condition the purchasers had assumed liability for & agreed to indemnify the vendors against the cost of any subsequent repairs. (b) Although the £225 was in a sense part of the costs of making the title, it was an expense for which the purchasers had expressly assumed liability, & they were not entitled to prevent the vendors making a title by repudiating this liability. (c) From the date of the contract the vendors in the circumstances held the premises in their dilapidated condition as trustees for the purchasers with a corresponding right of indemnity against the cost of any subsequent repairs or outgoings.—*LOCKHARTS v. 748. Condition to be solely for defendant's benefit—Vendor agreeing not to trade—& giving licence to trade under his name.—A., B., C., & D. traded at E. under the firm of A. & co. A., who lived abroad, gave a power of attorney to B., by which he authorised him to sell, or concur in selling, any of A.'s property by auction, or privately, upon such terms, subject to such conditions, & in such manner as B. should think fit. B., C., & D. agreed to sell the business as a going concern to H., B. signing as attorney for A. as well as on his own behalf. H. agreed to pay the debts of the business, which were estimated at £15,000; if they did not exceed that amount the vendors were to be entitled to a share of profits calculated on £5,000 "deferred capital"; if the debts exceeded £15,000, £5 for every £2 of the excess was to be deducted from the £5,000 deferred capital; the vendors might require H. to take over their deferred capital, paying in cash two-fifths of its nominal amount; if the concern was converted into a limited co., the vendors were to receive shares for their deferred capital; & if the debts were less than £15,000, H.

was to pay the difference in cash at the end of two years. It was agreed that H. might carry on the business under the style of A. & co., & that the vendors should not carry on any like business within fifty miles of E. H. brought an action for specific performance:—Held: assuming the licence to trade under the name of A. & co. & the agreement by the vendors not to trade to be unauthorised by the power of attorney, they were stipulations for the benefit of H. which he might waive, & he having waived them, specific performance ought to be decreed.—*HAWKSLEY v. 749. — Contract subject to preparation of formal document.—A vendor & purchaser signed a memorandum purporting to be an agreement for the sale & purchase of a house at a stated price, "subject to the preparation by the vendor's solr. & completion of a formal contract":—Held: the vendor could not waive that stipulation as being intended for his benefit alone, so as to constitute the rest of the memorandum a final contract enforceable against the purchaser.—LLOYD v. NOWELL, [1895] 2 Ch. 744; 64 L. J. Ch. 744; 73 L. T. 154; 44 W. R. 43; 13 R. 712.

750. Condition securing payment of purchase money to vendor.—A purchasers' offer provided that the purchase-money should be paid as to £250 on completion & as to the balance within two years bearing interest at 5 per cent. & to be secured to the vendor's satisfaction.

The vendor accepted the offer subject to the purchase-money being secured to his satisfaction.

Two months before the date fixed for completion, & while the method of securing the balance of the purchase-money was still in negotiation, the purchasers withdrew their offer.

The vendor sued for specific performance or damages:—Held: the provision for securing the balance of the purchase-money to the vendor's satisfaction did not prevent the offer & acceptance from constituting a binding contract, & in any case, as the provision was solely for the vendor's benefit, he could waive it at the Bar.—MORRELL v. STUDD & MILLINGTON, [1913] 2 Ch. 648; 83 L. J. Ch. 114; 109 L. T. 628; 58 Sol. Jo. 12.
